Fight in Senate Indicated; Reed Assails It as an Alliance

BODY IDENTIFIED AS THAT OF BANDIT, KILLED BY MAN HE HAD LIBERATED

Crowd Throngs Benton, Ark., to See It After Discovery in Woods Where Fellow Convict Shot Tom Slaughter as He Lay by Camp Fire.

ARKANSAS FORGER TELLS OF KILLING

Convict Howard Says He Feared for Own Life as Slaughter Had Planned to Kill the Five Negroes Who Fled With Them.

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 10.—Any doubt that the body of a man found dead in the woods 29 miles from Benton, Ark., this morning, is that of Tom Slaughter, outlaw, who escaped in a spectacular manner from the State prison here Friday morning, was removed late today. A positive identification was made in Benton by Edward Dempsey, son of Warden E. H. Dempsey of the penitentiary, and Burl C. Rotenberry, Little Rock Chief of Police. Both of them recognized the dead man as Slaughter and Chief Rotenberry further added to the identification by means of finger prints.

The body is being held at Benton by Saline County authorities who intend to hold a Coroner's inquest over it Monday.

Killed by His Companion.

Slaughter, a notorious bank robber and slayer, who during his career of crime fought many gun battles with officers, lost his life at the hands of a companion.

The body was lying on its side and gave evidence that the fatal shot had struck him when he was reclining before the camp fire which he and six fellow convicts who escaped from the penitentiary early yesterday morning had built in the woods. There were three bullet wounds in the top of the head, another beside the nose and still others in the neck and in one hand. The face had not been mutilated by bullets, as was reported earlier.

Great throngs crowded into the little town of Benton this afternoon to view the body. The crowd was so dense and so insistent that officers placed the body on a wagon in one of the principal streets and permitted the crowd to file by in pairs.

Convict's Story Corroborated.

The finding of Slaughter's body corroborated the story told by J. C. Howard, the convict who killed the desperado, and set at rest a theory that the story was a fabrication intended to permit Slaughter more leeway in making his escape.

According to Howard's story of the affair, the group of seven men, two white and five negroes, after abandoning the automobile in which they escaped, kept together all day yesterday and on several occasions heard members of the posse searching for them. They eluded all officers, however, and late in the afternoon came to the secluded spot where they camped. Howard said that Slaughter was slightly paler than usual but betrayed no sign of emotion. He occasionally warned the other members of the party that he would kill them if they "slackened."

Howard said he watched his chance and got the promise of Jim Wells and Clifton Taylor, two of the negroes, to "frame up" on Slaughter and the other negroes. The plan was carried out as arranged. The negroes, watching their chance, disarmed the other negroes as they slept. Howard then gave a yell and as Slaughter started to rise to his feet, shot him three times.

Surrendered After Shooting.

The negroes who were not in the plot fled and Howard said he and Wells and Taylor attempted unsuccessfully to capture them. He then

SECRET OF CAPTURED SALOON SAFE STILL REMAINS INVIOLATE

For three days a small safe stood in the basement at police headquarters. A liquid oozed from under its door, and occasionally a policeman was seen to approach, get down on his knees and sniff judiciously. After which he would nod his head with conviction, and communicate his belief to a fellow officer.

But the safe was never opened, and nobody at headquarters can say positively what was in it, for yesterday afternoon, still retaining its secret, it was hauled back to the saloon of John Mooney, 318 Olive street, whence it came.

Inspector Gerk and two officers entered the saloon Thursday just in time, they said, to see the bartender, William Nolte, pouring something from a bottle into two highball glasses on the bar. When Nolte saw them, he put the bottle in the safe and threw the combination. When asked what the bottle contained, he smiled and said: "Tea or something."

Gerk was determined to solve the mystery, so he had the safe hauled to headquarters, and he arrested Nolte. The Prosecuting Attorney laughed when asked to issue a warrant for Nolte. "For what?" he asked. Then Gerk went to Special Assistant United States Attorney-General Dyott. The latter listened, and said the case had no interest for him.

Nolte's attorney went to headquarters yesterday and asked the police if they weren't about ready to return the safe. They said they guessed they were, and they did.

ROBBER KILLED IN HOLDUP "TIPPED OFF" TO THE BANK

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Ok., Dec. 10.—Two men, with revolvers in each hand, late today slipped in at the rear door of the Bank of Cardin, at Cardin, Ok., while three of the bank officials were counting the cash. About $5000 had been counted when the robbers appeared. The bank officers were ordered into the vault. They gave an alarm by pressing a button within the vault.

Officers had been waiting four weeks for the hodlup, having been "tipped off" by a stool pigeon. When the robbers reached the rear door they were commanded to halt and at once opened fire. The officers returned the fire and Clyde Butler of Pitcher, Ok., fell dead. Close beside him John Dunham of Commerce, Ok., fell with three buckshot in his back. He is not expected to live. Dunham is supposed to have been standing at the door to act as a guard. When the third bandit robber encountered the fire of the officers he turned and ran back through the bank and escaped by leaping through a plate glass window. A fourth man may have escaped in a motor car which was seen near the bank. The money was found in a sack near the slain man. The sack contained about $1000 in silver.

THOMAS TO BECOME CIRCUIT CLERK IF GOLDSTEIN QUITS

Governor Announces Choice for Office if the Incumbent Becomes Postmaster Here.

BOTH MEN HAVE MADE CALLS ON EXECUTIVE

Coolness Said to Exist Between Hyde and Some of Factional Chieftains Since Primary.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 10.—Joseph B. Thomas, Republican, City Committeeman from the Twenty-eighth Ward and a former City Supply Commissioner, will be appointed by Gov. Hyde to succeed Circuit Clerk Nat Goldstein of St. Louis in the event Goldstein resigns to become Postmaster of St. Louis, the Governor told the Post-Dispatch correspondent here tonight.

Goldstein has been indorsed by United States Senator Spencer for Postmaster despite opposition from St. Louis clergymen. Republican politicians here friendly to Goldstein say that it is by no means certain that he will take the postmastership, even if it is offered to him, declaring that Goldstein will not resign as Circuit Clerk unless he feels assured that the man who is to succeed him will not make a wholesale housecleaning of the Goldstein clerical force. It is not known what attitude Thomas would take in this regard.

Thomas, however, is known among politicians to harbor a desire to run for Circuit Clerk when that office is contested again. Appointment to fill out an unexpired term would put him in a very advantageous position, in consideration of which he might waive his natural inclination, which probably would be to replace most of the Goldstein contingent, as he and Goldstein usually have been on opposite sides during Republican factional difficulties in city affairs.

Confers With the Governor.

Goldstein had a conference with Hyde here during the past week but made no request of the Governor, Hyde said, although the Postmastership was discussed between them briefly.

Little love has been lost between the two. Coolness which sprang up between Hyde and a number of the Republican factional chieftains in St. Louis, during the Trenton man's spirited "anti-boss" primary crusade in St. Louis, while seeking the Republican nomination for Governor last year, had its effect on Goldstein, who opposed Hyde. After the primary Goldstein lined up, though he never became enthusiastic. His lack of enthusiasm became even more negative after the celebrated raid on the "political poker game" at Claridge Hotel. The Circuit Clerk has not asked for a single appointment at the Governor's hands, being about the only St. Louis Republican leader in that class, although those who have asked for jobs have complained that they have gotten little by their efforts.

Thus Goldstein's wishes are not expected to carry great weight with Hyde. On the other hand, the Governor is under extensive obligations to Thomas, who was the first committeeman in St. Louis openly to support Hyde in his primary campaign, having declared himself at a time when Hyde appeared to have only an outside chance of success. Thomas has been here two or three times to see the Governor, the last time probably two months ago.

They seem to have reached a complete understanding, however, for when Hyde was asked if he had obligated himself in the matter of the circuit clerkship he said, "Yes, if I had to fill that office tomorrow I would appoint Joe Thomas."

Thomas lost out as a city official by supporting Robert Burkham, defeated by Mayor Kiel for the Republican mayoralty nomination in the last city campaign, and being supplanted soon after Kiel's re-election by Gus Oetting, Republican Committeeman from the Second Ward.

MRS. MARIE FUSZ DIES; WOULD HAVE BEEN 106 DEC. 25

Native of Alsace Succumbs at "House on the Hill," Where She Had Been in Bed for Nearly Two Years.

ONE OF THREE SONS SURVIVES AT 82

She Saw Charles X Pass in Triumphal Procession Through Alsace—Lived Under Eight Popes.

Mrs. Marie Reine Fusz, who would have been 106 years old on the coming Christmas day, died last night at the home of her son, Louis Fusz, 1408 East Grand avenue. She had been confined to her bed most of the time in the last two years, and no other cause than the weakness resulting from great age is assigned for her death.

The funeral will be held probably Tuesday morning, at Holy Name Catholic Church, 2039 East Grand avenue, followed by interment in Calvary Cemetery.

Marie Reine Tschaen was born in Hattstatt, Alsace, Dec. 25, 1815, six months after the battle of Waterloo. As a girl, she saw Charles X, last sovereign of the elder line of the House of Bourbon, pass in triumphal procession through Alsace, to cries of "Vive le Roi!" It was also a matter of pride to her that she had lived under the reigns of eight Popes, beginning with Pius VII.

She came in St. Louis in 1853 with her husband, Francis Fusz, a carriage maker, and their three sons. Her husband died in 1871. For a haf century past, Mrs. Fusz lived at the "house on the hill," as the East Grand avenue residence is known.

Louis Fusz, now 82 years old, president of the Regina Flour Mill Co. and a vice president of the Liberty Central Trust Co., is the only survivor of the three sons. There are eight grandchildren and 29 great grandchildren. The grandchildren are the Rev. Father Louis Fusz of the Jesuit order, Firmin Fusz of Webster Groves, Eugene Fusz and Mrs. Vincent Ring of St. Louis, Mrs. C. J. O'Malley of Boston, Mrs. William Moore of Kansas City, and Mrs. M. R. de Penaloza and Mrs. Thomas Thatcher of Ferguson.

Careful as to Her Food.

Through her life, Mrs. Fusz used to relate in recent years, she was careful as to her food, abstaining from things that did not agree with her. Her sight and hearing failed in large part, in the last few years. Her expression, at the time of her centenary celebration, was that she would prefer to be in heaven, as her early friends were all there, but that she was willing to remain with her descendants as long as might be required of her.

PORTO RICANS' QUARREL WITH REILY CLOSED, WEEKS SAYS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Porto Ricans opposed to the administration of Gov. E. Mont Reily have decided not to file formal charges against the Governor and the matter of disaffection in the island is a closed book, so far as the War Department is concerned, Secretary Weeks said today. He added that Gov. Reily would return to Porto Rico as soon as the Governor had completed personal business which required his presence in this country.

Text of 4-Power Treaty to Keep Peace in Pacific and Replacing Anglo-Japanese Pact

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.

THE text of the 4-power treaty laid before the arms conference today follows:

'The United States of America, the British Empire, France and Japan,

'With a view to the preservation of the general peace and the maintenance of their rights in relation to their insular possessions and insular dominions in the regions of the Pacific Ocean;

'Have determined to conclude a treaty to this effect and have appointed as their plenipotentiaries:

'The President of the United States of America,

'His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British dominions beyond the seas, Emperor of India,

'And for the Dominion of Canada,

'For the Commonwealth of Australia,

'For the Dominion of New Zealand,

'For India;

'The President of the French Republic,

'His Majesty the Emperor of Japan;

'Who, having communicated their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE 1.

'The high contracting parties agree as between themselves to respect their rights in relation to their insular possessions and insular dominions in the regions of the Pacific Ocean.

'If there should develop between any of the high contracting parties a controversy arising out of any Pacific question and involving their said rights which is not satisfactorily settled by diplomacy and is likely to affect the harmonious accord now happily subsisting between them, they shall invite the high contracting parties to a joint conference, to which the whole subject will be referred for consideration and adjustment.

ARTICLE 2.

'If the said rights are threatened by the aggressive action of any other Power, the high contracting parties shall communicate with one another fully and frankly, in order to arrive at an understanding as to the most efficient measures to be taken, jointly and separately, to meet the exigencies of the particular situation.

ARTICLE 3.

'This agreement shall remain in force for 10 years from the time it shall take effect and after the expiration of said period it shall continue to be in force subject to the right of any of the high contracting parties to terminate it upon 12 months' notice.

ARTICLE 4.

'This agreement shall be ratified as soon as possible in accordance with the constitutional methods of the high contracting parties and shall take effect on the deposit of ratifications which shall take place at Washington, and thereupon the agreement between Great Britain and Japan, which was concluded at London on July 13, 1911, shall terminate.'

MISSOURIAN SAYS PURPOSE IS HIDDEN; ARTICLE TWO TO BE TARGET FOR ATTACK

Republican Leaders Predict Ratification; Irreconcilables Withhold Comment; Missourian Calls Pact Treacherous.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Indications of opposition in the United States Senate to ratification of the four-Power Pacific treaty developed today within a few hours after the new pact was announced to the world at a plenary session of the armament conference.

Senator Reed, Democrat, of Missouri, one of the irreconcilables in the long and successful fight against the treaty of Versailles, in a formal statement, denounced the new quadruple understanding as "treacherous, treasonable and damnable" predicted that "there would be a fight and a hot one."

Other Senators of the irreconcilable group for the most part withhold comment, but speaking privately indicated an unfriendly attitude toward the treaty, while Senator Reed said he did not expect to make the fight alone. Senator Borah of Idaho, leading Republican irreconcilable, was one of those declining to comment, locking himself in his office with a copy of the document.

Prediction of Approval.

Republicans generally, including most of the leaders, however, predicted ratification of the treaty by an overwhelming vote, and in this prediction to a greater or less extent were joined by a number of Democrats, including leaders on that side of the Senate chamber.

Many Senators on both sides refused to commit themselves, declaring they wished to study the pact, while a considerable proportion of the Senate membership was absent from the capital owing to the week-end recess.

Democratic Senators in a number of instances said they did not attach the importance to the document as a peace measure that was claimed in Republican quarters and described it as "innocuous" and as having a great similarity to the League of Nations covenant. Some Democrats pointed to Article 2 of the new treaty, which binds the signatories if their rights in the Pacific islands "are threatened by the aggressve action of any other Power" to communicate "with one another fully and frankly in order to arrive at an understanding as to the most efficient measures to be taken, jointly or separately, to meet the exigencies of the particular situation."

Compared to Article 10.

This, they said, differed but little from Article 10 of the league covenant, which the Republicans found most objectionable.

Senator Harrison of Mississippi, one of the Democratic spokesmen in the Senate, in his comment, said in this connection:

"The best parts of the treaty are those provisions taken from the League of Nations covenant. If more had been taken, it would have been better."

One of the principal effects of the

AGREEMENT WILL END THE ANGLO-JAPANESE ALLIANCE IF RATIFIED

Brief Document Provides for Adjustment by Conference in Any Dispute Resisting Ordinary Diplomacy.

SENATE ACTION NECESSARY TO MAKE IT EFFECTIVE

Provides for Discussion and Joint Understanding if Rights of Any of Four Powers Are Threatened by Any Outside Nation.

By Charles G. Ross,
The Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The draft of a treaty, which, if ratified, will end the Anglo-Japanese alliance and pave the way to a closer working relationship between this country and Great Britain, was presented to the arms conference at a stirring public session today, and hall-marked with the cordial approval of the four powers concerned—the United States, Great Britain, France and Japan.

Senator Lodge of the American delegation, the Senate majority leader whose bitter personal and political antagonism to former President Wilson prevented the acceptance of the Versailles treaty, read, in his prim New England way, the draft of the new arrangement, and made a speech of high literary quality setting forth its merit as a preventive of wars in the Pacific area.

Lodge is the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, to which the pact, when laid before the Senate, will be referred. As, with all treaties, a two-thirds vote of the Senate will be required for its ratification.

Following the disclosure by Lodge that the secret conference negotiations of the last few days had been brought to a successful and tangible conclusion, assent to the arrangement was given in turn, on behalf of the other signatory Powers, by Rene Viviani of France, Arthur J. Balfour of Great Britain, and Prince Togugawa of Japan. Spokesmen of all the other Powers at the conference table—Italy, Belgium, China, Holland and Portugal—expressed whole-hearted approval of the treaty.

The conference did not take up the question of the naval ratio.

Brief Treaty of Four Sections.

The treaty is simple in the extreme. There are only four sections, all brief. In the first, the four Powers agree to respect one another's rights in relation to their insular possessions and dominions of the Pacific Ocean. It is further agreed that, if any of the powers get into a dispute over a Pacific question that cannot be composed by the ordinary diplomatic methods, they shall summon the other members of the partnership into a conference for adjustment of the controversy.

The second section provides that, if the rights of any of the four Powers are threatened by the aggressive action of any outside nation, they shall consult with one another as to the defensive measures to be taken.

The third section stipulates that the agreement shall remain in force ten years and shall continue in force after that period, subject to the right of any of the four to terminate it on a year's notice.

Finally, it is agreed that the treaty shall be ratified as soon as possible in accordance with the constitutional methods of the four powers, and that, as soon as it is ratified, the Anglo-Japanese alliance shall be ended.

Nubbin in Final Clause.

The nubbin of the treaty is in the final clause relating to the Anglo-Japanese Alliance. Under the four Power agreement, Great Britain and Japan are provided with a method of getting rid of this alliance without embarrassment to either. British statecraft for months, and especially since the recent imperial conference in London, had sought a formula for the graceful abrogation of the alliance, which has become increasingly unpopular in the British dominions, in the United States and in Britain itself. A broad agreement, into which the old alliance should be merged, was the obvious solution of the difficulty. Britain and Japan got together on that proposition, the United States assented on the condition that no element of force should underlie the pact, and, at the last, France was brought in. The negotiations came to fruition in the agreement read to the conference by Senator Lodge.

Lodge spoke in a manner betokening full realization of the importance of his task. His English, as always, was lucid and precise. Cold and formal in the beginning, his tone warmed as he described the beauty and picturesqueness of the islands of the Pacific and rose to an ardent height as he told of the "great experiment" of resting a treaty solely

OPEN SESSION ON PACIFIC TREATY MEMORABLE EVENT OF CONFERENCE

PLENIPOTENTIARIES OF THE INTERESTED NATIONS DWELL ON PACT'S VALUE

Great Decisions Made on the Vital Subject of Peace Both in the Islands of the Pacific and Respecting the Rights of China.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—A new quadruple agreement to preserve peace in the waters of the Pacific was announced to the world today by the United States, Great Britain, Japan and France.

As a consideration of the international realignment, Great Britain and Japan agreed to consign to the scrap heap the Anglo-Japanese alliance, long viewed with apprehension in both America and Asia.

The provisions of the agreement, which is in the form of a ten-year treaty, are confined to the "region of the Pacific Ocean." Under them, the four powers are to respect each other's island possessions and to meet in consultation if a dispute arises or if the rights of any of the four are threatened by any other power.

An announcement of the treaty terms was made at a plenary session of the arms conference by Senator Lodge of the American delegation and was followed by expressions of approval by the plenipotentiaries of Great Britain, France, Japan, Italy, China and Belgium, the Netherlands and Portugal.

Senate Ratification Required.

To be binding on the United States the treaty must be ratified by the Senate, several of whose members held comment tonight pending a further study of the text. Open war was declared on it by some of the "irreconcilables" group of the Versailles treaty fight, but Republican leaders and some Democrats declared ratification was certain.

The signatures of the representatives of the Powers have not yet been affixed to the document, and there is an intimation that they may be withheld until the question of naval ratio has been setled definitely. The naval situation remains unchanged pending word from Tokio, but there is general confidence that approval of the American "5-5-3" plan will be made unanimous in the very near future.

In lieu of signature the principal delegates have put their initials on the official copy of the treaty, and Senator Lodge said tonight this act of affirmation was to be interpreted as meaning that the document has been "approved to all intents and purposes."

The treaty agreement is expected in itself to hasten a decision not only on the naval ratio, but on all the other issues before the arms conference. The delegates believe they are over the top of the hill, and a British spokesman went so far tonight as to characterize today's session as "practically the break-up of the conference" so far as major considerations are concerned.

Contrasted With Covenant.

One of the first impulses of some of the Senators was to compare and contrast the treaty with the League of Nations covenant which so lately was the center of a bitter Senate fight. By an official spokesman of the American delegation, it was pointed out tonight that a feature of the covenant on which the attack was concentrated is omitted from the four-Power peace agreement. In Article 10 of the league the members agreed to "respect and preserve each other's territorial integrity, but in the new treaty the pledge is to "respect" territorial rights in the Pacific.

The omission of the guarantee to "preserve" the integrity of foreign nations is declared by the American delegates to constitute an all-important distinction between an alliance and a compact for peaceful solution of future controversies.

Treaty Accepted by U. S. Subject to Satisfactory Agreement on Yap

In presenting the treaty Senator Lodge said it had been accepted by the United States subject to a satisfactory conclusion of the negotiations now proceeding over the island of Yap, and also with reservations relative to the mandated islands south of the equator. It was explained by American spokesmen later that the attitude of the American Government in respect to mandates had been in no way modified by the treaty.

At its open session today the arms conference also gave formal approval to several of the resolutions on Chinese problems adopted by the Far Eastern Committee of the Whole. The "four points" of Elihu Root, the declaration on extraterritoriality, and the agreements relative to China's neutrality and future treaties affecting her were included in the resolutions thus spread formally on the records of the conference.

Memorable Chapter.

The hour devoted by the conference to the four-Power treaty constituted a memorable chapter in the history of diplomacy. Assembled about the big green table in Continental Hall, flanked by their advisers and by galleries packed with the notables of many nations, the plenipotentiaries expressed in countenance and bearing as well as in spoken words their realization of the import of the new international alignment they had effected.

Senator Lodge's address of presentation was delivered with a deliberation and an emphasis which kept the delegates and spectators hanging on his every word. Rene Viviani, War Premier of France, voicing the devotion of his Government to peace and concord, rose to passages so eloquent that, although he spoke in his native tongue, the hall was swept repeatedly by applause.

In the clear, direct style so strongly characteristic of British oratory, Arthur J. Balfour related why Great Britain was ready to lay aside her alliance with Japan to accept a place in a broader circle of friendly nations, and Prince Tukogawa, speaking for Japan ,summed up in a few sentences of tersely skopen English the gratification of his country at the turn of affairs in the Washington negotiations.

In outlining the scope of the four-Power agreement, the spokesmen of all the participating nations emphasized that it is to apply only to the Pacific Island and in no way to China or any other part of the Asiatic mainland. In the view of some of the American delegates, it applies not only to Hawaii, which American naval authorities always have regarded as a part of the American mainland because it is vortex of the Pacific "defensive triangle," but also to all of the islands which make up the Japanese Empire.

A British spokesman said tonight that although the Japanese group was to be regarded as within the provisions of the treaty, those belonging to the Netherlands were not to be considered as coming under the agreement, because that Government was not a party to it. In the same way, this spokesman said, the minor islands under Chinese sovereignty lay outside the treaty stipulation.

Secretary Hughes' Statement as to Progress on Far East Issues

The fourth plenary session of the arms conference opened at 11 o'clock, with a statement by Secretary Hughes as to progress by the committee of the whole on Far Eastern questions.

The text of Chairman Hughes' opening address at today's session follows:

"Gentlemen, the minutes of the last session have been distributed and corrections have been given to the Secretary-General, and, unless there is objection, it will be assumed that the minutes as thus corrected, stand approved.

"I have the honor to report to the conference that most satisfactory progress has been made in the work of the committee appointed to deal with Pacific and Far Eastern questions. That committee, in accordance with the procedure recommended by the Standing Committee on Program and Procedure, at first permitted a general discussion of the questions before the committee, and then proceeded to take up the topics specially indicated under the head of Pacific and Far Eastern questions in the tentative agenda proposed by the American Government. The first subject considered was China. In the course of the general discussion, most important declarations were made on behalf of the Powers represented, expressing their intention to respect the sovereignty, independence and administrative integrity of China and also to observe as among themselves the principle of fair and equal opportunity.

The Root Principles.

"It seems to the committee advisable that before proceeding to a consideration of the particular matters indicated in the agenda, to which I have referred, this general statement of intention, that is, the sense of the committee with respect to the matters which had been discussed, should be formulaed in a definite statement of principle.

"Accordingly, at the request of the committee, Mr. Root prepared a statement of these principles and the committee in a resolution adopted them, recommending a statement

Japanese in Capital Show Deep Satisfaction With Pacific Treaty

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10. THE linking of the Japanese Empire in a formal agreement with the United States, Great Britain and France appears to have caused satisfaction among Japanese assembled at Washington. Many spokesmen referred feelingly tonight to the new era which opens up for Japan in her relations with the United States, deeming it one of the most epoch-making developments in Japanese history as a World Power.

Admiral Baron Kato, the senior Japanese delegate, said, "I have feelings of deep satisfaction over the arrangement of this treaty."

It is believed among Japanese here that the conclusion of the treaty will be received everywhere in Japan with content, especially among the younger elements who have long been laboring for a concrete understanding with the American Republic.

for formal adoption by the conference.

"There was a general discussion in the committee and as all the delegates to the conference are members of that committee, I assume that it is not desired that there should be a general discussion. But it is important, I take it, that at this opportunity, the first one that has been presented since the action of the committee, the recommendation of the committee should be acted upon by this conference. The resolution adopted by the committee and recommended as I have said, is this:

(Here Chairman Hughes read the Root resolutions).

"It is hardly necessary to point out the great importance of this declaration. It is in truth a charter containing an assurance to China of protection from acts in derogation of her sovereignty and independence and administrative autonomy, and also an assurance that as between the Powers there will be a careful observance of the principle of free and equal opportunity in matters relating to China and that no one will seek special advantages or privileges at the expense of the rights of others.

"As I have said, this has been so fully discussed by the delegates that I assume that all that is necessary is to have your formal assent recorded here in the proceedings of the conference, and while this declaration is a declaration of the Powers other than China, I think it would be quite appropriate, as it is a resolution presented to the conference, to invite China's assent as well, and if this course is agreeable to you, I shall ask for the assent of the Powers to this resolution.

Territorial Integrity.

"I call for the assent of the Powers through their representatives."

"The committee on Pacific and Far Eastern questions, after the adoption of this recommendation, proceeded to deal with the matters listed on the agenda proposed by the American Government.

"The first of these in relation to China were territorial and administrative integrity. As the first principle adopted, fully covered, so far as a general statement could cover it, that matter, the committee proceeded to deal with special instances which were brought to its attention; that is to say, special matters which seemed to call for consideration in the application of this principle. In the course of the discussion before the committee, that is, the general discussion, there had been presented on behalf of China a series of propositions for the consideration of the committee. One of them, the fifth proposition, would remove immediately, or as soon as circumstances could permit, existing limitations upon China's political, jurisdictional and administrative freedom of action. Special instances of the limitations which were in contemplation in the presentation of these propositions were brought to the attention of the committee by the representatives of China.

"The first of these was the subject of extra-territoriality and after a full discussion of that matter a resolution was adopted by the committee, as follows—and may I interrupt here to say that I should like to have it appear in the record that the resolution embodying the four principles, prepared by Mr. Root, as I have stated, was adopted by the committee on Nov. 21, 1921, as that is a date to which reference is made in other action of the committee.

Extraterritoriality.

"The committee, as I said, considered this special action of limitation of the autonomy of China and after a full discussion on Nov. 29, adopted the following resolution with respect to extraterritoriality: (Here Mr. Hughes read the resolution, declaring in principle for the abolition of extraterritoriality, or the closing of foreign courts which have been maintained in China by foreign Powers for the benefit of their nationals there.)

"This resolution has been fully considered and adopted by all the delegates in the committee and I take it, if there is no objection, we are ready to proceed to its formal adoption in this conference."

The assent of the Powers was given and Hughes continued:

"Under the same heading that is, with respect to the limitation on the administrative economy of China, other matters have been considered and are still in the course of discussion. Certain action has been taken by the committee, but I am advised that it is premature to make a report upon those points at this time.

"Following that discussion, there was a further discussion under the same general head of the third proposal made by the representatives of China to the committee, to-wit, that China's rights as a neutral are to be fully respected in future wars to which she is not a party and that was adopted by the full committee."

Assent was then given to this.

Treaty Agreements.

"Then followed a consideration under the same general topic of paragraph 5 of the proposal submitted to the committee by China, as follows:

"'With a view to strengthening mutual confidence and maintaining peace in the Pacific and the Far East, the Powers agree not to conclude between themselves any treaty or agreement directly affecting China or the general peace in these regions, without previously notifying China and giving to her an opportunity to participate.'

"There was a full discussion of the matters involved and a general expression of the desire fully to aid China in the establishment and maintenance of a stable and efficient Government while at the same time it was recognized that the general freedom of the treaty-making power of the respective Governments could not well be limited in matters that were in no sense in derogation of the principles that had been adopted and hence were not in any way of a character to operate adversely to the interests and rights of China. Accordingly, after discussion, the following resolution was adopted for recommendation to this conference:

"'That the Powers attending this conference, hereinafter mentioned, to-wit, the United States of America, Belgium, the British empire, China, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands and Portugal, declare that it is their intention not to enter into any treaty, agreement, arrangement, or understanding either with one another or individually or collectively with any Power or Powers, which would infringe or impair the principles which have been declared by the resolution adopted Nov. 21 by the committee.'

"That being the resolution, first presented here and adopted in this conference, are you ready to give assent to this resolution?"

Questions Still Considered.

"I may add that the discussion of the question relating to China are still in progress in the committee which deals with Pacific and Far Eastern questions, and it is hoped, or perhaps I may venture to express for myself the hope, that these resolutions already adopted and the consideration of other matters that are before the committee and will be brought before this conference, may lead to an appropriate agreement in which all the Powers represented here may participate and to which possibly others may desire to adhere and may have the opportunity to adhere, which will deal generally with questions relating to the Far East and to policies in reference to China and also with respect to the territorial status of the countries concerned. May I hope at least that something of that sort may be the result of our deliberations."

Hughes Presents Lodge.

Secretary Hughes then presented Senator Lodge to the conference, stating that the Senator had a matter to communicate which was not on the agenda but which, Mr. Hughes said, should be brought to the attention of the conference at the first opportunity.

Protracted applause greeted Senator Lodge when he arose to present the four-Power treaty and deliver his address.

When the Senator had finished reading the text of the treaty he was interrupted by more than a minute of applause.

There was more applause when Lodge, proceeding with his speech, said that no military force lurked in the background of the agreement.

Thereafter, the speech repeatedly was interrupted by applause and when Senator Lodge finished the galleries again joined in a wave of handclapping.

Senator Lodge Presents Treaty; "Appeals to Good Faith of Nations"

Senator Lodge presented the treaty to the conference in the following statement: "I should be insensible, indeed, if I did not feel deeply gratified by the opportunity which has come to me to lay before the conference a draft of a treaty the terms of which have been agreed upon by four of the great Powers of the earth in regard to the islands of the Pacific which they control, either as possessions or dominions. I will begin by reading to the conference the treaty, which is both brief and simple, and which, I am sure, is full of meaning and importance to the world's peace.

Reservations Named by Lodge.

"The signing of this treaty," said Senator Lodge, continuing, "is, on the part of the United States, subject to the making of a convention with Japan concerning the status of the Island of Yap and what are termed the mandated islands in the Pacific Ocean, north of the Equator, the negotiations in regard to which are almost concluded, and also to the reservations with respect to what are termed the mandated islands in the Pacific Ocean, south of the Equator.

"It should also be observed that the controversies to which the proposed treaty refers do not embrace questions which, according to principles of international law, lie exclusively within the domestic jurisdiction of the respective Powers.

"The conference will perceive that I spoke correctly when I referred to the terms of the treaty as simple. To put it in a few words, the treaty provides that the four signatory Powers will agree as between themselves to respect their insular possessions and dominions in the regions of the Pacific and that if any controversy should arise as to such rights all the high contracting parties shall be invited to a joint conference looking to the adjustment of such controversy.

"They agree to take similar action in the case of aggression by any other Power upon these insular possessions or dominions. The agreement is to remain in force for 10 years and after ratification under the constitutional methods of the high contracting parties the existing agreement between Great Britain and Japan, which was concluded at London, on July 13, 1911, shall terminate. And that is all.

"Each signer is bound to respect the rights of the others and before taking action in any controversy to consult with them. There is no provision for the use of force to carry out any of the terms of the agreement and no military or naval sanction lurks anywhere in the background or under cover of these plain and direct clauses.

Prevention of War.

"The surest way to prevent war is to remove the causes of war. There is an attempt to remove causes of war over a great area of the globe's surface by reliance upon the good faith and honest intentions of the nations which sign the treaty, solving all differences through the processes of diplomacy and joint consideration and conciliation. No doubt we shall hear it said that the region to which this agreement applies is one most unlikely to give birth to serious disputes and therefore an agreement of this character is of little consequence. History unhappily has shown that there is no corner of the earth so remote or so valueless that it is not capable of giving cause for controversy or even for war between the tribes and the nations of mankind.

"But the islands of the Pacific, although remote from the dwelling places of the mass of humanity, are far from valueless. The islands of the Southwestern Pacific extend over a vast space in that great ocean. They reach from the Marquesas on the east to the Philippines in the west; from the Aleutian Islands on the north nearly to the Antarctic Circle on the south. They are far more numerous than is generally realized. I do not know what the total number is, but I am informed as to the Philippines, and it appears that this group alone contains over 3100 islands, of which 1600 have names.

"We have probably heard of the remark of Robert Louis Stevenson, when on leaving one of the Pacific islands, he was asked how he was going to Samoa. He replied that he should just go out and turn to the left. These islands are, comparatively speaking, so dense that we might describe them in the words of Browning as the 'sprinkled isle, lily on lily that o' lace the sea.'

"And yet the region through which they are scattered is so vast that the isles of Greece and the Aegean Sea, so famous in history and poetry, could easily be lost therein and continue unnoticed except by wandering seamen or stray adventurers. They range from Australia, continental in magnitude, to atolls where there are no dwellers but the builders of the coral reefs, or lonely rocks marking the peaks of mountains which rise up from the ocean's floor through miles of water before they touch the air. To the western and the eastern world alike most of the islands on the Southwestern Pacific are little known. There still lingers about them the charm, so compelling and so fascinating, which an undiscovered country has for the sons of men, who are weary of main traveled roads and the tramped highways of trade and commerce, which cover the surface of the patient earth.

Qualities More Enticing.

"Upon these islands still shines the drama of romance in the stories of Melville and the writings of Robert Louis Stevenson, to whom the South Seas gave both a grave and a monument imperishable as his own is famous; but the Pacific islands are much more than this. They possess certain qualities other than natural beauty and romantic charm, which to many minds are more enticing.

"The larger ones are rich in many ways, fertile in soil and climate and in other forms of riches desired by men, which extend from the untold mineral resources of Australia to the pearls which are brought from the depths of the ocean. There are among them all great areas of forest and of plain, fit for the support and prosperity of civilized man in a word they have a very great material value, largely undeveloped, and where this condition exists the desires of men will enter and conflicting desires have throughout recorded history been breeders of war. Thus far the wastes of the Pacific Ocean, with all the crowding islands, except on the edges of the continents, have not been the scenes of the great war, and not many years have passed since three great nations sent their warships to Samoa because there was a dispute in regard to those distant islands. Therefore an agreement among the nations controlling these islands has a very serious importance to the peace of the world.

Effort to Assure Peace.

"We make the experiment here in this treaty of trying to assure peace in that immense region by trusting the preservation of its tranquility to the good faith of the nations responsible for it. The world has just passed through a war the very memory of which makes us shudder. We all believe deep in our hearts that this hideous destruction of life, this suffering and ruin which still beset us, must not be permitted to come again if we can prevent it. If the nations of the earth are still, in the innermost recesses of their consciousness, planning or dreaming of coming wars and longing for conquests, no treaties of partition and no alliance can stay them; but if, as I firmly hope, the world has learned aright the full lesson from the awful experiences of the great war of 1914, then our surest appeal in order to prevent wars in the future must be to the hearts, the sympathies, the reason and the higher impulses of mankind.

"Such an appeal we make today by this agreement among four great nations. We rely upon their good faith to carry out the terms of this instrument knowing that by so doing they will prevent war should controversies ever arise among them. If this spirit prevails and rules we can have no better support than the faith of nations. For one, I devoutly believe the spirit of the world is such that we can trust to the good faith and the high purposes which the treaty I have laid before you embodies and enshrines. Agreements of this kind I know have often been made before, only to fail. But there has been a far-reaching change in the mental condition of men and women everywhere. That which really counts is the intention of the nations who make the agreement. In this hour of trial and darkness which has followed the war with Germany, the spirit of the world is no longer the same. If we enter upon this agreement, which rests only upon the will and honor of those who sign it, we at least make the great experiment, and appeal to the men and women of the nation to help us sustain it in spirit and in truth."

Viviana and Balfour Speak on Value to World of the Treaty

Then Rene Viviani, in presenting France's position on the new treaty, spoke as follows:

"In the name of the Government of the French republic, whose authority I am borrowing now, and who speaks through my voice, I am glad to bring here, in its full amplitude, without any reticence or any reservations, our full adhesion to the pact that has just been read and which has been followed by such a penetrating and thorough analysis on the part of Senator Lodge.

"Gentlemen, the day after the ratification has been exchanged France will assume all the obligations that fall upon her by virtue of this pact, just as she will exercise the rights that she derives from the agreement. Here, gentlemen, in the midst of the nations that have come to meet here, and I think all nations that are accustomed to honor their signature, I think that I am entitled to say that, when speaking of the agreement, France enjoys a good place here and that she had never declined to stand by her plighted word. And when there has been a question of either standing by her pledged word and honoring her signature, or taking arms, France has not hesitated to seal with the blood of her own children the treaties to which she had appended her name, and she has kept oath.

Value of the Instrument.

"Gentlemen, the political and diplomatic value of the instrument which has just been read, thanks to the very simple summary given by Senator Lodge, has been perfectly understood by you. I think it will be fit to tarry a while and mark here together the full accord of our wills.

"It is understood between the four Powers that as regards the insular possessions and dominions that they will respect the rights of each other; and if on the horizon there should arise any cause of conflict or controversy, a controversy that cannot be settled through the usual channels of diplomacy, they will consult together and they will conciliate. Should any aggression arise on the part of any Power, should real danger threaten the peace of the world or any Power, should real danger threaten the peace of the world in those regions, then the four nations will take counsel together and they will see what is necessary to do owing to the exigencies of the situation. And this agreement is to last 10 years, while the agreement concluded between Great Britain and Japan is to terminate. That is, gentlemen, the juridical scope of the draft treaty which has just been read out, but I think we should be failing to ourselves and to what we owe ourselves, and to you, and especially to the very sumptuous hospitality that we have enjoyed in the United States, if we did not try all together to develop and emphasize great moral value of what I can call an historical date.

"Senator Lodge has shown quite well, that without any naval or military sanctions being provided, or even thought of, it was sufficient that four nations had put their heads together, were animated by the same will to preserve peace; that was sufficient guarantee and protection for the peace of the world.

Heard by Whole World.

"Gentlemen, in this illustrous room, from this high sounding platform, however weak may be the voice of the man who speaks, it will be heard by the whole world. Gentlemen, after having listened to the documents, after having thus proved our willingness to collaborate and co-operate together, I think I am entitled to say that this conference, in which we have had the honor to participate and in which we have been proud to help has fully and entirely succeeded.

"Gentlemen, when we come here we knew that we were taking risks to a certain extent and what risks were these?

"Senator Lodge has just alluded to them, not without certain bitterness. Well, gentlemen, things are what they are and we have got to take things as they are. Since the armistice some of the peoples of the world have been wondering what use there has been in this war and whether any good was ever to come out of it. They have been wondering whether all these sacrifices were to have been made in vain. They have been asking themselves in anxiety, whether really there would be no change in conditions of the civilized world, and they have been wondering whether justice would rise to the height of their noble endeavors. And then this conference was convened.

"Well, the peoples of the world began to say, what will be the outcome of this conference—it is to be another meeting—is it to be another consultation? Is it to end in idle talk? Or is it going to result in either night or light issuing out of this conference?

"Gentlemen, I think the answer has been clearly given, and thanks to the limitation contemplated in naval armaments, thanks to this draft treaty, I think the conference has been a success and that the people of mankind can at last believe the progress of civilization.

The Will to Extend Peace.

"Senator Lodge referred to the Pacific regions being far removed, in far distant parts of the globe, and a wish was expressed that the will of peace should be extended to other parts of the world. Ah, gentlemen, to whom but to the French delegation could these words be more agreeable and sound more welcome? I say this thinking of all the suffering that we have had to go through, having in mind mourning families, the dead who cover our soil, fifteen hundred thousand tombs that are on such bare, barren ground that we wonder if the spring will ever bring flowers enough to enable us to decorate these tombs.

"Gentlemen, when we remember all this there are no words that can be more welcome than the words of peace. We have done everythinng to avoid war. I can personally bear witness to this, as because of untoward circumstances, I happened to be at the head of the French Government when war broke out. I, as head of the Government, assumed the terrible responsibility of ordering the French troops to withdraw within 10 kilometers of our own frontier. I assumed that responsibility of delivering part of my country to the enemy in order to avoid any possible cause of conflict and so that it could not be said that France had been first to open hostilities.

"I took the responsibility to wait until the last moment to order mobilization in a Europe that was shivering and ready in her armor to meet the foe. I waited until the last hour, the last minute. I waited as long as there was a gleam of hope left, as long as there was a hope for peace, and it was only at the last moment, when no human hope was left, that I assumed the responsibility of ordering mobilization; but at last France had to go in, she decided to take a chance and fight not only for her own dignity and independence, but for the liberties of the world and the destinies of civilization.

European Affairs.

"Gentlemen, now we have laid down our arms. Of course, I cannot presume to speak on behalf of other nations, but I feel sure they will be with me and permit me to say that we in Europe do not ask you here in the States to interfere with European affairs. We respect the independence of the United States. We do not presume to ask you to interfere in any way whatever, but, however you judge us, you are free to judge us, and before you judge us, before you express your opinion, we will ask you to listen to us and have a little forbearance.

Must Have Forbearance

"Europe is an old country; it is a war-wearied world, over which 20 centuries of fighting and struggle have passed. It has been stamped hundreds of times in blood and tears, frontiers have been trampled upon, countries have been torn to pieces, and floods of hatred and villainy have been pouring during centuries over that old ground. And to end this there has been a war which has laid whole countries waste and which has destroyed whole expanses of cultivated land. A war, did I say, gentlemen? That is not the right word! You have witnessed, and you have taken a share in a revolution, not a war; that is to say, a 'revolution that crushed forever. I hope, the spirit of militarism and autocracy, and whilst we were crushing the old spirit of domination we were calling to life, we were calling to light and to hope and joy, a number of young nations.

"Gentlemen, these nations have just now been brought into the world, they have been created, and you have helped to create them. They must learn. They do not know yet what it is to be a nation. Therefore, I tell you, you must use a little forbearance, you must be patient.

"How is it possible at once to say, in those troublous regions, in those parts of Europe that are still disturbed, that have not had the time to settle down. How is it possible to say that we shall have, we must have peace, we must establish peace at once?

"Gentlemen, it is impossible to ask for tranquility at once, and more than it is possible to expect that after a storm has troubled the depths of the ocean, the waters will immediately become tranquil and be smooth. So, gentlemen, you must have a little forbearance, as I say. We have I must say, assured more confidence by coming in touch with you and in seeing the men that have been obliged to take arms on our side. The men that not only have been obliged to fight but now are obliged to organize a troubled world.

"Well, these men of whom I am one, here enter their solemn oath to establish peace amongst men, it being understood that peace will prevail in the world when justice has been satisfied."

Address by Balfour

Arthur J. Balfour spoke as follows:

"Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the conference, you have heard an exposition by Senator Lodge of the contents of this treaty. Admirable in its clarity, perfect in its literary form. You have just heard the way in which this treaty strikes a great Frenchman in its world relations. You have heard the views in an eloquent speech by one of the greatest masters of eloquence now living.

"So far as I am concerned, I would most gladly leave the matter in their hands, for I have nothing to add, nothing to add to what they have said upon the general aspects of the treaty. If I rise to occupy your attention for one or two moments, it is not to deal with the treaty in its entirety, but merely to say something about one clause in that treaty in which only my friends from Japan and the British delegation can regard themselves as immediately interested, although I think it touches in truth, and in reality, the interests of the whole world.

"You will all have noticed the clause four provides that when this treaty receives its ratification at the hands of the signatory powers at that moment the treaty between Japan and Great Britain comes to an end. Now, I am perfectly well aware that the treaty between Great Britain and Japan has been the cause of much searchings of heart, of some suspicions, of a good deal of animadversion in important sections of opinion in the United States, and I think that from a historical point of view that attitude may at first cause surprise, for certainly nothing was further from the thoughts of the original framers of the treaty between Japan and Great Britain, than it could touch in the remotest way, either for good or for evil, the interests of the United States. The United States seemed so remote from any subject touched in the original agreement as Chile or Peru.

Smallest Gold Coin, Worth 2 Cents, Minted for League of Nations

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Dec. 10. WHAT is believed to be the smallest modern gold coin in the world has just been minted here. It represents the gold franc on which the budget of the League of Nations is to be calculated.

It is octagonal in form and on one side are engraved the initials "S. D. N. (Societe des Nations). Its weight is .03225805 of a gramme, and is valued at about 2 cents, American money. It is estimated that it would require 13,200 of such coins to make a pound avoirdupois. Sir Herbert Ames, financial director of the League of Nations, has presented a unique specimen of the coin to Eric Drummond, the general secretary.

ELOQUENCE MARKS ADDRESSES IN ASSENT TO NEW TREATY OF THE PACIFIC

4-POWER TREATY EMBRACES OBJECT OF "ARTICLE TEN"

"Article Two" of New Agreement Contains "Moral Obligation" Objected to in League Covenant.

DEMOCRATS ARE COMMITTED ON POINT

Arrangement on Far East Between Powers Likely to Do the Scrapping New Idea in Diplomacy.

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
A Special Washington Corerspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1921.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—History repeats itself in strange ways. After President Wilson attempted to build a League of Nations with article 10 as the "heart" of its covenant and the United States Senate rejected it, another American executive now has negotiated a treaty creating another League of Nations of somewhat restricted scope geographically, but embracing the same objects and with an article 2 which replaces the famous article 10.

After the new treaty specified that the four nations shall respect each others' rights in the Pacific, which means observing the territorial integrity and administrative independence of China, the text of the new article 2 says:

> If the said rights are threatened by the aggressive action of any other Power, the high contracting parties (the United States, Japan, Great Britain and France) shall communicate with one another fully and frankly in order to arrive at an understanding as to the most efficient measures to be taken jointly or separately, to meet the exigencies of the particular situation.

Article 10 of Covenant.

Compare the foregoing with the famous Article 10 of the covenant of the league in the Versailles treaty, which reads as follows:

> The members of the league undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league. In case of any such aggression or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression, the council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled.

The debate in the Senate which defeated the Versailles treaty brought out from the Republican side the objection that Article 10 conveyed a moral obligation to preserve the peace as between the nations signing the treaty. The same obligation now is imposed, moral in character, upon the United States, Japan, Great Britain and France, to see to it that the "aggressive action" of any other Power is met. The obligation is conveyed in the requirement that the Powers communicate with each other "in order to arrive at an understanding as to the most efficient measures to be taken."

Democrats Committed.

This comparison reveals more significantly than anything else the strides which have been made by the Harding administration toward international co-operation, even though the wording of the formula may be different. Senator Borah and some of the irreconcilables may oppose Article 2, but the Democrats who favored Article 10, together with the Republicans under the leadership of Senator Lodge, who now embraces Article 2 without hesitation, will form a strong enough coalition to put the treaty through, though it would not be surprising to see a reservation attached to Article 2 to the effect that the United States assumes no obligation under that article to use military or naval forces unless Congress shall by joint resolution so approve.

But the situation is different today from what it was when Mr. Wilson was President. The Democrats are committed to the idea of Article 10, so they can hardly refuse to accept the new Article 2. Similarly Mr. Harding is not unlikely to agree to such a reservation as he originally voted for and Mr. Lodge sponsored.

John Hay's Principles.

The rights in the Pacific which might be disturbed are mainly the rights of the principal Powers with respect to China. John Hay, the distinguished Secretary of State of the McKinley administration, placed America on record as guaranteeing the territorial integrity and political independence of China and placed the other Powers on record as willing to observe the principle of equal commercial opportunity in the Far East. The principles written by John Hay have been proposed again by Elihu Root as a member of the American delegation, and proclaimed anew.

Secretary Hughes, indeed, read to the plenary session these principles before Lodge announced the text of the treaty, so the connection might be apparent between the four principles which contain the rights that might be subject to dispute in the Far East and a possible aggressive action by any Power. The first of the principles reads as follows:

> "To respect the sovereignty, the independence and the territorial and administrative integrity of China."

This language, together with the provisions of the treaty, especially Article 2, make it incumbent upon the United States, as well as the other Powers, to see to it that China is protected as against external aggression.

Thus the treaty between the four Powers will embrace the agreements previously reached as to the principles that shall govern in the Far East.

Only this time a solemn obligation is entered into requiring the Powers to consult with each other as to "efficient measures" that shall be taken to meet any "aggressive action" by any power. It is interesting to note that these "efficient measures" can be taken "jointly or separately," so that conceivably the United States, Great Britain and France might be allied on one side as against Japan if the latter took any "aggressive action" in the Far East.

AFRICA AND THE ASSOCIATION OF NATIONS.

Copyright, 1921, by The Post-Dispatch (Pulitzer Pub. Co.), The New York World (Press Pub. Co.) and the Chicago Tribune. All rights reserved.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—In a previous paper I wrote of certain "stifled voices" at Washington. There is yet another stifled voice here that I have heard and to speak of it opens up another great group of questions that stand on the way to any effectual organization of world peace through an association of nations. Until we get some provisional decision about this set of issues, the association of nations remains a project in the air.

This stifled voice of which I am now writing is the voice of the colored people. As a novelist—a novelist in my spare time—and as a man very curious by nature about human reactions, the peculiar situations created by "color" in America have always appealed to me. I do not understand why American fiction does not treat of them more frequently.

It is the educated, highly intelligent colored people who get my interest and sympathy. I cannot get up any race feeling about them. I am particularly proud to have known Booker T. Washington and to know Mr. Dubois, and in spite of a great pressure of engagements, I was able to spend two hours last Sunday listening to the proceedings of the Washington Correspondence Club, an organization which battles by letter and interview and appeal against the harsh exclusion from theaters, schools, meetings, restaurants, libraries and the like, that prevails here. I will not discuss here the rights and wrongs of a bar that cuts off from most of the intellectual necessities and conveniences of life many people who would pass as refined and cultivated whites in a European country. I mention this gathering merely to note a very interesting topic upon which I was called to account thereat.

Questioned at Club.

Once or twise in these papers—I do not know if the reader has noted it—I have mentioned the French training of Senegalese troops and the objection felt by other European peoples to their extensive employment in Europe. I was asked at the Correspondence Club whether the objections I had made to this were not "fostering race prejudice" and some interesting exchanges followed. I was inclined to argue that the importation of African negroes into Europe for military purposes was as objectionable as their importation into America for economic services, but some of my hosts, some of the younger men, did not see it in that light. They are warmed towards the French by the notable absence of racial exclusiveness in France and they see the ideals of that epoch-making book, La France Negre, from an entirely different angle. Why not a Black France as big or bigger than White France and a new people who have learnt military discipline, military service and united action from Europe?

"Why not an African Napoleon presently?" said the young man, a little wanting, I thought, in that abject meekness which is the American ideal of colored behavior.

He was imagining, I suppose, something happening in Africa rather after the fashion of the emancipation of Hayti and of great African armies pushing their former rulers back to the sea. But Col. Taylor has recently suggested another possibility, namely that of France finding herself in the grip of a black pretorian guard. It is just conceivable fancy—a pretorian guard, French speaking and ultra patriotic, keeping the French Socialists and pacifists and bolshevists in their proper place.

Europe's Need of Africa.

I do not believe very much in either of these possibilities, nor even in the third possibility of European Powers fighting each other with black armies in Africa, but I do perceive that dreams of a world peace will remain very unsubstantial dreams indeed until we can work out a scheme, or at least general principles of action, for the treatment of Africa between the Sahara and the Zambesi River, a scheme that will give some sort of a quietus to the jealousies and hostilities evoked by the economic and political exploitations of anexed and mandatory territories upon nationalist and competitive lines in this region of the earth. For it seems to be the fact that tropical and sub-tropical Africa has another function in the world than to be the home of the great family of negro peoples. Africa is economically necessary to European civilization as the chief source of vegetables to the native population. European civilization can scarcely get along without these natural resources of Africa.

Now here we are up against a problem entirely different from the problem that arises in the case of India, Indo-China and China, which is the problem of a politically powerless but essentially civilized population which can be trusted to modernize itself and come into line with the existing efficient Powers, if only it is protected from oppressive and disintegrating forces while it adjusts itself. Africa is quite incapable of anything of the sort.

Tribal Barbarism in Africa.

Negro Africa is mainly still in a state of tribal barbarism; in the latter half of the nineteenth century its peoples were in a condition of deepening disorder and misery due to the spread of European diseases and to the raiding of Arab and native adventurers who had obtained possession of modern firearms. The small village communities of tropical Africa were quite unable to stand up against the brigand enterprises of mere bands of ruffians armed with rifles. The scramble for Africa on the part of the European Powers towards the close of the nineteenth century, a scramble largely dictated by economic appetites, did a little to mitigate the miseries and destructions in progress by establishing a sort of order through large areas of Africa, a sort of order that in some regions was scarcely less cruel than the disorders it replaced. But if continuing access to the resources of Africa is to be maintained and if a return to the Arab raider and general chaos and massacre is to be avoided, it is clear that in some form the control of the central parts of Africa by the modern civilized world must continue.

But we must be clear upon one point. If that control is to be maintained, as at present it is maintained, by various European Powers acting independently of one another and competing against one another, in the not very remote future, Central Africa is bound to become a cause of war. Central Africa was one of the great prizes before the German imagination in 1914 and it is now held in a state of unstable equilibrium by the chief European victors in the great war. As they recuperate, the African danger will increase. Africa, next after Eastern Europe and the Near East, is likely to become in the course of a dozen years or so, the chief danger region of the world.

It behooves all those who are dreaming of an organized world peace through an association of nations to keep this African rock ahead in mind and to think out the possible method of linking this great region with the rest of the world in a universal peace scheme.

Three Considerations.

I submit that it is not premature for those who are concerned with the future of our race to consider the necessity of three chief things:

1. The complete abandonment and prohibition now of the enlistment and military use of the African native population.

2. The application of the principle of the open door and equal trading opportunities for all comers in the regions between the Sahara and the Zambesi.

3. A more organized care of the native African population by a tightening up of the existing restrictions upon the arms and drink trades and the development of some sort of elementary education throughout Africa that will give these very various and large still untried peoples a chance of showing what latent abilities they have for self-government and participation in the general human common weal.

For my own part, it seems to me that any real "league of nations," any effective "association of nations," must necessarily supersede the existing "empires" and imperial systems and take over their alien "possessions" and that one commission, embodying the collective will of all the efficient civilized nations of the world, is the only practicable form of security for all those parts of Africa incapable or not yet capable of self-government.

JAPANESE VIEW TREATY AS GREAT ACHIEVEMENT

Delegates Happy Over What They Consider End of Americans' Viewing Them as Fierce Plotters.

By ADACHI KINNOSUKE,
Staff Correspondent of the Jiji Shimpo, Tokio.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—What we had this morning is not a great treaty—great only as a great dramatic curtain raiser to a great world drama. All the important things, in fact—really meaningful things about the four-Power treaty—are outside of it, or around the rim of it.

The first Japanese reactions to it are:

Never mind the treaty. What is important is in the very fact that these four mighty Powers—America, Great Britain, France and Japan—can and did come together in a treaty binding them to work together, at least, even if the treaty steers carefully away from any obligations on the part of them incurring an actual fighting obligation if things take a grave turn. It makes little difference, therefore, if the instrument avoids with a canny care of ancient prophet the cyclone center of turmoil otherwise known as Continental Asia.

"A Proud Achievement."

From the standpoint of Japan's delegation here it is a proud achievement. They have convinced the United States that the Japan of today is not the Japan of the popular American imagination of a few years ago, which pictured our people as a race of fierce creatures sitting up nights concocting all sorts of yellow turmoil with which to turn the waters of the Pacific crimson.

Another thing over which the Japanese headquaters here is singing "Kimi Ka Kio" is the happy and decent burial for the classic Anglo-Japanese alliance, which has been achieved. The Japanese sentiment about the old treaty was pretty much an Oriental versi of the slang of the colored gentle who had a "possum by the tail." For some years—that is to say, since the disappearance of Germany from Kiauchau—Japan has been trying to be polite to England and true to her own feeling about the alliance at one and the same time. It has proved to be pretty near to calling black white at one and the same time.

Japanese Happy.

Now a funeral is a painful rite at best, and a treaty sometimes comes to take on a good deal of human sentiment about it. In fact, it has been said that an old treaty like the Anglo-Japanese alliance is about the only human thing in that mausoleum of ossified personages called the Foreign Office of Japan. That explains the reason for the tremendous sigh of relief which has been rising from the care-laden breasts at the Japanese headquarters on Massachusetts avenue all this afternoon.

Any schoolboy understands that the four-cornered understanding so ably staged by Senator Lodge does not take the place of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

The headlines of all the newspapers of all the civilized countries in the world are about the only ones which are saying so. The alliance covered the storm center of the East.

The present understanding proposes to loaf where the summer never dies and amid the countless rocky points in the Pacific where even the cannibals are being civilized but of their old practices.

But the great international fact in Washington tonight is: The Japanese are happy, the Americans are congratulating everyone, the British are all smiles and so are the rest of the people here. Who can say then that this is not an introduction to a really mighty chapter to come?

GEN. DIAZ SAILS FOR ITALY

Officials Bid Him Farewell While Ship Is Held Half Hour.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Gen. Armando Diaz, Commander in Chief of the Italian armies during the war, who came to this country several weeks ago as the guest of the American Legion, sailed for Italy today on the steamship Giuseppe Verdit.

Before his departure, Gen. Diaz expressed his appreciation of the cordial reception accorded to him by the nation and predicted that the relations between Italy and the United States would grow more and more cordial. Representatives of national, state and city governments joined with officials of the American Legion and diplomatic officials of Italy in bidding him farewell. The ship was delayed for more than 30 minutes while Gen. Diaz and his staff bade them farewell.

Heavy Fire Loss in Film Warehouse.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 10.—Motion picture films valued at thousands of dollars were destroyed by a fire which wrecked the warerooms of the Consolidated Film and Supply Co. here tonight. The Automotive Supply Co. was damaged by the flames, which leaped across the street when the films caught fire. The fire occurred in "Movie Distribution Row," on Commerce street, and the flames soon spread to other film agencies.

VALUE OF PACIFIC TREATY DISCUSSED BY STATESMEN

Open Session on Four-Power Agreement Memorable Event of the Armament Conference.

that the change of opinion is due? I think it is due to the fact that a state of international tension did arise in the Pacific area and I hope I may incidentally say that it is now forever set at rest—but at all events, it did arise in the area of the Pacific Ocean, and critics in the United States began to say to themselves, why is there this treaty between Japan and Great Britain, what further interest does it serve?

"They call to mind the fact that it originally came into being on account of the aggressive attitude taken in Far Eastern affairs by Russia and by Germany, and they asked themselves, is there any further danger from Russia? Is there any further peril to be feared from Germany? And when they answered that question, as, of course, they were obliged to answer it, in the negative, when they perceived that the practical objects for which the Anglo-Japanese alliance was brought into being no longer existed, that history had wiped them out, they said to themselves, why, then, is this treaty continued? May it not in certain conceivable eventualities prove hampering and injurious in case strained relations should become yet more strained?

"I understand that point of view but there is another point of view which I want you to understand and which even those who disagree with it will sympathize with. There is no audience that I would rather appeal to than an American audience on the point I am just going to mention. This treaty, remember, was not a treaty that had to be renewed. It was a treaty that ran until it was formally denounced by one of the two parties to it. It is true that the objects for which the treaty had been created no longer required international attention.

Nearly 20 Years Old.

"But, after all, that treaty or its predecessors has been in existence within a few days of 20 years. It had served a great purpose in two great wars. It had stood the strain of common sacrifices, common anxieties, common efforts, common triumphs.

"When two nations have been united in that fiery ordeal, they cannot at the end of it take off their hats one to the other and politely part as two strangers part who travel together for a few hours in a railway train. Something more, something closer, united them than the mere words of the treaty, and as it were, gratuitously and without a cause to tear up the written contract, although it serves no longer any valid or effective purposes, may lead to misunderstandings in one nation just as much as the maintenance of that treaty has led to misunderstanding in another.

"So that Great Britain found itself between the possibilities of two misunderstandings, a misunderstanding if they retained the treaty, a misunderstanding if they denounced the treaty, and we have long come to the conclusion that the only possible way out of this impasse, the only possible way of removing those suspicions and difficulties which are some of the greatest obstacles to that condition of serene peace which is the only tolerable condition after all, for civilized people, the only solution was that we should annul, merge, destroy, as it were, this ancient and outworn and unnecessary agreement and to replace it by something new, something effective, which should embrace all the Powers concerned in the vast area of the Pacific.

British Frame of Mind.

"I hope at not too great length I have explained the frame of mind in which my Government approached this difficult problem. The solution is one which gives me a satisfaction which I find it difficult, which I find it impossible adequately to express in words.

"It so happens that I was at the head of the British administration which, 20 years ago, brought the first Anglo-Japanese alliances into existence. It so happens that I was at the head of the British administration which brought into existence the entente between the British empire and France, and through all my life I have been a constant, ardent and persistent advocate of intimate and friendly relations between the two great branches of the English-speaking race.

"You may well, therefore, conceive how deep is my satisfaction when I see all these four Powers putting their signature to a treaty which I believe will for all time insure perfect harmony of co-operation between the in the great region with which the treaty deals.

"Mr. Chairman, you told us at the beginning of this part of our meeting, most truly, that this treaty did not strictly come within the four corners of the conference program; and that statement was perfectly accurate, but no man or woman who has listened at this discussion, who has heard Senator Lodge read and comment on the treaty, who has heard M. Viviani's eloquent statement of the effect it has produced on his country; nobody can consider the substance and matter of the treaty itself without seeing that whether or not it be within the strict program of our conference, nothing is more germane to its spirit and nothing that we could possibly have done would better prepare the way for the diminution of naval armament which I hope will be one of our greatest triumphs."

Prince Tokugawa's Address.

Prince Tokugawa then said:

"The terms of the important pact assuring mutual security and friendship have just been made known. It is needless for me to say that all Japan will approve the consummation of this work. Japan will rejoice in this pledge of peace upon the Pacific Ocean.

"As to the Anglo-Japanese agreement, which is soon to terminate, I desire to associate myself with the words of appreciation so ably expressed by our distinguished colleague, Mr. Balfour, with respect to the glorious service which that agreement has done for the preservation of peace and liberty."

Senator Schanzer Speaks.

Senator Schanzer of Italy said:

"The Italian delegation is very much gratified by the public announcement of the agreement reached between the four great Powers having insular possessions in the Pacific Ocean, the agreement which was couteously communicated to us previous to its conclusion.

"Any measure aiming at the creation of guarantees for the safeguard of peace in the world cannot but meet with our fullest consent. The principles involved in the agreement are entirely in accordance with the main lines of policy inspired by the high aim of a peaceful elimination of conflict between nations. We express our full confidence that this great agreement may represent the most firm and lasting guarantees for the safeguarding of peace in the Pacific."

For The Netherlands.

Jonkheer Van Karnebeek, speaking for The Netherlands, said:

"I feel that this is a great meeting. It is a meeting, Mr. Chairman, in which you have been able to produce first results of the fruitful cooperation and international collaboration which you have directed, and you have been able at the same time to explain those results and commend them to a world which is eagerly listening.

"Mr. Chirman, you have referred to the resolutions with respect to China. We have assented, and we have done it in the fullest sympathy with the spirit which has animated the mission. In the second place, public announcement has been made of the treaty which is going to be concluded between the United States of America, the British Empire, France and Japan. Mr. Chairman, I want to seize this opportunity to state that I feel that, in my country, Holland, this treaty will be received with great sympathy, because in that country it will be felt that it constitutes and embodies an endeavor to promote peace and tranquillity in these far-off regions neighboring The Netherlands' possessions.

"We feel there that it is an endeavor which may be a new and a happy beginning in the world's history and for which you, Mr. Chairman, among others, may be sincerely congratulated.

"When now, Mr. Chairman, as a corollary to this treaty, the resolutions concerning China will be entirely incorporated in a general understanding of policy of all the Powers interested, and such understanding will be extended to such matters as you have mentioned in connection with the satus quo in general, then, Mr. Chairman, a great step will have been taken on the ascending road which leads to the restoration of confidence, and restoration of confidence, Mr. Chairman, I believe, is what the world wants and what we are here for."

Minister Sze's Remarks.

Minister Sze, speaking for China said:

"I rise just to add a few words to express our great satisfaction at the work the conference has already accomplished. The Chinese delegation notes with gratification the intention of the Powers agreeing to the draft treaty reported this morning to preserve general peace and to adjust by peaceful means all matters of controversy that may arise between them with reference to their rights in relation to their insular possession and insular dominions in the region of the Pacific.

"The Chinese delegation anticipates, as indicated by our distinguished chairman, that this agreement will be supplemented by a further convention to which all the Powers, including China, will be parties, which will adjust conditions in the Far East upon a basis satisfactory to all the Powers, and which it is hoped will provide for the amicable settlements of any further controversies.

"The Chinese delegation has been greatly impressed by the friendliness in which the discussions in the conference on the proposals by us, as on other matters, has been carried on, and it is convinced that a satisfactory solution can be found for the remaining questions which represent Chinese sovereignty and her aspirations. China upon her part will do what she can to bring this about, and will at all times give her wholeheartedly help in the maintenance of the most friendly relations between herself and the other Powers and thus add to the effort for the preservation of peace in the Pacific and the Far East."

Attitude of Belgium.

Baron de Cartier of Belgium said:

"Gentlemen, I think it is an honor for me to concur with all my heart in the eloquent words which have just fallen from the lips of our honorable colleagues and to have given to this great historical date all its full value and its full bearing."

Hughes' Closing Remarks.

The chairman, Secretary Hughes, then said:

"Gentlemen, we have been dealing with a very simple paper. Probably you would not be able to find an international document couched in more simple or even briefer terms; but we are again reminded that the great things are the simple ones. I firmly believe that when this agreement takes effect we shall have gone further in the direction of securing an enduring peace than by anything that he yet been done.

"May I announce before the adjournment that the general committee on Pacific and Far Eastern questions will resume its sessions on Monday next at 11 o'clock, and, if it is agreeable to you, we shall now adjourn subject to the call of the chair to resume our labors in order that we may accomplish still more in the further achievement of a fair co-operation without derogating from the proper liberty of any nation, and in order to obtain, in all the matters that are within the range of our examination within this conference, the fullest satisfaction of natural and legitimate aspirations, while at the same time we shall conserve the fundamental interests of peace and assure for the future that there will be tranquillity in this war-wearied world."

Four Powers Agree to 10-Year Pacific Treaty

upon the honor and will of the men signing it. The "scholar in politics" was at his best, just as the hard-hitting chairman of the conference, Secretary of State Hughes, had been at his best when he struck out with his battleship-scrapping proposals.

Partly because it lacked the element of surprise, Lodge's speech did not produce the same dramatic effect as Hughes', but there was much fervent applause for the polished sentences, in which he echoed the hope of the world for a lasting peace.

Subject to Reservations.

Lodge began by explaining that the signing of the treaty by the United States was subject to the making of a convention with Japan regarding the island of Yap and to the reservations concerning the mandated islands of the Pacific south of the Equator.

With emphasis, he pointed out that the controversies referred to in the treaty did not include purely domestic questions.

Hitting by inference at the covenant of the League of Nations, he stressed the fact that there was nowhere in the treaty any provision for the use of force to carry out its agreements. Applause followed this pronouncement.

From his word picture of the Pacific islands, Lodge passed to a further discussion of the treaty, declaring that in it the nations were making the experiment of trying to assure peace to an immense region "by trusting the preservation of its tranquillity to the good faith of the nations responsible for it." The Senator had warmed to his task and had carried the crowd with him. The applause at this point came in great volume, as it did again when he declared that the suffering and ruin of war "must not be permitted to come again if we can prevent it."

Lodge was paid a considerable tribute as he sat down.

Addresses by Popular Figures.

Rene Viviani, head of the French delegation, arose amid enthusiastic hand-clapping. The audience was expecting an oratorical treat, and it was not disappointed. What orators these Frenchmen are! First there was Briand, with his rich tones, modulated to suit any mood, and his vivid gestures. And today there was Viviani. He spoke with fiery eloquence. Those who knew French applauded his sentiments and his oratory, and those who did not know French—the large majority—applauded his oratory. His gestures were forceful, yet wonderfully graceful. His features, mobile as an actor's, reflected his changing thought. No greater contrast in public speaking could be imagined than that between the precise formalism of Senator Lodge and the warm emotionalism of Viviani. He declared that "France gladly entered the treaty."

Arthur J. Balfour of Great Britain, one of the most popular figures at the conference, was received as usual with enthusiasm. He spoke with his customary grace and charm. An artist, as always, he began by praising the admirable clarity and the literary perfection of Lodge's address and the masterful oratory of Viviani. Balfour said he was aware the matter of the Anglo-Japanese alliance had been cause of suspicion in the United States, though he could say for the framers of it that nothing was further from their thoughts than that the alliance should touch the United States in the remotest way. He had always been a strong advocate of the most friendly relations between the two great branches of the English-speaking races. He had to halt for the applause which swept over the hall at this summing up.

"You see, therefore," he continued, "how deep is my gratification when I see all four of the great Powers putting their names to a treaty which I firmly believe will assure peace for all time in the region with which it deals. Nothing could have better prepared the way for a diminution of naval armaments."

American Delegates Smile.

Prince Tokugawa of Japan acted as spokesman of his delegation in place of Admiral Baron Kato. He read a brief statement in English, expressing gratification at the agreement. The spokesmen of the five Powers not parties to the treaty then voted in turn their congratulations on the happy outcome of the negotiations and approval of the terms of the pact. Especially interesting was the statement of Dr. Alfred Sze of China, who expressed "great satisfaction" with the work of the conference to date. He supposed, he said, that the treaty would be supplemented with other conventions to which all the Powers interested in the Far East, including China, would be parties. He was convinced that satisfactory solutions would be found for the remaining questions affecting China's sovereignty and aspirations.

The faces of the American delegates were wreathed in smiles as the messages of good will poured in from the other nations. His countenance beaming, Chairman Hughes wound up the proceedings with a brief speech calling attention to the simple character of the treaty. He said he doubted whether any diplomatic document of such great import had even been couched in such simple terms.

"I firmly believe," he said, "that when this great agreement takes effect, we shall have gone further in securing an enduring peace than by anything that has yet been done."

Then, with a look like that of a genial schoolmaster at his pupils, he smilingly admonished his colleagues that they would have to "continue their labors." The session would adjourn, he said, subject to the call of the chairman, so that work might go on in the committees to assure future tranquility to a "war weary world."

Senator Lodge said that he did not believe the treaty would be transmitted to the Senate until after the conference was ended. He added that, although only initialed by the heads of the four Powers' delegations, it was "approved to all intents and purposes."

Symphony Program Calls for Agonizing Tune—Vaccination

Orchestra Must Rehearse Jenner's Masterpiece Before Next Kansas City Trip.

Members of the Symphony Orchestra will be required this week to rehearse Jenners' lacerating masterpiece, entitled vaccination. Jenner was the artist who composed that well-known serum. The orchestra members will mingle in their veins the inspiring fires of Chopin and cowpox and there will be sore limbs around the Odeon.

The reason for this incursion of things surgical into the field of things musical is the State Board of Health's order that all railroad passengers must show a certificate of vaccination. The orchestra has an engagement to play at Kansas City Dec. 29 and 30, and many of them have not been vaccinated, including Conductor Ganz.

A nice problem is presented by this situation. It is no secret that vaccination often results in sore arms, and arms are very essential accessories of violinists, drummers and the like. In the case of the conductor, the effect would be still more marked.

General Manager Gaines said yesterday that there was some talk of taking the operation in the leg, and he thought that probably would be done. As he travels with the orchestra, he took his own dose Friday. There are 81 members in the orchestra, and a large percentage of them probably will have to be inoculated, he said. It probably will take place Wednesday or Thursday.

Gaines remarked that, happily, no member of the organization would be in the predicament of a certain famous prima donna, who told her physician that she wanted the scar where it wouldn't show. After witnessing her performances in "Aphrodite" and "Thais," the doctor suggested that she swallow the serum.

ROBBER, HAND IN POCKET, BACKS FROM VICTIMS INTO POLICEMAN

After holding up the saloon of Alex Mark, 1727 O'Fallon street, at 8 o'clock last night, a highwayman backed out of the place and into the arms of Patrolman Kelp, who was passing. Mark, his bartender and a customer reported they had been robbed of a total of $17.95.

At the Carr Street Police Station the prisoner said he was William A. Deering, 26 years old, of 1805 O'Fallon street, a bread wagon driver. He had $17.95 in his pocket and no revolver. He had frightened his victims into putting up their hands by holding his right hand on his hip pocket.

While being registered at the station Deering tried to choke himself with his necktie and then asked the Desk Sergeant for a revolver, saying that he wanted to "end it all." He was sent to the city hospital for observation.

ARKANSAS CABIN AND CITY HOME IN STRUGGLE FOR GIRL

Attempt to Kidnap Nancy McCandless Indicates Parents' Effort to Win Child From Benefactors.

PETITION FOR HER ADOPTION PENDING

Doctor and Wife Brought Child, Whose Real Name Is Thelma McNeely, Here 9 Years Ago to Educate.

Once more the hand of Fate is holding the balance, with a little Arkansas "lean-to" cabin on one side and a comfortable, if not luxurious, St. Louis home on the other for 12-year-old Thelma McNeely, known for the last nine years as Nancy McCandless, foster child of Dr. William A. McCandless and his wife, of 5056 Westminster place.

When the scales of choice were tipped the last time the heavier weight was found on the McCandless side. The child, then 4 years old, chose to make her home with her St. Louis benefactors. Recent events, including an attempt to kidnap the child last Friday, have indicated that an effort is being made to swing the balance to the McNeely side and that parental affection is to be pitted against the beneficence of the child's foster parents.

Adoption Papers Sought.

To strengthen their hold upon the girl for whom they have done so much in the way of education and training, Dr. McCandless and his wife yesterday filed a petition in the Juvenile Court for adoption papers. Judge Garesche gave them temporary legal custody of the child, which will prevent even their parents from taking her from her foster parents until the court acts upon the adoption petition.

Mrs. McCandless and her daughter, who later became Mrs. John P. Thomas, were on a vacation in Northern Arkansas in the summer of 1912 when they first set eyes on little Thelma McNeely, not quite 4 years old, one of eight children of Joseph McNeely, who had his large family crowded into a little cabin at Mountain Valley Springs. The child's beauty made it seem to the kind-hearted women that it would be a pity to leave so fair a flower in so unpromising an environment. They stopped at the little cabin and talked with the child's parents.

Agreed to "Think It Over."

Joe McNeely and his wife listened but said little while Mrs. McCandless and her daughter pleaded for permission to bring the child to St. Louis and give her the advantages of a city education and training. After much persuasion Joe said he would "think about it."

After their return to St. Louis Mrs. McCandless and her daughter kept up a correspondence with the McNeelys. After several months the parents consented that Thelma come to St. Louis for a visit to the McCandless home.

When she arrived here she was a shy little "mountain girl" who gazed with wide-eyed astonishment at such unheard-of things as street cars, automobiles and "store clothes." Ten weeks at the McCandless home worked a wonderful transformation—so wonderful that Mrs. McCandless felt that it would be the best possible argument in winning over her parents to permitting her to be a "city girl" instead of a "mountain gal."

Child Allowed to Choose.

When the child returned to the Arkansas "lean-to" cabin her mother scarcely knew her. Though maternal instinct was strong, she saw the advantage of permitting the child to remain with her foster parents and said she would give her consent if her husband would. Joe McNeely was slower to yield. At his suggestion the child was left there for the summer, it being agreed that she herself should choose whether she would stay with her parents or return to the McCandless home.

At first the child seemed delighted to be back among the Arkansas hills with the seven other McNeely children, but in time there came a longing for the city home and she made her choice. It was a happy day in the McCandless household when a letter came to tell shem that Thelma had chosen to return to the city. It was not long until neighbors of the McCandless family again saw the pretty little girl again wearing store clothes of fine quality and riding her velocipede on the broad sidewalks of Westminster place.

Dream Almost Realized.

Now her grade school education is almost completed. The ways of the kindly and cultured McCandless family are her ways. Mrs. McCandless who has trained her with a mother's care has almost realized a dream of earlier days when the tipping of the balance on the "lean to" side threatens to shatter that vision. In 1913 Mrs. McCandless said to a Post-Dispatch reporter: "My dream is to educate the child so that when she is a young woman she can go back among her own hill people and give them the advantages which they now lack. I think that would be a great achievement. When her father sees the wonderful improvement in her condition I am sure he will let me adopt her. I would so like to have her with me until she is qualified to go back and lead her people to the light."

This dream was rudely disturbed by the attempted abduction of the child, a significant feature of which was that the automobile used in the attempt had an Arkansas State license and was covered with mud as though it had made a long journey over bad roads. As has been told the child was on her way to the Eugene Field School when the muddy automobile, with three men in it drove up to the curb. One man, carrying a revolver, pointed the weapon at the girl and tried to force her into the automobile. A passerby overpowered this man, compelling him to release the girl. The man with the revolver jumped into the automobile and he and his companions escaped in the machine.

Family Name Revealed.

In their petition for adoption papers, Dr. McCandless and his wife yesterday revealed the family name of the girl for the first time and asserted that the parents for at least two years had "wilfully abandoned and neglected to provide proper care for their daughter." They asserted that the conditions in the Arkansas hill home were unsuitable for the rearing and education of the child and recited that they had taken her into their home life and were able and willing to give her such training as would make her a refined and educated woman.

Dr. McCandless said yesterday it was still the intention of him and his wife to have Thelma's education finished under their tutelage so that the girl may return to her people in Arkansas if she so wishes and give the people of the hills the benefit of her knowledge.

Jake Hamon's Widow to Be Married to Chicagoan Next Month

MRS. GEORGIA P. HAMON.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—After decisive statements, made only a few weeks ago, that she never would marry again unless she happened to fall in love with a man "so homely that other women would pay no attention to him," Mrs. Georgia P. Hamon, widow of Jake Hamon, millionaire Oklahoma oil man and politician, who was fatally shot by Clara Smith Hamon, is to wed again, it was announced today.

The man is William L. Rohrer, retired Chicago banker and patron of art and music. And he is not homely.

"If I marry again, my husband will have to be a man who likes his slippers and the fireside at night," Mrs. Hamon had said. "And he must be homely. I've had one experience with a handsome man. I'd rather have a disfigured husband than a handsome one."

The wedding will be early in January, it was said today. Rohrer met Mrs. Hamon through a mutual friend less than a year ago. Two months ago it was rumored that Rohrer had called on President Harding at the White House, accompanied by "an attractive widow and her daughter." It was only recently learned that the "attractive widow" was Mrs. Hamon.

Rohrer is a member of the Illinois Athletic Club, the Chicago Yacht Club, the Hamilton Club and others.

REED DENOUNCES TREATY AND SAYS HE WILL FIGHT IT

treaty, both Republican and Democrats agreed, would be its termination of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

Senator Reed contended that the treaty was an alliance and gave the United States only one of four votes and pledged the United States to make war, if necessary, in support of British, Japanese or French interests in the Pacific.

"An Alliance," Says Reed.

"The real purpose of the treaty is cunningly masked by fine phrases," Senator Reed declared. "It is a verbal photograph of Elihu Root, but notwithstanding its sugar coating, it is nothing more or less than a quadruple alliance between Great Britain, France, Japan and the United States by which they mutually bind each other to exert their joint power for the control of the Pacific and for the maintenance of the rights of each in their insular possessions and insular dominions in the region of the Pacific Ocean.'

"If we sign this treaty we bind ourselves to go to the assistance of Japan, Great Britain and France in the event that their insular dominions in the region of the Pacific are threatened. I have quoted from the preamble, but the purpose is made plain by Article II. That article plainly means that these Powers will assemble and will agree on the methods to be employed, which, of course, means that they will jointly go to war, if war is necessary, or by their combined power of threats intimidate other nations.

"It is not only an entangling alliance, but it is an alliance which entangles us in the Orient, compels the United States to support Japanese or English or French claims if the majority of the four Powers shall so determine. It is an entangling alliance against our friends, the Chinese, and against our friends, the Russians. It has all the iniquities of Article X of the League of Nations covenant, and none of its virtues, if indeed that article possessed any virtues.

"Never Will Consent."

"So far as I am concerned, I will never give my consent to submit any question vital to the United States to the arbitrament of a tribunal in which we have one vote out of four, particularly when all of the foreign Powers are likely to have interests in common and those interests inimical to the United States. Moreover, I will never give my consent that the vote of Japan shall ever at any time determine an American policy. Above everything, I can never give my consent to a treaty by which three foreign Powers, out-voting the United States, can call upon us to sacrifice the blood of our sons and our treasures in controversies thousands of miles from our shores.

"The proposed treaty is, in my judgment, treacherous, treasonable and damnable. It will be repudiated by the American people when it is understood. This conference was called for the alleged purpose of agreeing upon limitation of armaments, and, therefore, met with the good will of all lovers of peace and of ambition, but it has hatched an adder's egg. If it is sanctioned by President Harding, then he has repudiated all his public declarations during the campaign. The American people in due course will know how to deal with that kind of perfidy."

Sterling Sees Ratification.

Senator Sterling, Republican, of South Dakota, was one of those who predicted the vote for ratification would be "overwhelming."

"The treaty marks a great step forward," he said. "It does not provide for an alliance and does not cripple us. We have removed considerable danger by entry into this treaty because our insular possessions might become subjects of serious disputes."

Senator New, Indiana, a Republican member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said that the treaty was a "most complete and satisfactory assurance of peace and the greatest security of further economic stability that could have been devised."

"It leaves nothing to be desired," Senator New added. "It is a treaty which does not obligate us to mix in some one else's quarrels, but it precludes serious disagreements among the nations involved as far as words and good faith can guarantee anything."

Other Comment.

Senator Norris, Republican, of Nebraska, said he did not "attach as much importance to it as Secretary Hughes does, yet I think it is a very valuable step toward peace."

Senator Shields, Tennessee, a Democratic "irreconcilable" on the Foreign Relations Committee, said he was not prepared to discuss the treaty's merits or demerits, but favored an "adjustment of controversies between any nations interested in China and the Far East."

"I do not favor a political alliance in violation of the traditional policy of the United States against entangling alliances or interference in the diplomatic affairs of other nations," Shields added.

Senator Jones, Republican, of Washington, praised the treaty as "a great achievement which will be very effective in making for peace in the Pacific."

ADDRESS ON COST ACCOUNTING

W. L. Churchill to Speak Before Furniture Board of Trade.

An address on cost accounting will be delivered tomorrow night before the St. Louis Furniture Board of Trade, a department of the Chamber of Commerce, at the American Annex, by W. L. Churchill, industrial engineer, of New York City, Government special adviser and instructor on shipbuilding during the war, and, prior to the war, cost reduction expert for the Guggenheims in the Klondike.

As the prices of manufactured articles come down, manufacturers now keeping track of costs by methods which involve the collection of cost data, by the employment of time tickets and other shop documents, must abandon such costly practices, according to Churchill, who advocates the establishment of the costs for each article once for all time, unless the method of manufacture should be changed. Churchill's subject will be on the necessity of knowing costs and the ease with which costs can be known by the use of engineering principles.

EMMA GOLDMAN AND BERKMAN QUIT RUSSIA

Will Travel in Europe, and Hope Eventually to Fight for Citizenship in U. S.

By the Associated Press.

RIGA, Dec. 10.—Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman, whose presence in Riga became known yesterday, today told the Associated Press correspondent they were "not going to America immediately," but hoped to travel in Europe soon.

They said they hoped ultimately to reach the United States and fight in the Supreme Court to establish their American citizenship. (They were both deported to Russia from the United States in the winter of 1919.)

"I am not returning to the United States as a prodigal daughter throwing herself upon its mercy," said Miss Goldman. "While in some cases I have disagreed with the soviet government, my stay in Russia has only served to convince me that I have always been right, and that anarchy is the only sound system."

Still "Loves America."

Miss Goldman said she still loved America, as she always had loved it. She said she was making no comparison between Russia and America, but she announced emphatically she was "not going back to Russia." When asked why, her only answer was: "Because America is my country."

She said she wanted to return whenever public opinion had changed sufficiently to give her a chance to fight in the high courts for her citizenship. She said she was writing a book of Russia, which she hoped would present fairly the Russian situation.

Miss Goldman said she was traveling under her own name on a Russian passport, as all her American documents had been taken away from her before she was deported and also because she did not want to cause complications. She declined to reveal her immediate destination, but it was understood that she hoped to go to Berlin.

No Hope of Quick Return.

The fact that Berkman also had left Russia became known only when Miss Goldman herself announced that he was with her. She was visibly surprised at the discovery of her whereabouts and she jumped like a startled deer when the correspondent rapped on her door and addressed her in English. She indicated she had no hope of being permitted to return to America for a long time.

"I don't want to be interviewed," she said, "but one thing you can say is that all the purported interviews quoting me while I was in Russia as being ready to return penitent to America are false. I have fought for my principles all my life and my stay in Russia has further convinced me that there is too much Government everywhere."

SCANDINAVIANS DIVIDE THE NOBEL PEACE PRIZE

Premier Branting of Sweden and Christian Lange of Norway Recipients.

By the Associated Press.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, Dec. 10.—The Nobel Peace Prize for 1921, it was officially announced today, has been divided equally between Hjalmar Branting, Premier of Sweden, and Christian L. Lange of Norway, secretary of the Inter-Parliamentary Union.

The prize was handed personally to Christian L. Lange of Norway and to the Swedish Minister in behalf of Premier Branting at the Nobel Institute in the presence of the King today. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the whole gathering rose while the chairman alluted to the agreement between Great Britain and Ireland as a most gratifying sign of the growth of the peace idea.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 10.—A solemn ceremony was held today at the musical academy when King Gustave awarded Nobel prizes in literature and chemistry to Anatole France, noted French author, and Prof. Walther Nernest of the University of Berlin, respectively. The awarding took place in the presence of a brilliant gathering, representative of art, literature and politics.

The French and German prize winners met and greeted each other in a most cordial manner. The presentation ceremony was followed by a banquet at which Premier Hjalmar Branting of Sweden presided. Announcement wsa made today at Christiania that Premier Branting had shared honors with Christian L. Lange of Norway in the 1921 Nobel peace prize.

King Gustave will give a state banquet tomorrow at the Royal palace in honor of the winners of the prizes bestowed today.

Hjalmar Branting, Swedish Socialist leader and prominent in international Socialist activities for many years, has been prominent in the disarmament movement since the close of the world war. At both the 1920 and 1921 sessions of the League of Nations assembly, he was chairman of the assembly Committee on Disarmament and last March was appointed a member of the League Council's Commission on Armaments, headed by Rene Viviani of France.

Branting, who is 61 years old, has throughout his political career been a member of the Socialist party of Sweden and for a long time its leader. He was active in Paris during the peace conference as a strong advocate of peace on the lines of Woodrow Wilson's 14 points.

Christian Lange, born in Norway in 1869, was made general secretary of the Inter-Parliamentary Union in 1909. He was the Norwegian representative at the second peace conference at The Hague in 1907, and is the author of many volumes and articles in advocacy of the peace movement.

When the question of awarding the Nobel Peace Prize for 1920, ultimately given to Woodrow Wilson, was under discussion, M. Lange was mentioned as a candidate for the prize. As a representative of Norway at the last meeting of the League of Nations Assembly he created a stir by a severe criticism of the inaction of the League Council on Disarmament in a speech which praised the calling of the Washington conference by President Harding.

LOW LEASE RATE FOR ARMY BASES OPPOSED

Resolution Adopted by American Warehousemen's Association at Convention Here.

A resolution opposing any action by the War Department in leasing the army bases to municipalities or other interests "for any purpose whatsoever at less than a reasonable rental measured by prevailing commercial rental rates" was adopted by the American Warehousemen's Association at the closing session of its convention yesterday at Hotel Statler.

It is the contention of the public warehouse industry that if the War Department should throw open the great port and interior army bases for storage purposes, a situation would be created which would involve unfair warehousing competition by municipalities or other interests leasing the space. The prevailing commercial rental rates of public warehouses were some time ago filed with the War Department for its information and guidance.

Leases or contracts affecting the army bases, the resolution adopted today declares, would be "contrary to public policy and good business principles and injurious to legitimate private enterprises that have fixed investments to maintain or rentals to pay" unless the tariffs charged at the bases compete fairly with prevailing rates for storage.

The resolution, which goes to the Secretary of War, suggests that the Government retain the army warehouses for housing Government departments, and that certainly the American Warehousemen's Association be given a hearing before any of the space be leased.

The association re-elected W. W. Morse, Minneapolis, as president; Gardner Poole, Boston, was elected vice president; Clarence A. Aspinwall, Washington, D. C., was re-elected treasurer, and Charles L. Criss, Pittsburg, general secretary.

Escaped Bandit's Body Found and Identified

returned to the fire, he and the negroes gathered all the pistols they could find and went to the farm house where they surrendered last night.

One of the negroes, Charles Joens, who fled when Slaughter was killed, was badly wounded, according to Howard. Possemen today were unable to find him and no trace of him or the other two negroes, Jack Buster and Willis Cannon, could be found.

Slaughter's death brings to a close a life of crime that started when he was 14 years old. At this time he was sentenced to the Arkansas reform school for grand larceny. His record since then contains a long list of bank robberies, prison sentences, escapes from prison and at least two killings.

Sentenced for Life Year Ago.

The desperado was sentenced for life to the Arkansas penitentiary a little more than a year ago for the murder of Deputy Sheriff Row Brown of Hot Springs. He was sent to the State prison farm at Tucker and in a spectacular attempt to escape last September, shot and killed Bliss Adkisson, a trusty guard. He was sentenced recently to be electrocuted and his execution date set for Dec. 16. He was given 60 days in which to appeal to the Supreme Court, however, and his attorney had stated that an appeal would be taken. This action would automatically have held up the electrocution.

Howard, the man who killed Slaughter, is 25 years old. He is serving a three-year sentence for forgery on conviction at Hot Springs where he is alleged to have drawn travel pay from the railroad by which he was employed by means of forged passes. He once was made a trusty but was suspected of stealing clothes from the commissary with the idea of selling it and was reduced.

CONVICT'S STORY OF HOW HE KILLED NOTORIOUS ROBBER

Tried to Capture Slaughter Before Shooting Him, He Says After Surrender.

By Long-Distance Telephone to the Post-Dispatch.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 10.—Warden E. H. Dempsey of the Arkansas Penitentiary at Little Rock related to a Post-Dispatch correspondent today the story of the killing of the notorious murderer and robber, Tom Slaughter, as told to him by the forger, J. C. Howard, who escaped with Slaughter and who declares he killed him. Howard now is back in his cell in the penitentiary.

"Howard tells me that he shot and killed Slaughter last night at 8 o'clock when he attempted to capture Slaughter to return him to the penitentiary," Dempsey said. "I credit the story because it is corroborated by two of the negro prisoners who surrendered with Howard, because I have found a note indicating Howard's intention to return and because Howard and the two negroes brought back with them all the weapons carried away by the escaping party.

"Howard said that during their flight yesterday, when Slaughter compelled the five negroes to walk in front of them, that Slaughter had said to him: 'In the morning we will kill the niggers; then we can get away.' Slaughter, Howard said, was making for Oklahoma, where he has many friends, and where he expected to be safe.

"'I felt,' Howard told me, 'that Slaughter would kill me as he intended to kill the negroes if I jeopardized his flight in the least.'

Says Slaughter Was Asleep.

"Howard said that Slaughter, himself and the negroes were lying about a camp fire last night, Slaughter being asleep. Howard said he took his revolver and walked over to where Slaughter was lying, his automatic pistol in his hand. He said he wakened Slaughter and ordered him to throw up his hands. Instead, Howard declared, Slaughter began to arise to his feet, weapon in hand.

"Howard said that he then shot Slaughter—once in the head and once in the breast near the heart.

"Howard and two of the negroes walked a mile and a half to a farm house and telephoned to Sheriff Crow of Saline County at Benton, 15 miles away, telling the Sheriff that Slaughter had been killed and that they wanted to surrender.

"Howard asserted after his surrender that he had left a note for me telling of his intention to return. He later told me that he had hoped to capture Slaughter and to bring him back.

Note Left by Howad.

"Today I found under some papers on my desk in the commissary department, the following note written on the back on an envelope:

"'Will be back and'

"Howard has told me that he intended to write 'and bring Slaughter with me,' but that he was interrupted in the writing by the entrance of Slaughter and shoved the envelope under the papers on the desk.

"About two months ago I felt that, though Slaughter was kept in solitary confinement, and Howard was a machine operator in the tailor shop, that somehow they had established communication and that they were getting too close. I took what precautions I could to interrupt any communication with Slaughter.

"Howard tells me that when Slaughter was getting ready to depart from the prison, he came to him and said: 'Howard, you had better go along; they will blame you anyway.'

"Howard said he replied: 'I guess that's true, I had better go.' Today one of the prisoners who remained in the penitentiary told me that Howard had come to him before the flight and had said: 'Tell the cap, I'll be back.'

"Howard is a clean-cut chap, 25 years old, about five feet, eight inches tall and weighing not more than 150 pounds. He is smaller than Slaughter. He was sent up for forgery from Hot Springs, Garland County, on a charge of having stolen a pad of time checks from a railroad for which he worked as brakeman, and with having filled out some of the checks for a sum totaling a little more than $1000."

Warden Dempsey said that Slaughter was not regarded as a model prisoner, though he had an ingratiating manner that won confidence. The Warden said he has yet obtained no information bearing on how Slaughter obtained the weapon with which he held up the two guards as they opened the door of his cell to give him a blanket.

The penitentiary which Slaughter ruled for nearly five hours prior to his flight has 53 prisoners, including 17 who are under death sentence.

Killing of Slaughter a Parallel to That of Jesse James.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Dec. 10.—The reported shooting of Tom Slaughter by J. C. Howard, the man to whom Slaughter had given a chance for liberty, parallels somewhat the death of Jesse James, the Southwest's most famous outlaw. James, however, was shot by a relative and old friend, while Howard, it is understood, was not a former associate of Slaughter.

With the gradual scattering of the James boys' band through relentless activities of police and State authorities, Jesse James retired to his home at St. Joseph, where for a time he remained undisturbed, his pursuers fearing to follow him.

Bob Ford, cousin of Jesse, one of the band most intimate with the feared leader, was persuaded by the immunity and the large rewards offered.

While in apparent friendly conversation with the outlaw leader, Ford shot Jesse in the back as the latter was standing on a chair to adjust a picture on the wall.

Ford was immediately pardoned by the Governor and went to Colorado, where he was killed in a saloon brawl.

The killing of Jesse James created great indignation throughout the rural sections of Missouri, where the bandit had become a sort of hero of the Robin Hood type.

A song, once of wide popularity, is still sung concerning the killing. The refrain is:

"But the dirty little coward
"Who killed Mr. Howard,
"Laid poor Jesse James in his grave."

An unusual place seeks the right man

ABRAHAM & STRAUS, INC., Brooklyn's leading Department Store, requires the services of a man who will supervise every contact which they have with the public; newspaper advertising; window display; store decoration and booklets.

The man we want is probably between the ages of 25 and 35. He is full of enthusiasm and ideas and has, in addition, a sufficient grasp of English and typography to put them across.

Above all, he must know human nature. Whether or not he knows the department store, except from the customer's viewpoint, is immaterial.

If you believe you are the man, apply in writing to E. C. B. care of Abraham & Straus, Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y., giving fullest particulars of your experience. Your application will be treated confidentially.

The Church Federation of St. Louis yesterday appointed a committee of ministers to confer with a committee of the St. Louis Undertakers' Association on reducing the cost of funerals. The action followed receipt of a communication from the St. Louis Presbytery calling attention to high funeral charges and containing the following phrase: "When great grief comes no one is in a bargaining mood, but wants the best."

The Ministerial Committee is composed of the Rev. William B. Lampe, West Presbyterian Church; the Rev. C. E. Miller, First Christian Church; the Rev. L. J. Sharp, Compton Hill Congregational Church; the Rev. C. W. Tadlock, D. D., Centenary Methodist Church, South; the Rev. R. B. Whiteside, Euclid Baptist Church; the Rev. Thomas E. Greene, Trinity Methodist Church; the Rev. H. W. Mizner, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church; the Rev. W. E. Wheeler, D. D., St. Mark's English Lutheran Church, and the Rev. M. L. Kramer, Zion Evangelical Church.

Undertakers to Consider Matter.

Thomas J. Finan, Grand and Folsom avenues, president of the St. Louis Undertakers' Association, said that his organization will hold its next monthly meeting probably the first week in January and that the question of appointing a committee to confer with the Church Federation committee will be taken up at that time. There are 116 undertaking firms in the association.

"The cost of a funeral is a matter which rests solely with the individual relatives concerned," said an undertaker who declined to permit use of his name. "The undertaker who would encourage cheap funerals would not remain in business. Caskets can be had as low as $45 but that type of casket is rarely used. The average funeral includes a casket costing between $400 and $500.

"The cost of a funeral, in many cases, depends upon the amount of life insurance left by the deceased. This is usually in the neighborhood of $1000, and in figuring the cost of the funeral the relatives stop at nothing short of nearly the whole amount. The profit of the undertaker amounts to very little when the cost of caskets, wages and other overhead expenses are considered. The majority of funerals are held from chapels and the undertaker who expects to continue in business must maintain an expensive establishment to satisfy the fastidiousness of his customers.

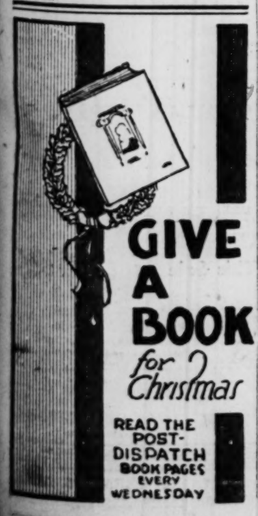
Luxurious Chapel Necessary.

"The undertaker with the most luxurious chapel does the most business. Chapels cost anywhere from $10,000 to $50,000 and must be well furnished, well lighted and otherwise decorated in a stylish manner.

"Limousines cost money and it takes more money to maintain and man them. The average funeral calls for four, or at least three, limousines. The pallbearers have to be equipped with gloves and mourning bands. The undertakers did not initiate the styles. The people themselves started them.

"The first thing the undertaker hears when he is called upon is 'we want the best we can get.' We inform them that it depends upon what they wish to spend. We cannot bargain with our customers like persons in other lines of business can do. We simply take orders."

Several business men have indorsed the action of the Church Federation.



CITY'S WATER SUPPLY WILL FALL SHORT IN TEN YEARS; NO PROVISION FOR GREATER PLANT

Water Commissioner Says Work Should Be Begun on New Works Within 18 Months.

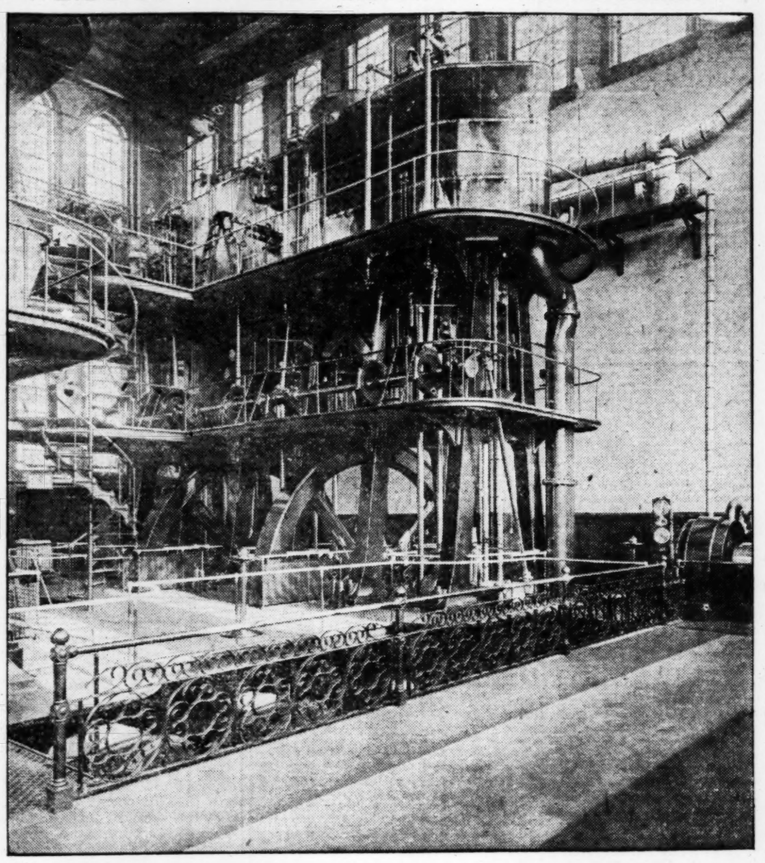
BOND ISSUE OF $11,000,000 PROPOSED

Officials Declare Department Revenue Would Retire It and Increase of Rates Would Not Be Necessary.

In two previous articles of a series covering the need for a bond issue for permanent public improvements in St. Louis, the Post-Dispatch has shown there is no possibility of obtaining big improvements from current revenues, and that a bond issue will be necessary and has presented Mayor Kiel's views regarding the items which should be included when a bond issue is submitted to a vote. Today the suggestion of Water Commissioner Wall and Assistant Water Commissioner Cutts that $11,000,000 should be included for the construction of a new water plant, is presented with Cutts' argument in support of the recommendation.

The recommendation of officials of the Water Department that work should be begun within the next 18 months on a new water plant, which would be supplemental to the present plant, is based upon their conclusions that the city will have grown to the capacity of the present plant at the Chain of Rocks by about 1928; that extensions of the present plant after that time would be wasteful and that if construction of a new plant should be begun in 1923, it could not be pumping water before 1928.

Their argument is that if St. Louis is not to suffer a water shortage by 1928 or 1930, it must begin now to prepare for the demand which will come at that time.



THIS is a photograph of one of the 12 monster pumps at the water stations at Bissel's Point and Baden. It has a capacity of 20,000,000 gallons of water each 24 hours. In the Bissel's Point station there are four others with an equal capacity, and one with a capacity of 25,000,000 gallons. At the Baden station there are four pumps with a capacity of 15,000,000 gallons and two with a capacity of 10,000,000. They pump directly from the reservoirs into the water mains. This gives a total rated capacity of 205,000,000 gallons, but, as a matter of fact, the dependable capacity is only about 140,000,000 gallons. With the addition of one more 20,000,000-gallon pump, planned for next year, the capacity will be increased to 160,000,000 gallons.

Water Commissioner Wall figures that by 1928 the city will have outgrown even this increased plant, and that immediate steps must be taken to build a new plant on the Missouri River with a capacity of at least 60,000,000 gallons.

Capacity of the Plant.

Butts told a Post-Dispatch reporter that the dependable capacity of the present plant is 140,000,000 gallons of water each 24 hours, though it had supplied 156,000,000 gallons within a 24-hour period.

"An adequate water supply is the most absolutely necessary thing for a city," Cutts said, "and because of the time required to put a plant in operation the beginning should be made far enough in advance to make certain that the facilities to supply the required amount of water will be ready to operate when the demand for the water comes.

"Our plant now has a certain capacity of 140,000,000 gallons a day of 24 hours, and temporarily can furnish from 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 gallons more than that, though there is no certainty as to the length of time such increased production could be continued. If everything went along without trouble to any of the machinery and we could operate all the pumps all the time, we probably could get 160,000,000 right along, but engineers and others familiar with machinery know that is an impossibility. One or more pumps of a large plant are usually shut down for repairs or adjustments all the time, and one never knows when it will be necessary to shut down a pump. I think it is clear that the city should not depend upon its water plant to maintain maximum capacity all the time.

"The water department expects within the next year or so to add one more high-service pump, pump main and outlet to the Chain of Rocks plant, at a cost of approximately $700,000. This money will come from the revenues of the water department. None of it will come from the revenue derived from taxation.

"Our figures show that with this increased equipment the plant will be able to supply all the water needs of St. Louis until some time between 1928 and 1930. By 1930, if not before, the capacity of the plant will be reached and there will be a demand for more water than the plant can furnish."

Increase in Use of Water.

In support of Cutts' statement the records of the water department show that the increase in the consumption of water in St. Louis in the last 10 years has been 29 per cent. For the fiscal year ending April 1, 1920, the average daily consumption was 104,651,264 gallons, and the maximum daily consumption was 142,184,380. The increase of that year over the previous year in total number of gallon was only 169,000,000, far below the average increase, and is attributable by water department officials to the business depression and to the fact that there was no prolonged dry spell within the year.

If the previous 10-year increase of 29 per cent should continue during the next 10 years, and officials say they would expect it to increase above that figure, in 1931 the average daily consumption would be approximately 135,000,000 gallons. Last year the maximum daily consumption was 38,000,000 gallons more than the average. If this same variation should exist in 1931, and it might be far exceeded, the maximum consumption would be 173,000,000 gallons, or 13,000,000 gallons more than the capacity figured for the plant after the addition of another high service pump.

Plans have been prepared in the Water Department for a plant to be constructed on the Missouri River at a place known as Howard's Bend, several miles above St. Charles, and one mile west of Hine Station on the Rock Island railroad in St. Louis County. In anticipation of the ultimate building of a plant on the Missouri River the department purchased 54 acres of land on Stratmann hill, which lies between the Bonhomme and Link roads, south of the Olive street road, for the construction of storage reservoirs, from which there would be gravity flow of water to all parts of St. Louis.

Reasons for County Purchase.

The reasons advanced by the Water Commissioner and the engineers for placing the plant on the Missouri River is that its operation would be more economical than that of the plant on the Mississippi. The elevation of Stratmann hill, they say, is sufficient for gravity flow eastward into the city, spreading out to all parts of the city, the hill having a greater elevation than any part of St. Louis.

From the present plant at the Chain of Rocks it is necessary to pump the water at great expense a long distance, with the result that even at the present rate of water consumption there are times when parts of St. Louis, in the extreme southern section, are without water, due to the inadequate pressure.

The engineers also have reported that the cost of clarification of the Missouri River water will be less than the cost of clarification of the combination Missouri and Mississippi water which is not received at the intake of the present plant.

The department plans call for the construction of the Missouri River plant with an immediate capacity of 60,000,000 gallons a day with a view to an ultimate capacity by 1945 of 160,000,000 gallons. This would be in addition to the Chain of Rocks plant, which would be operated at full capacity, but with the idea of ultimately abandoning the Chain of Rocks plant, the Missouri River plant being increased as portions of the old plant became obsolete.

The estimated cost of the proposed plant, according to figures supplied by engineers of the Water Department to Director Hooke of the Department of Public Utilities, is $20,000,000, of which the first expenditure would be $11,000,000. Cutts said that $11,000,000 would build a plant with a capacity of 60,000,000 gallons a day, but with portions of the plant necessarily constructed to provide the ultimate capacity of 160,000,000 gallons. As greater capacity is required units would be added to an ultimate total cost of $20,000,000.

There would be no additional taxation to provide a sinking fund to pay the principal and interest of bonds voted for a water plant. The money would come from the water license revenue.

"Rate Increase Unnecessary."

The records of the Comptroller's office show that nearly all the old water bonds have been retired, and Deputy Comptroller Gunn said he did not believe an increase in water rates would be necessary to provide the funds for a new water plant.

"The total of water works bonds outstanding is $2,621,000," Gunn said. "There is in the sinking fund to pay them $1,656,026, leaving less than $1,000,000 to be obtained to pay off these bonds. A continuance of the present rates probably would meet the requirements of a new bond issue. If the entire $11,000,000 of bonds were issued at one time the revenues would not be sufficient, but, of course, the bonds would be issued only as needed in the progress of the construction work, over a period of probably seven or eight years. The old bonds would be paid off practically by the time new bonds were issued and the natural increase in water revenue would care for the increasing amount of the new issuance. In addition to the amount set aside for the sinking fund last year the department had a surplus of more than $500,000."

In succeeding articles the Post-Dispatch will set out the details of the proposed issuance of bonds for street extension, for sewer improvements and for other purposes which city officials say constitute actual needs of the city.

BANK CASHIER AT LIBERTY UNDER BOND

Vanduser (Mo.) Official Met Deputy in St. Louis and Was Taken to Scott County.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Dec. 10.—Tom M. Bugg, cashier of the Bank of Vanduser, 25 miles south of here, who surrendered Friday in St. Louis to Scott County authorities and was taken to Benton to answer an indictment by a Scott County grand jury Nov. 28, was released on bond yesterday. He is charged with making false entries in his books.

On July 21 it was reported that two men held up the Vanduser Bank, locked the cashier and his assistant in the vault and escaped with $30,000 in cash and some papers. Two weeks later the bank building burned, destroying the records. The institution is now in the hands of State bank examiners.

Bugg has been working in Kansas City and met a Scott County Deputy Sheriff in St. Louis by appointment.

Women Voters to Seek $5000.

The St. Louis League of Women Voters will have a two-weeks' finance campaign, beginning Jan. 1, to raise $5000 for the 1922 budget. Following this will be the membership campaign, lasting until Feb. 28, for 5000 new members. Preliminary meetings on the membership drive are now being held in the league's seven city districts. There will be two such meetings Wednesday of this week, at the Carondelet Branch Library for the Sixth District, and at the home of Mrs. O. C. Blumeyer, for the Seventh District.

TRANSFER OF VETERANS' PAPERS WEDNESDAY

Files to Be Sent From Washington to St. Louis Bureau Office in Special Cars.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Representative Harry B. Howes was informed today that the final transfer of all compensation and vocational training papers from the Veterans' Bureau at Washington to the headquarters of the Ninth District at St. Louis will be made next Wednesday.

Special cars will be used in carrying 25,000 claims and the files will be accompanied by an additional personnel for the office, including more than 60 medical officers, examiners and clerks. An executive officer of the bureau will go with the party to assist in assembling the files and in perfecting a working organization. The files are being put in order and packed here, so that the work at St. Louis may be minimized.

Plan to Lessen Delay.

Hawes was informed by the Assistant Director, Col. George E. Ijams, in charge of the transfer, that a method had been worked out that will greatly lessen the delay in handling claims. The director in St. Louis, M. E. Head, has completed his arrangements and will meet the train.

cases except where the claimant is rated as totally and permanently disabled, and insurance cases, go to St. Louis, for men and women concerned who reside in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa. The medical board that acts on applications for reinstatement of insurance and the actuaries will remain here.

The new St. Louis organization will contain a medical board, examiners and rating clerks. The office there will be vested with full authority to render decisions in all cases. Only where the case is referred to the Board of Appeals will the papers be sent to Washington.

Affidavits Can Be Replaced.

Col. Ijams stated that many advantages to former service men will result from the regional offices. Frequent complaints have been made about the loss of papers in transmission to and from Washington. The claimant, under the new arrangement, may call in person to examine the files and if any of the affidavits are missing they can be replaced.

With the transfer of the files, the consolidation of the Vocational Educational Board and the Veterans' Bureau is complete. The district supervisor at St. Louis will handle both matters. Men have suffered delays in adjusting their cases when physical conditions required them to discontinue training, but it is said this will be obviated.

Pelletier Must Stand Trial.

BOSTON, Dec. 10.—District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier of Suffolk County was ordered today to stand trial before the Supreme Court Dec. 19, United States Senator Reed of Missouri argued yesterday in behalf of Pelletier for delay in the trial.

HYDE CONCERNED OVER PROPOSED REFERENDUM

Fears Farmers' Association Will Assume "Cruel Responsibility" on Road Bill.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 10.—Gov. Hyde tonight manifested deep concern in the announcement by the Missouri Farmers' Association that it is planning a referendum on the road bond bill (an account of which is published in another section of today's Post-Dispatch), and made the following statement:

"It is a cruel responsibility which the Missouri Farmers' Association is assuming, if it be true that it is planning to refer the road bond bill, and thereby hold up the road program for at least another year.

"The issuance of those bonds means one year's gain for the farming communities of this State. It means that the foundation for a system of hard-surfaced roads which shall ultimately gridiron the State is held up. If the bonds can be issued it is possible, under the terms of the road bill, to let contracts for grading, culverting and bridging separately from the hard surfacing, and it was the intention of the Road Commission to proceed at once in practically every county of the State to lay the foundation for the system of gravel and hard-surfaced roads which is contemplated by the road bill.

"This program is vastly for the interest of the farmers, because it meant that 8700 miles of roads would be built in the State, connecting every county seat and many of the other small towns in the State. This mileage would necessarily have been in the country. The cities paid most of the money. The country got the roads. It is hard to understand why a farm organization would want to mar a program so greatly to their interest.

"It may be that the Missouri Farmers' Association has the power to refer this bill. I hope they will decide not to do it. It is a heavy load of responsibility they assume if they undertake it, one that few would accept. I trust that wiser counsel will prevail."

WATSON ASKS TO HAVE 100 VETERANS CALLED IN INQUIRY

Senator Presents List of Witnesses Wanted to Testify as to Illegal Hangings in France.

DROWNING OF 14 SOLDIERS ALLEGED

Letter From Ex-Service Man Declares These Were Thrown Overboard for No Apparent Reason.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The names of more than 100 former service men were presented today to a Senate committee by Senator Watson, Democrat, Georgia, who asked that they be brought here to testify in the investigation of his charges that American soldiers had been put to death in France without the right of trial by courtmartial.

There was no intimation as to how many on the list would be summoned, the committee explaining that it would sift through the names next week. Assurance, however, was given Senator Watson that every person would be called if he believed they were prepared to give testimony directly bearing on the charges.

Compared with the turbulent meeting yesterday, the session was extremely tame. Senator Watson, the only witness, read extracts from many letters in which soldiers declared they knew of numbers of illegal executions. One soldier wrote that on a transport taking him to France 14 men were thrown overboard and drowned for no apparent reason.

Picture of Gallows Submitted.

The Georgia Senator undertook to show, and indeed announced he would prove, that the War Department list of 11 executions did not include all of the men illegally hanged or shot to death by order of superior officers. A picture of what seemed to be a gallows in France, on which a rope was being hooked around the neck of a condemned soldier, with several officers standing on the platform and scores on the ground below, was given to the committee by the Senator, who testified that it was taken by a Colonel, now in the service. The officer's name was not revealed, nor that of his son, who handed it to the Senator last night, as the testimony showed.

Senator Watson stated that he desired to return the picture tonight, but by direction of Senator Shields, Democrat, Tennessee, it was retained for the record, although Shields declared that it was not worth while as evidence if the man who made it could not be found to testify. Col. Walter E. Bethel, Assistant Judge Advocate-General, from whom the committee obtained the list of 11 legal executions, was instructed to check over the Watson list and see if any were the same. At the outset of the hearing, after presentation of a letter from Assistant Secretary Roosevelt of the Navy Department denying that he had first-hand knowledge of the killing of a soldier by an officer and the subsequent transfer of the officer to another command, Senator Watson explained that use of Roosevelt's letter, in fact, he stated, was written letter, in fact, he stated, wasw ritten by Col. William Hayward, United States District Attorney of New York, and a former officer overseas.

"Not Surprised at Legion."

Running through his long typewritten record of the names of prospective witnesses, with a word or two as to what each would probably testify, Senator Watson stopped occasionally to interject some observations. The charges, he declared, had become a matter of public, or national concern, and for that reason he wanted to conduct the case in his own way. Quoting from his letter to Chairman Brandegee, the Georgia Senator said it was no surprise to him that the American Legion "composed principally of the officers who organized themselves in Paris to perpetuate militarism in this country should whitewash themselves."

The commander of a legion post at Westville, Ok., the Senator said, had sent him the name of a man ready to testify that 21 Americans were executed in France without trial. Another soldier wrote that more than 600 had been illegally killed in France.

"Did these men tell you why the soldiers were killed?" Senator Brandegee asked.

"In each cause of ruthless killing," the Senator replied, "it was stated that men were shot down because they were fagged and unable to walk."

Brandegee suggested that a soldier could be shot without trial for desertion in the face of the enemy, and Col. Bethel said there was no written law for the battlefield, that the rules of the battlefield required summary action.

Two Women on Board of New Bank First of Sex to Be So Honored in St. Louis

MRS. ELIAS MICHAEL

MRS. E. H. STEEDMAN

Mrs. Elias Michael and Mrs. E. H. Steedman Chosen by Security National Bank Savings and Trust Co.

TWO women are members of the Board of Directors of the Security National Bank Savings and Trust Co. of St. Louis, which is about to open Jan. 1, in quarters on Eighth street, between Olive and Locust streets. They are said to be the first women to be made directors of a St. Louis bank.

Mrs. Elias Michael of 4383 Westminster place and Mrs. Edwin H. Steedman of 5394 Waterman avenue are the women directors. The officers and the other directors are:

Chairman of the board, J. Lionberger Davis; president, Byron W. Moser; vice president and cashier, Fred L. Denby; assistant cashier, Leo J. Quinn; directors, L. Guy Blackmer, Martin J. Collins, Louis H. Egan, C. B. Fox, Joseph W. Lewis, Boyle O. Rodes, George F. Steedman and Louis H. Waltke. There is also a stockholders' advisory board.

According to an announcement issued by Chairman Davis, the new bank will make no commercial loans and will take part in no promotions. It will invest its capital and surplus and deposits, except cash and other reserves, in carefully selected securities. It will specialize in investment and trust service.

BRIBERY OF TWO WITNESSES FOR STILLMAN CHARGED

John F. Brennan, Chief of Counsel for Banker's Wife, Makes Accusations in Affidavit.

By the Associated Press.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Dec. 10.—Accusations that two Canadians had been bribed to testify against Mrs. Anne U. Stillman, and that agents for James A. Stillman attempted to corrupt 11 others into giving false testimony, opened a fresh counter attack today upon the banker, institution of whose divorce suit last March caused a stir in financial and social circles.

The charges were made in open court before Supreme Court Justice Morschauser by John F. Brennan, chief of Mrs. Stillman's counsel, and John E. Mack, guardian ad litem for her 3-year-old son, Guy Stillman, whose legitimacy the banker impugned. Brennan presented an affidavit signed by himself, outlining the allegations and explaining that they would be borne out by the testimony of witnesses to be called when the divorce trial scene shifts to Montreal in January.

Residents of Quebec.

Except for Stillman, all whose names were included in the charges are residents of the Province of Quebec.

The testimony in connection with which the charges were made was that Mrs. Stillman violated her marriage vow in her conduct with Fred Beauvais, the Indian guide accused by the banker of being the father of Guy.

Brennan's affidavit named several witnesses who he said would be called to testify that agents of Stillman attempted to bribe them in the summer of 1920, about the time the banker instituted the divorce suit.

The affidavit named Joseph and Ferdinand Page, both of Latuque, Quebec, as the two who were bribed before testifying against Mrs. Stillman. Brennan told the banker's lawyer, Outerbridge Horsey, that agents for Mrs. Stillman who sought to corrupt witnesses were J. Albert La Fontaine and Francois La Joie and added that there were others who were guilty.

Reference to Bribe Offers.

Eleven witnesses named in the affidavit would, Brennan stated, swear at the hearing before a commission in Montreal that agents for Stillman sought to bribe them "with considerable sums of money if they would falsely swear" they had witnessed misconduct by Beauvais and Mrs. Stillman. The affidavit said some would tell of being offered not only money, but positions and "a good time in New York."

The affidavit submitted the names of others whose testimony, it declared, would try to shatter that given by "Keyhole and ladder" witnesses who peeped at Mrs. Stillman at her summer camp in Grand Anse, Quebec, and elsewhere along the St. Maurice River. Her witnesses are expected to swear there was no scaffolding on the house of her summer camp in June and July, 1919, where her husband's witnesses said they stood upon scaffolds and ladders to peer in the windows at Beauvais and Mrs. Stillman. Others, it stated, would testify the conduct of the Indian and the banker's wife "was exemplary."

Charges of Misconduct by Banker.

The issues involved, the affidavit continued, whether Mrs. Stillman had been "living sinfully" with Beauvais "ever since the first of May, 1917, at Grand Anse, Grand Piles, and at other places along and near the St. Maurice River, at hotels in Montreal and in the Potantillo hills."

The affidavit renewed charges that Stillman was guilty of misconduct with three women, Florence H. Leeds and two identified only as "Helen" and "Clara."

Justice Morshauser granted the application for a Canadian commission to begin sessions Jan. 11.

$260,000 Affected by Decision.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 10.—In a decision flatly reversing its former ruling, the Kansas Supreme Court today held that the defunct Kansas State Bank of Salina was not responsible for $260,000 worth of acceptances issued by its officers. Hence, the holders of these securities will lose their money.

GHOULS BREAK COFFIN OPEN, BUT FAIL TO GET VALUABLES

Diamond Ring Owned by Galesburg Man Had Not Been Buried With Body.

By the Associated Press.

GALESBURG, Ill., Dec. 10.—Ghouls, who broke into the Brokaw mausoleum at Fairview, in Fulton County, about 30 miles from here, sometime this week, and opened the coffin of Brown Brokaw, who died 11 years ago, received nothing for their trouble, it was learned from relatives today. A valuable diamond ring owned by Brokaw was not buried with the body, and gold bridgework in his mouth had been taken out after an operation prior to his death, it was said.

STATE BOARD WILL MEET TO DISCUSS SMALLPOX RULING

Dr. North Announces Decision Will Be Reached at Kansas City on Carrying Out Vaccination Order.

IMPROVED CONDITION MAY SUSPEND EDICT

Intention, However, Is to Have Everything in Readiness for Enforcement of Regulation.

Dr. Emmett P. North of the Buckingham Hotel, president of the State Board of Health, said yesterday he would call another meeting of the board in Kansas City shortly before Dec. 22, the date when the board has ordered all railroads in Missouri to refuse to transport passengers without certificates showing they had been vaccinated against smallpox within the past three years.

Dr. North said that at this meeting the smallpox situation of the State would be thoroughly canvassed and a decision would be reached as to exactly how the board's orders would be carried out. It is the expectation that if at that time continued improvement in smallpox conditions is shown, the necessity for the order will be ended, and it will not be put into effect. It is the board's intention, however, to have everything in readiness for the enforcement of the order.

Since the issuance of the order, at first made effective Dec. 15, and changed by the board Friday night to Dec. 22, there have been questions raised publicly as to the power of the board to enforce such an order, and as to the right of a railroad company to refuse to carry a passenger because he had no vaccination certificate.

Attorney-General's Opinion.

Before the issuance of the order, the board obtained from Assistant Attorney-General Miller an opinion that it had full power to require vaccination. Miller cited section 5773 of the statutes, which is:

"The Board shall designate those disease which are infectious, contagious, communicable or dangerous in their nature and shall make and enforce adequate rules, regulations and procedures to prevent the spread of those diseases and to determine the prevalence of said diseases within the State."

Miller said in his opinion:

"Undoubtedly the authority to require the vaccination of all persons when it may be deemed necessary to the public health and safety is included within the powers so delegated. Therefore, it is the opinion of this department that the State Board of Helath, if and when an emergency exists, is empowered to promulgate a rule or regulation requiring all persons within a community to submit to vaccination."

Another section of the law provides that any railroad company which fails to comply with the orders and regualtions of the Board is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Situation Is Improving.

At the meeting of the Board Friday night, reports were received showing that the situation in Kansas City, where the smallpox epidemic has been most severe, was improving. Dr. James P. Leake of the United States Public Health Service, who was sent to Kansas City from Washington to investigate the epidemic, reported that he found the cases there of a particularly deadly type, more severe than had been known in this country in 50 years. He said the death rate was 30 per cent.

Dr. Leake said, however, that the situation was well in hand in Kansas City, but that he feared there were a number of cases incubating in the State, and that stringent measures should be taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

Dr. North yesterday made public a telegram he received from Surgeon-General Cumming at Washington:

"Number of cases of smallpox reported and high percentage of death constitutes an emergency, and places grave responsibility on State and local health officials, who should protect their people by vaccination."

To Deputize Physician.

Dr. North said that it was the intention of the board to deputize a physician in each town in the State to vaccinate persons and issue vaccination certificates. The railroad companies, he said, would be expected to refuse to sell tickets to any person who was unable to produce a vaccination certificate.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 10.—In response to inquiries as to why the vaccination order for persons who wish to travel in the State would not be enforced until Dec. 22, State Health Commissioner Enloe today called attention to the resolution of the State Board of Health in St. Louis setting forth that the order of enforcement was so timed as to give all persons opportunity to comply with the law.

Enloe said it was the sense of the board that it was impracticable for all travelers to be vaccinated before the date originally set for the order to go into effect. He added that railroad officials had raised no question of the right of the board and carriers to enforce the ruling, and were willing to have their employes act as enforcement agents.

Reports to Enloe from Kansas City show a marked decrease in new cases of smallpox and deaths from that disease. The report shows 361 cases since Sept. 1 and 115 deaths.

Four Saloonkeepers Arrested.

Six men were arrested last night as the result of a police search for violations of the prohibition laws. Four were saloonkeepers. They were booked as William Keleng, 1926 South Ninth street; Jacob Kulich, 1023 Allen avenue; Philip Polito, 1312 Blair avenue; Arthur Stoll, 3101 Morganford road, and James Georgieff, 1400 Chestnut street. The latter's porter also was arrested. A quantity of whisky and home-made beer was taken as evidence.

$25,000 BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT FILED BY STENOGRAPHER

Frisco Railroad Employe Brings Action Against Business Man, Who Killed Robber.

Miss Edna Elizabeth Krell, 27 years old, of 3433A Humphrey street, a Frisco Railroad stenographer, yesterday filed a $25,000 breach of promise suit against Frank J. Stuart of 4142 Hartford street, president of the Piapao Laboratories, 1110 Locust street.

The petition alleges that between Feb. 1 and June 29 of this year Stuart courted Miss Krell and engaged himself to marry her. She asserts that on June 29 last he was already married.

On the night of June 23 last Stuart shot and killed one of two highwaymen after the robbers had forced Stuart and a young woman to ride around with them in Stuart's car for nearly two hours.

Former Corcuit Judge William Zachritz, attorney for Miss Krell, said Miss Krell read the newspaper accounts of this occurrence and learned from them that Stuart was married. She verified this by calling Mrs. Stuart on the telephone.

Stuart, when asked for a statement, said: "I know Miss Krell, but any assertion that I engaged myself to marry her is ridiculous."

VETERANS CALL ON MILLER TO REPEAT REMARK ON CRIME

Mass Meeting Requests Proof If Police Board Head Affirms Statement as to Former Service Men.

RESOLUTION CHANGED PRIOR TO ADOPTION

Chaplan of Legion Post Says It Is Too Tame—Vocational Student Says Police Beat Him.

A resolution calling upon Victor J. Miller, president of the Board of Police Commissioners, either to affirm or deny a statement attributed to him in a recent speech before the East St. Louis Junior Chamber of Commerce, in regard to the percentage of former service men involved in crimes, was adopted last night at a meeting of between 250 and 300 men and women in Knights of Columbus Hall, 3544 Olive street.

In the event Miller affirms the statement, the resolution calls upon him to furnish the proof upon which the statement was based.

The meeting was called by the Veterans' Council of St. Louis, comprising representatives of the American Legion, Grand Army of the Republic and the United Spanish War Veterans to discuss Miller's East St. Louis speech. F. W. Cheever, president of the United Spanish War Veterans, presided, and representatives of other veterans' and patriotic organizations had places on the platform.

Management Causes Delay.

The meeting was delayed about 1 minutes by a request from the management of the building that the tone of a prepared resolution that was to have been offered be modified. The resolution was accordingly rewritten to comply with this request and its text as adopted is as follows:

VETERANS CALL ON MILLER TO REPEAT REMARK ON CRIME

Mass Meeting Requests Proof If Police Board Head Affirms Statement as to Former Service Men.

RESOLUTION CHANGED PRIOR TO ADOPTION

Chaplan of Legion Post Says It Is Too Tame—Vocational Student Says Police Beat Him.

A resolution calling upon Victor J. Miller, president of the Board of Police Commissioners, either to affirm or deny a statement attributed to him in a recent speech before the East St. Louis Junior Chamber of Commerce, in regard to the percentage of former service men involved in crimes, was adopted last night at a meeting of between 250 and 300 men and women in Knights of Columbus Hall, 3549 Olive street.

In the event Miller affirms the statement, the resolution calls upon him to furnish the proof upon which the statement was based.

The meeting was called by the Veterans' Council of St. Louis, comprising representatives of the American Legion, Grand Army of the Republic and the United Spanish War Veterans to discuss Miller's East St. Louis speech. F. W. Cheever, president of the United Spanish War Veterans, presided, and representatives of other veterans' and patriotic organizations had places on the platform.

Management Causes Delay.

The meeting was delayed about 30 minutes by a request from the management of the building that the tone of a prepared resolution that was to have been offered be modified. The resolution was accordingly rewritten to comply with this request, and its text as adopted is as follows:

"Whereas, Victor J. Miller, President of the Board of Police Commissioners of the City of St. Louis, is reported to have stated in a recent speech before the Junior Chamber of Commerce of East St. Louis that 70 per cent of the criminals of the United States are ex-service men, and,

"Whereas, We challenge the truth of this statement. Be it,

"Resolved, That we hereby call upon Mr. Miller either to affirm or deny the making of said statement, and that if he admits having made the same, we hereby call upon him to furnish the proof upon which said statement was made, or, failing to do so, make available to us the necessary records from which the actual facts can be ascertained."

Declares Statement Untrue.

Capt. J. B. B. Prosser, chairman of the Veterans' Council, said that organization called the meeting in good faith, as it was believed the people were still interested in former service men. He said it was not the purpose to censure any individual, but he hoped the meeting would take such action as would make it forever unlikely that anyone would stoop to cast aspersions upon the men who wore the uniform of the United States fighting forces. He declared that if Miller had made the statement attributed to him that it was "untrue, unjustified, untimely and absolutely unnecessary."

"Whatever the truth," he added, "it is not necessary to throw that statement in the faces of former service men."

Samuel D. Webster, former Department Commander of the G. A. R. in Missouri, delivered the principal address, in which he counseled moderation, pointing out that the soldiers returning from the Civil War had been called "Lincoln's hirelings," and that Gen. Grant himself had been denounced by some persons and newspapers as "the Butcher" Grant. He advised that it be definitely ascertained beyond doubt just what was said by Miller before indulging in intemperate expressions.

Friend of Miller Speaks.

The resolution was then offered by Prosser and was promptly indorsed by Veterans' Council. A representative of the Society of the Third Division announced that his organization indorsed it, and then a man who said he was C. C. Bland, an insurance agent and personal friend of Mr. Miller, arose and remarked that he was "very glad to observe that the meeting gave this indorsement to Mr. Miller."

"Well, Victor has one friend here," another man shouted.

This incident was passed over by indorsements of the resolution by the Society of the Fifth Division and its auxiliary, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Marine Corps Club, and the Women's Auxiliary of the Thirty-fifth Division.

The Rev. R. P. Basler, chaplain of Quentin Roosevelt Post of the American Legion, said the resolution was too tame for his sentiments.

Wants String Resolution.

"I don't know about crime," he said, "but I do know that about 70 per cent of former service men are doing everything else. I'd like to know if Mr. Miller said what has been attributed to him. If he did so, then, I say, let us make a good, strong resolution expressive of the indignation that such remarks evoke."

George W. Searjeant, vice president of the British-Canadian War Veterans, indorsed the resolution for his organization, adding that of 2000 British-Canadians who returned to St. Louis from the war, only 10 fell into the hands of the police in two years.

Mrs. R. H. McCullough, president of the Women's Auxiliary of Quentin Roosevelt Post, indorsed the resolution, and Mrs. John Hoffman, speaking for the 138th Regimental Auxiliary, said the remarks attributed to Miller were "slander upon the mothers, wives and sisters of former service men."

"We believe in the honor of our men," she added.

Mrs. R. Crohn of Louisiana, member of the Woman's Relief Corps, said she was the widow of a Civil War veteran and that her son was a casualty in the World War. She hoped the meeting would "repudiate the slander on the brave men of this war."

Says Police Beat Him.

Robert P. Grether of 4205 Natural Bridge avenue, said he had been "slugged and beaten by Miller's men." He is in vocational training. Grether explained that he was accosted by two policemen on Delmar boulevard "some time ago," who compelled him to hold up his hands, slugged him and then took him to a police station and beat him again.

After indorsements by Quentin Roosevelt Post and the Marine Corps Club, the resolution was put to a standing vote, which appeared to be unanimous.

A committee was appointed consisting of Dr. J. Arthur Brix, J. Y. Johnson and the Rev. Mr. Basler to present a copy of the resolution to Miller and get his answer to requests therein.

After the meeting adjourned a policeman was directed by a man, said to be a representative of Miller at the meeting, to interview Grether, the man who said he had been slugged, and "get his record." As the policeman, who stood inside the door during the meeting, approached Grether, Mrs. Hoffman warned Grether to be careful with whom he conversed, and Grether thereupon left the hall.

WOMAN JAILED IN LIQUOR CASE

Illinois Lunch Room Keeper Sentenced for Six Months.

PROMISE MADE IN JAIL 14 YEARS AGO RESULTS IN PAROLE

Release of Life Term Convict From Penitentiary Culmination of Former Senator Burton's Efforts.

Three men met as fellow prisoners in the same jail 14 years ago. One was a United States Senator. The tow others were convicted murderers, sentenced to hang. The mutual interest that resulted from the meeting bore fruit yesterday in the parole from the Jefferson City penitentiary of Amalek Brooks, serving a life term.

This parole, ordered by Gov. Hyde, resulted from the efforts of former Senator Joseph R. Burton,, of Kansas, in behalf of Brooks, covering a period of 14 years. Those endeavors harked back to the time when Burton, Brooks and the latter's brother met in jail. Burton at last has succeeded in keeping a promise that he made then.

Brooks, with his brother John, were convicted in Iron County, Mo., in 1907, of the murder of John Clemens. They were sentenced to death, but the judgment was commuted by Gov. Folk to life imprisonment. The circumstances were as follows:

The Brooks brothers, Amalek, 26 years old, and John, 18, were quarrymen living in Graniteville, Mo. They were uneducated, trained to take care of themselves. In the old-fashioned quarry camp, that meant the ability to survive brutal competition. Amalek was a square-jawed man, powerfully built, with massive shoulders. The weight of his huge fists was known to the camp. One man had died after a fracas in which Amalek's bone-crushing "mauleys" played a part.

Chief Rival Was Gus Mead.

His chief rival for physical honors in the community was one Gus Mead. But they had not tried out the issue. It was said among the men working in the shafts that Mead and John Clemens were carrying guns for Amalek. Trouble was expected.

One evening at dusk the Brooks boys came up the railroad track. Several men were sitting on the embankment, but they did not see the brothers until the latter were directly behind them. One of those sitting was Gus Mead, and a shotgun lay across his knees. As Mead turned, Amalek was upon him. They wrenched and strained fiercely for possession of the gun. Watching his chance, John Brooks stepped in and wrested it from them, saying:

"Now have it out with your fists."

Backward and forward over the cross-ties the savage battle raged, until both men were bloody and bruised. Finally a sledgehammer blow from Amalek's thick red arm sent Mead down to stay, and through his broken teeth he muttered that he had had "'nuff." Nobody else seemed disposed to question the outcome, so the Brooks boys started away, John carrying Mead's shotgun.

"Where's John Clemens?" asked Amalek. Nobody replied, but a moment later Clemens stepped out of a saloon across the way, from which he had evidently watched the fight. Apparently he had no desire to make the acquaintance of those punishing fists. His revolver came out, and he fired quickly. Amalek fell with a bullet over the heart.

Quick Revenge by Brother.

But the echo of the pistol's crack was drowned by the crashing report of the shotgun, and Clemens was dead upon the ground before the smoking weapon had left John Brooks' shoulder.

The Brooks brothers made no trouble about going to jail, Amalek was desperately wounded, but did not die. But the temper of the community was furiously hostile to them. The women of the settlement, with primitive apprehension for the safety of their men, demanded to know who was safe with such "man-killers" at large. The Brookses were sons of a crippled widow. They had no money to employ crafty and resourceful counsel. They had no friends.

It was a very brief trial, and the verdict was murder, with hanging as the punishment for both of them. They were returned to the county jail at Ironton, to await execution.

During this time another individual had run afoul of the law, under quite different circumstances, and in a different walk of life. This was Joseph R. Burton, United States Senator from Kansas, who had been accused of accepting a fee for practicing law before a Federal department while holding a seat in the Senate.

Unlike the Brooks boys, of whom he probably had never heard, Senator Burton had the best of counsel. He fought the case to the United States Supreme Court twice. But the effect was to land him, eventually, in the Ironton jail in a cell next to the Brooks brothers. The distinguished Kansan had six months to serve, they had a few weeks to live.

In these circumstances, the prisoners became mutually interested. It was odd that they, who had trod such separate paths, and who were bound in such opposite directions, should meet in such a place. The brothers told Burton about their case. He was astonished at the ferocity of their punishment. With any sort of a defense they should have gotten, at the most, no more than manslaughter, he thought. Gov. Folk evidently thought the same, because he commuted the sentences to life imprisonment shortly afterward.

The brothers shook hands with Burton, and departed for Jefferson City. Burton remained behind to finish his jail sentence. But he promised them that as soon as he could re-establish himself, he would lend al his energy to softening their punishment.

He kept his word. In the 14 years that have elapsed since then, he has besieged the Missouri authorities with incessant pleas for clemency for the brothers. In the case of John he was successful in 1913. The younger Brooks was paroled, but died two years later. Burton kept up the fight for Amalek.

The latter had made an exceptionally good prison record. He had become a skilled mechanic, and had a position of trust in the powerhouse. He learned to read and write, and appeared eager to improve his education. All these facts, together with Burton's pleas, were takeen into consideration by the Board of Pardon and Parole. The parole was unanimously recommended.

Burton carried the fight to Gov. Hyde in person. The Kansan is now a venerable man of 70, and had, despite his jail sentence, a long record of public service. He is dignified in manner of a man of large affairs. His presence carries weight. The Governor said he was getting rather "hard-boiled" about paroles, but he guessed he would grant this one.

Amalek Brooks said his first act, upon being released, would be to visit his aged mother, in Granite City. He has been offered a job in a Kansas City powerhouse. He may get work in Granite City, however. He knows how his freedom was obtained, and by whom.

THOMAS W. LAMONT IN WRECK

He and His Friends Lose Clothing, Finish Trip by Auto.

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., Dec. 10.—Thomas W. Lamont and a party of friends, including Arthur H. Lockett and William C. Cushman, who left New York yesterday in a private car attached to the Seaboard Air Line fast train en route to Pinehurst, arrived here by automobile today attired in a grotesque variety of costumes as a result of their train running into a broken rail 30 miles north of here and many of the cars rolling down an embankment.

No one was injured, it was said. The accident occurred when many of the passengers were dressing for breakfast, and their clothing and luggage became so intermixed when the cars rolled over that they donned the first things at hand and came here by automobile, leaving their effects to be gathered up by railroad employes.

NATIONS APPROVED AS DRY LAW OFFICER HERE

Rev. W. C. Shupp Announces Approval by Haynes on Return From Washington.

The appointment of Gus O. Nations as Chief Prohibition Enforcement Officer of St. Louis has been approved by National Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, the Rev. W. C. Shupp, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Missouri, announced yesterday, upon his return from the twentieth annual convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America at Washington.

"In commenting on the fact that the Anti-Saloon League of Missouri had requested the appointment of Nations, Maj. Haynes informed me that his department needed the cooperation of our organization to make its work a success," said Dr. Shupp.

Fight on Beer and Wine.

"We are preparing for an active political campaign. The liquor traffic forces feel that if they can elect a bare majority in Congress next November they will have no trouble in getting the alcoholic content of beer increased from half of 1 per cent. That is the point around which the fight will center. If beer is converted into an intoxicant the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act will amount to nothing.

"The Anti-Saloon League realizes the importance of this point and is preparing to fight the light wine and beer propaganda at every turn. We have the assurance of Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair, who is at the head of the prohibition enforcement forces of the United States, that an appropriation of $10,000,000 will be requested to run the department next year. The appropriation for this year was $6,000,000. The amount assessed in fines for violations of the Volstead law amounted to more than three times that much."

Dr. Shupp said that the few brewers who are continuing to defy the prohibition law will be forced to the wall by ruinous penalties which they cannot escape.

Nations Had Other Jobs.

Nations is a young lawyer, who has practiced in St. Louis several years. He was an "original Hyde man" in St. Louis in the primary campaign last year, and was in charge of the Hyde headquarters in St. Louis.

After Hyde became Governor he caused the appointment of Nations as Supervisor of the Blue Sky Department of the State Banking Department, and when the Department of Finance was created Nations was retained in the same position. He tendered his resignation after a few months, however, telling friends the position was not as good a one as he had been led to believe he would receive.

GERMAN SINGERS, TOURING AMERICA, GIVE CONCERTS TODAY

Karl Kromer, Composer of Popular Songs, Leader of Ten Persons From Stuttgart Opera.

Ten singers, men and women, former members of the Royal Opera House at Stuttgart, who are making a tour of America, will give two concerts today in St. Louis.

The first will be at Eagle Hall, Jefferson and Lafayette avenues, at 2:15 this afternoon, and the second will be at Swiss Hall, Iowa avenue and Arsenal street at 8 o'clock.

These singers specialize in the artistic interpretation of German folksongs. Their leader is Karl Kromer, composer of many popular songs, and in particular of "Teure Heimat, sei gegruesst."

MAN ACCUSED OF KILLING ANOTHER BY CUTTING THROAT

George Hunter Ordered Held by Coroner's Jury for Death of Jacob Donahue in Saloon.

A Coroner's jury yesterday held George Hunter, 28 years old, of 4408 Gibson avenue, in the death Friday at 7 p. m., of Jacob Donahue, 28, a laborer, who was found an hour and a half earlier with his throat cut near the saloon of John Sullivan at 4257 Hut avenue. Donahue was unable to make a statement before his death.

George Fortune, bartender in the saloon, testified that Donahue and Raeul Farrow of 1343 Hunt avenue were at the bar in the saloon when Hunter entered, and approaching Donahue, said: "You are the man who cut my brother." Fortune said that Hunter then struck Donahue. He said he saw no knife in Donahue's hand, but that blood flowed from a cut in Donahue's neck.

Farrow testified similarly except that he declared that he saw a knife in Hunter's hand. Hunter has declared that he had no knife.

William Hunter of 1986 South Newstead avenue, brother of George Hunter, was also arrested. He said he had a fight earlier in the afternoon with a man not Donahue, near the saloon. He had no cut in this fight, he said, and he could not explain why his brother should have said to Donahue: "You cut my brother."

IRISH MODERATES UNITE TO SUPPORT GRIFFITH ON TREATY

Cardinal Logue and Many of His Bishops Indorse Terms and May Have Marked Influence.

COLLINS TO MAKE "IMPORTANT" SPEECH

Says "We Can Conduct This Controversy Without Resorting to Abusing Each Other, as in Past."

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—All the moderate forces in Ireland are reported in Irish advices today as uniting in support of Arthur Griffith and his adherents in their determination to ratify the treaty with the British Government. Belfast dispatches show that Cardinal Logue and the great body of his Bishops, who held aloof during the negotiations have come out now in support of the agreement and their action is expected here to have marked influence with the mass of the people.

Should the Dail Eireann decided that a plebiscite is necessary it is thought probable by observers here that the church will take an active part, throwing its influence with the Nationalists and other moderates.

Cardinal Logue, it is pointed out, also has a considerable following in Ulster and in an interview he has expressed the hope of a friendly understanding between the North and South.

Cardinal Logue has fixed next Tuesday for holding a meeting of the hierarchy, when his Bishops will consider a resolution recommending acceptance of the treaty.

The Prime Minister is spending the week end at Chequers court; he had no further meeting today with Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, who conferred with Austen Chamberlain, the Government leader in the House, and will report to his Cabinet in Belfast on Monday.

About 120 members of the Dail Eireann will attend the Wednesday meeting and of these at least 80, according to the estimates of Arthur Griffith and his followers, will vote for the treaty. Even this substantial majority, in the opinion of the same men, will be exceeded should the Dail Eireann, as is considered quite possible, decide to refer the question to a plebiscite of the Irish people.

The belief seems to prevail in Belfast that should the disagreement in the Sinn Fein result in the retirement of Eamonn d Valera, bringing Griffith to the Premiership, with Collins as Finance Minister, accommodation between the north and the south would prove easier than if De Valera were head of the southern Government.

Irish Envoy Urges Americans to Keep Calm.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The following statement was issued tonight by H. J. Boland as "envoy of the Irish Republic in America": "The appeal of President de Velera to the Irish people to maintain a calm front at this crisis can be extended to all friends of Ireland in this country. Comrades who are devoted to each other by years of suffering in a common cause have now to face a great issue of world-wide importance. The decision rests squarely on the men who are representatives of the Irish people. Dail Eireann will speak in no uncertain voice this week. Let all friends of Ireland realie at this solemn hour that premature criticism at this time proves a boomerang. The honor of the Irish nation is sure in the hands of Dail Eireann. Let me urge on all friends of Ireland to await the decision of an Dail."

Crowds Stone Each Other in Belfast, Are Dispersed.

By the Associated Press.

BELFAST, Dec. 10.—Rival crowds stoned each other vigorously tonight until they were dispersed by the police. After much unrest last night and sporadic firing during the day, without casualties, the trouble grew steadily until the crowd took to throwing stones tonight.

Collins Expects to Make "Important Statement" to Dail.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Dec. 10.—Michael Collins informed the correspondent of the Associated Press today that he did not feel justified in honor in saying anything before the meeting of the Dail Eireann.

"However," he added, "I signed the treaty and my attitude is well taken. I am going to make a statement of very great importance at the Dail meeting."

Asked whether he was pleased with Cardinal Logue's pronouncement, he answered good-humoredly that he thought the question was an unfair one, but remarked: "The point is that whenever we have had a controversy in Ireland in the past we always went for abusing each other. I want to show everyone that we can conduct this controversy without resort to such tactics."

Reiterating his desire not to prejudge the situation, Collins, in reply to another question, said the latest developments had not interfered in the slightest with the personal friendship between himself and Eamonn de Valera.

Numerous members of the Dail visited the Mansion House today and discussed the situation in informal, small groups. De Valera had not appeared early this afternoon. There was evidently an acute difference of opinion, but there was no sign of recrimination such as sometimes has been prevalent when opposing factions have discussed previous crises.

Sean O'Cellaigh, the Sinn Fein representative in Paris, who has arrived in Dublin to attend next Wednesday's meeting of the Dail, said today: "I cannot see how the Dail can accept the agreement as it stands. It goes back on the principles and pledges held since 1916."

According to present arrangements, no meeting of the Cabinet can be held until after Wednesday's session of the Dail Eireann, from which it was considered possible that newspaper correspondents might be excluded.

Commandant Dalton, chief liaison officer, say he has received expressions of regret and promises of immediate disciplinary action from the military in connection with the Turies bombing. He believes that this sincere effort by the military to maintain the truce will have good results. "Provocation of this nature," he adds, "should at no time be regarded as justification of action by our people which would constitute a breach of the truce."

Greenwood Tells How Irish Terms Were Reached

Chief Secretary Says Great Task Was to Remove Suspicion — "Lloyd George Decisive Figure."

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Sir Hamar Greenwood, Secretary for Ireland, in an article appearing in tomorrow's edition of the Weekly Dispatch, says "achievement, not humiliation, is the note in the treaty of peace with Ireland for the Irish race throughout the world." His article deals with a review of events leading up to the signing of the Anglo-Irish agreement. "It will cement our empire, make Anglo-American friendship permanent, and remove from international affairs persistent challenge to British prestige and strength," says Sir Hamar.

The Government's policy of a united Cabinet and the stand taken by a majority of the present Parliament, which "never adopted the pre-war attitude toward Ireland," are assigned by the writer as the chief factors in the success of the conference.

Irish Signers Young Ireland.

"Michael Collins," he said, "was the moving spirit of the Irish Republican army, and the conference happily concluded was etween men representing the fighting forces. His colleagues and himself were the young Ireland, the real Ireland of the south and west. Both sides knew the alternative to the treaty was more bloodshed. The Prime Minister and the Cabinet considered it perfectly obvious that, if peace was to be mde with Ireland it must be made with fighting Sinn Fein. Therefore, the Dail was allowed the selection of representatives without suggestions being made, as some timid people wished that the leaders of the Irish Republican army should be excluded."

Calling attention to the fact that he was the last Chief Secretary for Ireland and that he was a Canadian by birth, Sir Hamar says he always was an out-and-out home-ruler.. "I believe all the fears about the future of Ireland are groundless," he says. "The history of Canada and South Africa will be more than realized in our newest free state."

He says that when Lloyd George apopinted him, the Prime Minister said: "Hamar, I want you to go to Ireland. It is a tough job. Face the realities. You may fail. You may get shot. You may win. Talk it over with Lady Greenwood."

Sir Hamar says "the Irish policy from start to finish was that of the whole Cabinet," adding that the establishment of the Parliament of North Ireland was "an indispensable preliminary to a settlement of the whole question and to ultimate unity of Ireland."

He praises Sir James Craig's courage in making one of the first gestures for peace in meeting Eamonn de Valera in Dublin last May. He describes Sir James as "an outstanding Irishman who may yet be Prime Minister of all Ireland."

With reference to the first meeting in London with the Irish delegates, he says, "I am bound to admit that my immediate interest was in Mr. Michael Collins. I had never seen him before. For many months he evaded capture and his escapes constitute a thrilling chapter of his life. Now he sat opposite at a table of peace. We were face to face at last with the men who really represented the faith and aspirations of Southern Ireland and who alone could make an effective and lasting peace."

"Our greatest task," says Sir Hamar in conclusion, "was to allay suspicion, a work of magnitude that called for tremendous patience. The Prime Minister was a dominating and decisive figure. He concentrated all his energies toward the erection of a peace based upon trust and good will. The signing of the treaty was, I think, the great personal achievement in his career.

"It now remains for the Irish people of the South and the North to settle for themselves the future of their own country."

Cardinal Logue and Nine Other Prelates Approve Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

BELFAST, Dec. 10.—The Irish Independent today announces that it has received the following expressions of opinion from members of the hierarchy on Eamonn de Valera's stand with regard to the Anglo-Irish peace agreement:

Cardinal Logue: I am in favor of the treaty being ratified. I think Mr. de Valera, in his declaration, acted unfairly in prejudicing the decision of the Dail Eireann. I shall probably call a meeting of the Bishops early next week. The country should be consulted.

Archbishop Gilmartin: Quoted as saying he is strongly in favor of ratification of the peace treaty signed by the Irish plenipotentiaries.

Archbishop Harty: I hope the peace treaty between England and Ireland will be ratified.

Bishop Brownrigg: I heartily wish the peace treaty ratified.

Bishop Foley: It would be a great calamity if the peace terms were not ratified. Apart from a few particulars, the terms are far better than expected.

Bishop O'Doherty: I am in favor of ratification. I cannot understand the President's announcement.

Bishop Gaughran thinks the settlement ought to inaugurate an era of peace and prosperity in Ireland.

Bishop Browne: In favor of ratification.

Bishop Finegan: In favor of ratification.

Bishop Mulhern of Dromore: Does not wish to interfere at this stage.

PEACE TERMS ATTACKED BY FRIENDS OF IRISH FREEDOM

Judge Cohalan, Addressing Convention, Says Same Position as America's Is Goal.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Attacks on Great Britain and the peace terms she has offered Ireland, voiced by speakers at the convention of the Friends of Irish Freedom today were cheered to the echo by more than 1700 delegates representing every State of the Union.

Daniels Cohalan, State Supreme Court Justice, who was elected permanent convention chairman, received an ovation when he declared the Irish in America would never be satisfied and would never cease work until Ireland received a Government "with the same institutions and the same freedom that America has."

Justice Cohalan also attacked British influences which he said were seeking to control American opinion.

"We give notice to England at home, as to her representatives in Ireland and in America," he declared, "that Mr. Harding and Mr. Hughes are not going to be able to have their present scheme of alliance put through any more than Mr. Wilson and Mr. House put through their League of Nations."

Edward F. McSweeney of Boston told the convention of work the Knights of Columbus are doing in an effort to bring about revision of public school histories, which, he declared, omitted important phases of the early struggle of the American colonies with Great Britain.

ORDINANCE TO LEASE INFIRMARY TO GOVERNMENT PASSED

Rental of $50,000 Called for in Measure Approved by Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen yesterday, at a special session, passed an ordinance approving the lease of the infirmary building and one of the buildings of the Isolation Hospital by the city to the United States Government for $50,000 annually, and later took a holiday adjournment to Jan. 6.

The Government has been using the buildings since November, 1918, as a hospital for disabled soldiers, at an annual rental of $12,000, under a lease made by the Mayor and Comptroller and negotiated during the war. City and Federal officials recognized this sum was no adequate buildings, but was agreed to by the compensation for the use of the city as a patriotic duty at that time.

City Counselor Caulfield, after several trips to Washington, convinced the Surgeon-General's office and the Treasury Department that a fair rental for the two buildings, which are estimated with the ground to be worth $1,000,000, would be $50,000 annually, and it was agreed by those departments that if the Board of Aldermen passed an ordinance on that basis they would recommend its approval to the United States Comptroller.

Wins Oratorical Contest.

FULTON, Mo., Dec. 10.—W. O. Sawyers of St. Joseph, a senior at Westminster College, last night won the annual Bobyns oratorical contest and will represent the school in the State contest later in the year. Because Sawyers was given the prize of $50 last year, when he was second, the money this year is divided between Charles Grow of Fulton and Stanley Clay of Joplin, who were tied for second place.

G. O. P. FUSION FIGHT CHARGED TO OLD GUARD

Opposition to Constitution Convention Plan May Be Forerunner to Factional Split.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 10.—Discussion of the expected controversy in the Republican State Committee here Monday over the proposal that the Republican State organization and that of the Democrats should nominate a fusion ticket of candidates for delegates-at-large to the constitutional convention instead of going into a bitter fight for control of that body, trends to the view hat "Old Guard" leaders who oppose the plan are doing so largely to enable them to come to issue with administration forces in the committee. Both the State Committees will meet here Monday.

No hint of dissension in Democratic ranks has been heard, sentiment among them seeming to be unanimously for the fusion idea that each State Committee should name seven and jointly choose the fifteenth of a slate of candidates for the 15 delegates at large to be elected.

Only passing attention has been paid to a group of names suggested by the New Constitution Association for consideration in making up a fusion slate. So far, no Republican list has made its appearance, though it is understood that one has been made up privately.

Democratic List.

Democrats, however, yesterday were passing around a list here on which appeared 15 names as possibilities for the seven places to be filled. One woman, Mrs. Katherine Halleran of Mount Vernon, was on the list, which included the following men: Marion C. Early, Daniel G. Taylor and Jesse McDonald of St. Louis; John I. Williamson, former Supreme Judge, and Floyd Jacobs, former Prosecuting Attorney of Jackson County, both of Kansas City; M. E. Benton of Neosho; George A. Mahan of Hannibal; W. H. Meredith of Poplar Bluff; A. T. Dumm of Jefferson City; S. D. Hunter of Cape Girardeau; Dr. H. F. Parker of Warrensburg, head of the American Legion in Missouri; Charles H. Mayer of St. Joseph and John W. Halliburton of Carthage.

A telephone poll of the Democratic committee by Secretary Thomas H. Fisher indicated that most of the 64 men and women will be present. No line could be obtained on the attendance expected by Republican leaders, as Dr. E. B. Clements, chairman of their committee, was in St. Louis today trying to still the demands of Republican National Committeeman Jacob L. Babler and Frederick Essen, Republican boss of St. Louis County, that Republicans make an effort to elect delegates-at-large independently of the Democrats.

Friends of Clements here are inclined to hold Walter S. Dickey of Kansas City responsible for the outburst from Essen and Babler, though they profess to be unable to fathom the reasons for the stand.

Republicans not allied with either the "Old Guard" or the administration, however, regarded it as the first preliminary show of force between those factions, preparatory to the campaign of next year. It is known that Clements attached to his letter to the Republican committeemen and committee women a rider asking them "if you cannot come or find some good Republican to represent you, please send your proxy in blank to me." So it is expected that the administration will have a working majority present when the committee convenes.

First Republican Files for Delegate-at-Large.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 10.—C. A. Greene, Republican, Superintendent of Schools of Sedalia, is the first candidate for delegate-at-large to the constitutional convention to file the required petitions with Secretary of State Baker.

Greene's petitions, with a typewritten introduction and summary, were nicely bound with a cloth cover, so that they may be preserved with little difficulty by the Secretary of State. They bear 2690 signatures, 925 more than the required number, which must be equal to 5 per cent of the vote cast in the home district of the candidate. Greene is not on the list submitted by the New Constitution Association to the Republican and Democratic State committees for the proposed fusion ticket.

IRON WORKER ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF EMBEZZLEMENT

Former Secretary of Foundry Employes Accused of $227 Shortage.

William Ellis, 43 years old, of 6319 Catalpa street, an iron worker, was arrested yesterday on an information issued in the Circuit Attorney's office charging embezzlement of $227 of union funds.

Ellis denied any embezzlement. He said that he formerly had been financial secretary of the United Foundry Employes of America, an association of employes of the Fulton Iron Works. When the business lull threw him out of work last August, he said, he retired from his office. He said that there then was $40 in the union's treasury and that later members of the union had come to him saying that there was a discrepancy in the union's accounts.

He told them, he said, that so far as he was concerned there was no discrepancy.

TWO DISCHARGED FROM STATE OF BANKRUPTCY

Henry Ziegenhein and J. A. Christopher Freed from Further Debt Claims.

Among 25 persons previously adjudged bankrupt who were discharged from their formal state of bankruptcy in the Federal Court yesterday were Henry Ziegenhein, son of a former Mayor of St. Louis, and J. Arthur Christopner, former vice president and treasurer of the Christopher & Simpson Iron Works.

Christopher filed a schedule in May, 1919, setting out his liabilities as $296,000 and his assets as $[illegible]000. He attempted a defense on the ground that a bankruptcy proceeding could not be maintained against him, as he was a farmer, but this claim was not allowed.

Ziegenhein filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the Federal Court a year ago, setting forth his liabilities as $11,370 and his assets as $90. He listed 64 creditors, most of the debts being small, and owing to such establishments as butcher, grocers, cleaning and pressing shops.

MASKED MEN RAID JAIL; KILL YOUTH AND WOUND WOMEN

Jailer's Nephew at Jackson, Breathitt County, Ky., Shot in Futile Attempt at Rescue.

PRISONERS DESIRED HAD BEEN REMOVED

Wife of Deputy and Jailer's Daughter, Near Death, Tell of Recognizing Men in Attacking Party.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JACKSON, Ky., Dec. 10.—[illegible] knowing the prisoners they sought to free already had been taken away, seven masked men attacked the Breathitt County jail early today, shot the jailer's son, daughter and daughter-in-law and driven out by the pistol fire of Albert Roberts, 17-year-old nephew, killed the youth as they fled.

A posse of heavily armed officers with warrants for three of the recognized members of the mask band, has gone in search of them and State troops are on their way here. The hunted men are expected to offer fight.

Mrs. Oscar Allen, 35 years old, wife of Deputy Jailer Oscar Allen, son of Jailer A. A. Allen, and Miss Maggie Allen, 25, the jailer's daughter, cannot live through the night. These women made statements before they had recognized Fred Noble, a son of his son, Beach Noble, as members of the attacking party.

Officers Hear of Plot.

Four Nobles, prisoners, three sentenced for life, were taken to Winchester yesterday when reports were received by officers of a plot of relatives to free them.

Shortly after midnight, Jailer Allen was aroused by a knock on a bedroom door in the residence section of the jail. He opened the door and peered into the dark hall.

"We have a prisoner we want locked up," the leader told him.

The jailer called to his son, Oscar, on the second floor, and returned to bed.

"Oscar has the keys—he'll attend to it," the jailer replied.

Then he called to the son, Oscar, ing on the second floor. The jailer could not tell in the darkness that the men were masked.

As the son rounded the stairway he turned his flashlight on the men and saw their faces were covered. He stepped back and the men opened fire. Oscar Allen, shot in the head, fell. His wife, rushing from her room, threw herself between the stream of bullets and his body and fell with three bullets in her body. Maggie Allen, a sister of the deputy, followed by Roberts, also came running out. She, too, fell, probably fatally wounded.

Youth Returns the Fire.

Young Roberts, who was armed, returned the shots. The attackers turned and ran out of the door, followed by Roberts, who, although Young Roberts, who was armed, returned the shots. The attackers turned and ran out of the door, followed by Roberts, who, although wounded, continued to fire, as he followed them into the street, where the youth received his fatal wound. The firing lasted hardly more than a minute.

The attackers returned to their horses, hitched at the edge of town, and escaped into the country.

Lieut. James M. Wooten of Hazard and Capt. Henry M. Holbrook of Whitesburg have arrived with 22 National Guardsmen, two machine guns and four automatic rifles.

It is said that a score or more of men were in the crowd, but only seven took part in the shooting. They rode to the edge of town on horseback and went to the jail afoot. They returned to their horses after the brief expedition to the jail and rode away.

MAUDE MOORE FREED IN SECOND TRIAL FOR MURDER

Crowds in Knoxville Courtroom Cheer and Throw Hats Into Air When Finding Is Returned.

JURORS ARE OUT ONLY SIX MINUTES

Woman, Who Killed Man on Tennessee Pike, Will Return to Tacoma, Where She Fled and Was Married

By the Associated Press.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 10.—A verdict of not guilty was returned by the jury in the case against Maude Moore, charged with the murder of Leroy Harth, a business man, in the Knox County court late today. The verdict was reached six minutes after the jury received the case.

The defendant, known as Maude Moore, which is her maiden name, in reality is Mrs. W. H. Stubbs, wife of the proprietor of a hotel in Tacoma, Wash.

The killing occurred on Kingston Pike near Knoxville Sept. 8, 1919.

Cheering Greets Verdict.

When the verdict was announced the defendant and her mother rushed to the jurors with outstretched hands while the crowd cheered and threw their hats in the air.

Judge Nelson hurriedly adourned court and left the bench.

The defendant announced she would leave immediately to join relatives in Tacoma. Evidence was introduced by the defense to show that she had shot Harth in self-defense, although the State contended she had shot him in an attempt at robbery.

In Car on Pike.

Maude Moore, a stenographer, killed Leroy D. Harth about 10 o'clock on the night of Sept. 8, 1919, while the two were together in an automobile on the Kingston pike, about three miles south of Knoxville.

Harth was shot near the heart and died a few minutes afterwards on the front porch of a man by the name of Jett, who lived a distance of about 200 feet from where Harth was shot. The woman tried at first to escape in Harth's automobile, but she could not start the engine. So she fled afoot, running across from Kingston to the Clinton pike and coming into Knoxville.

She went to a house in which Martin Hunter roomed on Asylum avenue. Seemingly an associate of Hunter's the woman invoked his aid there and he is said to have procured clothing for her. She changed clothing in the hall below his room and waited there until day was breaking.

Hid in a Cave.

Then she and Hunter left the house and boarded a Sevierville pike street car. They went to a large cave on the south bank of the Tennessee River, east of Knoxville, and there the woman concealed herself during the day following the killing. Hunter remained with her but in the late afternoon he came to the city and notified the authorities of the whereabouts of the woman whom Harth said shot him. Hunter went with detectives in an automobile to the place where Maude Moore was hiding, and there she was apprehended.

After leaving Knoxville in her flight the former stenographer is said to have boarded a train at Clinton, Tenn., and then gone by rail to Danville, Ky., proceeding to Louisville, Cleveland, St. Louis and Kansas City. Thence she went straight west to Billings, Mont., later to Spokane, and then to Tacoma. She knew that detectives were on her trail, but is reported to have said that had she known there was any immediate danger she would have left the United States. Letters received by her mother in Louisville, Ky., are said to have been sent to friends in Los Angeles and mailed.

The verdict of the jury was that she was guilty, and a sentence of 21 years in the penitentiary was given her. The verdict was appealed, and the decision was reversed by the Supreme Court on the ground that the sentence was improperly imposed.

The second trial was set, but when the date arrived Maude Moore was not to be found. She had been a fugitive from justice ever since, until apprehended at Tacoma. In Tacoma she married Stubbs.

NADEAU FUNERAL TOMORROW

Woman, Who Died at 93, Was Member of Early Day Family.

Funeral services for Mrs. Julia Virginia Nadeau, 93 years old, of 4048 Shenandath avenue, who died Thursday evening of pneumonia, will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning at St. Margaret's Catholic Church, 3868 Flad avenue. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Mrs. Nadeau was the oldest representative of the Sanguinet family of early St. Louis days and was to have participated in the Lafayette ball at the recent centennial celebration, which was abandoned because of the great crowd that assembled in Twelfth street and prevented the participants from reaching. Miss Estelle Nadeau and Mrs. J. O. Allen of St. Louis and Mrs. A. F. Chase of Minneapolis, survive.

PACKER SAYS STRIKE CAN'T BE ARBITRATED

Armour & Co. Officer Says No Wage Dispute Exists and Operation Is Nearly Normal.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—The strike of packing house employes throughout the country cannot be settled by arbitration, Arthur Meeker, vice-president of Armour & Co., declared tonight in a statement outlining the present situation in the country's stockyards.

Mr. Meeker declared the packers had agreed with their employes over wages through the employe representation plan recently instituted and that consequently there were no differences between the packers and their men.

"The few workers who have walked out can do as they please," Mr. Meeker said tonight. "The great bulk of the employes are satisfied. These are the men we are interested in, and since there is no need for arbitration where there is no dispute, naturally we are not seeking an arbitrator."

Meeker was approached today by Government agents seeking to settle the strike. They were shown the Armour plant and plainly told that the packers took the attitude that there was nothing to arbitrate.

"Our plans throughout the country," says a statement issued by Meeker, "were able to operate at about 80 per cent of normal during the past week and there is no indication that the public will be seriously inconvenienced. Eastern packers have slaughtered heavily and taken up the slack. It is our expectation that we will be operating in normal manner within a week. We have had no difficulty in keeping our plants operating in cities where our workers have been accorded proper protection."

Packing Strikers Hold Mass Meeting and Parade.

The second day of the packing house strike was concluded yesterday with a parade at noon in East St. Louis and a mass meeting last night at 2301 South Broadway. Union leaders asserted last night that more than 2500 union workers, including 200 girls, are remaining away from their former jobs at the East Side packing plants and that approximately 2000 unionists are on strike in St. Louis.

Earl Jimerson of East St. Louis, international vice president of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen's Union, informed strikers that a representative of the United States Department of Labor had visited the packing houses in Chicago and East St. Louis preliminary to offering the department's services in mediation of the strike.

Managers of the East St. Louis plants denied the report.

Following the parade in East St. Louis Jimerson, in an address in front of the city hall, counseled the strikers to remain peaceful.

At the meeting last night which was addressed by President Wood of the State Federation of Labor, President Metcalf and Secretary Kuhn of the St. Louis branch of the Butchers' Union, Kuhn informed the audience that 95 per cent of the union workers formerly employed by the "big five" packing companies in their plants throughout the country are on strike. He said the packing plants in St. Louis involved in the strike had been making an effort to get skilled workmen from other cities and, having failed, were employing unskilled labor to take the places of the strikers. This later was denied by counsel for the employers.

McMillen, Badly Beaten by Noye, Given Decision

500 Spectators Surprised When Referee White Raises Local Boy's Hand.

THOMAS OUTBOXES LUCAS

Official, However, Calls Bout a Draw Explaining That "Neither Boxer Tried."

Five hundred cash customers who attended the boxing show of the War Veterans' Association at the Armory last night, were so dumfounded at Referee Jack White's decision in the main event between Johnny Noye of St. Paul and Joe McMillen of St. Louis, that they could not even boo when White raised McMillen's hand in token of victory. The spectators, who had seen the St. Louis boy beaten from pillar to post were left absolutely speechless by White's decision.

Even McMillen was surprised. White, in order to raise Joe's hand, had to climb through the ropes after him. By this time the fans had recovered enough to crowd around the ring.

From the fifth round on the small crowd marveled at McMillen's ability to stand punishment and come back for more.

Joe Takes a Beating.

McMillen received as bad a beating as any fighter in a local ring in many a day. His face was cut; his left cheek was opened by Noye's smashes, while both his eyes were closed. When McMillen entered the ring he wore white trunks. However, when he departed they were a Bolshevik red, all the blood being his own.

During the last five rounds the local boxer was in such a bad way that his seconds continually pleaded with him to step around, so that Noye could not set himself for a punch.

To everyone in the Armory, with the exception of Referee White, Noye won the bout. In only the first three or four rounds did McMillen have a chance. In these sessions, Noye was wild and missing and McMillen piled up some points using a left jab. But after that it was a massacre with McMillen on the receiving end.

In the eleventh round the bell saved the St. Louisan from a knockout. He spent the twelfth session holding on for dear life. Again in the following round he was saved by the bell. In round No. 14 Noye belted McMillen from one side of the ring to the other without even receiving a return. McMillen did stand up and try to swap punches with the St. Paul lightweight in the final round.

In several of the rounds, McMillen landed hard wallops, but not once during the bout did Noye back up. He continually waded in, and seemingly had no defense, always being willing to take a punch in order to land one. During the entire 15 rounds, the St. Paul boxer stood flat-footed.

Thomas Outboxes Lucas.

In the semiwindup, Al Thomas gave Johnny Lucas, another St. Louisan, a boxing lesson for 10 rounds, and clearly won the bout, but White called it a draw. After the contest, White explained to Judge Robert W. Hall, a member of the boxing commission, that he had called the contest a draw because he thought neither boy had tried.

The two preliminaries proved farces. In the scheduled six-round clash between Daring Dan Taylor and Al Ahner, Taylor lander a hard punch to Ahner's stomach early in the first round. Ahner spent a great deal of time holding the place he had been hit and Taylor popped him on the jaw. Later he repeated to the stomach. Early in the second, Taylor again hit Ahner in the stomach and he found a soft spot on the mat and decided he had enough for the night.

Dunn Quits in Second.

The preliminary brought together Joe Meeks and Jimmy Dunn, who was introduced as the "sensation of Manhattan." And sensation he proved—not. The bout went into the second round. Then Dunn hit his only punch in the 4½ minutes of boxing and quit. He gave no explanation. However, after he had changed to his street clothes, he entered the ring and explained to the crowd that he did not quit, but that he had injured his thumb and if Meeks wanted to he would be willing to continue the argument after the main event. The callenge was not accepted.

It was announced that the Business Men's A. C. would hold a show at the Armory Wednesday with Bud Purrell meeting the winner of last night's main event in the feature. Kern and Malcor box in the semiwindup. Two preliminaries will be arranged.

The Red Badge of Courage . . . . . By Edgren

Courage Essential in Any Sport To Reach Pinnacle, Edgren Says

Army and Navy Football Elevens Are Splendid Examples of Gameness—Tom Sharkey, Kid McCoy and Fitzsimmons Typify Fighting Spirit—Even Golfers Have to Have It to Climb High.

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1921.)

A QUARTER of a century ago Stephen Crane wrote a great war story and called it "The Red Badge of Courage."

You don't have to go to war to find men who wear the Badge of Courage. I've seen it in many fields of sport. Sometimes it isn't red. It may be the color of mud, like the Army and Navy teams when they fought to a 7—0 Navy victory at the Polo Grounds two weeks ago.

I always like to see that Army-Navy game. There's never a second in it when either team sags in even the most momentary admission of impending defeat. It's "fight, fight, fight" all the way, just like the chant of the rooters. The badge of courage is always fluttering where Army and Navy play.

That last three minutes, for instance, in the recent game, when the Army team, battling for a long hour, in mud ankle deep, against a foe that had the edge in team play and brilliant individual ground gaining runs, made its last furious attack and came within a few yards of reaching the Navy goal line.

Every man on both teams was mud-plastered from head to foot, so that the field seemed in the possession of a twisting, tumbling mass of black warriors, indistinguishable one from another except for the positions they leaped to as each new play started.

The Army had not been able to make ground against the Navy's strong defense. For 54 minutes it had not made first down. But it never stopped trying.

Courage Was in Evidence.

Suddenly French broke through, evaded one tackler after another, and ran 30 yards through the mud before Noyes cut him down 22 yards from the Navy goal line. Then, driving furiously, the Army crashed along to the eight-yard line, where the Navy held the first fresh attack. Came a forward pass—and a leaping mud-smeared Navy back intercepted the ball and turned back the fighting Army team until the whistle blew.

The muddy badge of courage might have been pinned on every man of both teams. There wasn't a moment of weakening by any man in the long, hard struggle. It's always that way. Courage, above all other things, is the demand of the game at West Point and Annapolis.

The same may be said of every college team, although in ability to fight a losing battle to the last second of play, without for an instant showing a sign of discouragement or weakness, Army and Navy are supreme.

Tribute From Tad Jones.

I was talking this over with Tad Jones of Yale.

"They always fight every step of the way," said Tad. "That's why some people say they don't play as clever a game of football as some of the colleges do. They play mighty good football. But the cleverest attack in the world may not make much of a showing when it goes against a fighting defense. These Army and Navy teams, on the defensive, line up like a lot of wildcats, ripping, tearing, clawing.

"If they can't get an arm or a leg," said Jones, grinning, "they'll take an ear. That's the spirit those boys have."

"It's the spirit that animated Sergt. Woodfill, U. S. A., when his ammunition ran low in battle in France, and he cleaned out the last German machine gun nest by charging into it with a pickaxe. The Red Badge of Courage! He had it!

Gameness in the Ring.

I've often been asked who was the gamest man I ever saw in the ring. That's a question impossible to answer, because after all a majority of men are game. Fighters are usually game, for if they hadn't been game they never would have gone far in their profession. And when a man is game there's no half-way station for him—he's game to the finish.

But a few incidents stand out in my mind—pictures that will not fade. There is one of Kid McCoy, sneeringly beating Kid Carter with punches designed to finish him slowly, suddenly caught by a desperate swing and knocked out cold.

The bell rang while McCoy was down and unconscious. His seconds ran in, lifted him and dragged him toward his corner. McCoy woke up. Dazed, he pushed the seconds away and looked around for Carter, to see him, grinning, just sitting down in his chair.

McCoy tried to walk toward his corner, reeled sideways to the ropes, and refusing aid pulled himself slowly along, guided by the top rope, until he reached his corner and sat down. Only half a minute remained for the rest, and as the bell rang McCoy rose unsteadily, walked straight across the ring, still unable to raise his hands, and dizzily ducked under Carter's first blow into a saving clinch. Six times McCoy was knocked down, but fought grimly and had turned the tide of battle and had Carter reeling himself when the last bell rang at the end of six rounds.

Only a few nights ago at Madison Square Garden I saw a fine bit of courageous fighting when Joe Lynch (who was a good soldier in France, by the way) weathered heavy punishment by Midget Smith when it looked sure Lynch must go down and be counted out. And Lynch not only lasted but came through fighting so furiously all the way that the judges gave him a "draw" for his courage, when he was undoubtedly beaten.

Courage makes a good football player, baseball player, boxer, tennis player, golfer. It is the first requirement in a good race horse. A "front runner" never lasts. It's the horse that wears the Red Badge of Courage that becomes a great champion.

Golfers Have It.

It may seem odd to put courage as the first requirement in a game like golf, that entails no punishment or great endurance. I've heard boxers say it's easy to be game when you're not being hit on the chin. But what quality was it that made Hutchison outplay his best form when he was in a nip-and-tuck match for the British championship, although worried at the time by a heart trouble that was aggravated by nerve strain and the feeling that his boyhood friends at St. Andrews were looking on with hostile eyes?

Jim Barnes had some right to wear the Red Badge of Courage, too, when he won the Open Championship this year, after several attempts that failed. Just as he was starting a friend asked him if he felt nervous.

"Why," said Barnes, "a championship is only another game."

The man who can start in that spirit has his battle half won.

"I've seen a football captain, Don Gillis, with his leg broken, in the first half, refuse to be taken from the field, and lie on a red blanket in the mud of the sidelines to watch his team make a desperate uphill fight, so that his presence would encourage the boys. That red blanket was his Red Badge of Courage.

I remember when Locomotive Smith of Columbia knocked out eight times in a game with Yale, reeled through the plays until the last whistle blew.

Sharkey Had Courage.

Tom Sharkey, with three broken ribs, rushed Jim Jeffries without wincing until the end of the twenty-fifth round and wanted to fight the referee when he lost the decision. He couldn't believe defeat possible.

I saw Bob Fitzsimmons, fighting with both hands broken, three first knuckles of his right shattered and driven back an inch or more, turn his wrist up to deliver blows with the one knuckle that remained and grin.

I've seen a "beaned" ball player get up from the dust and take a few reeling steps toward first base before he fell in a heap.

I've seen steeplechase jockeys, thrown and rolled on by their falling mounts, try to climb back into the saddle to finish the race, and water polo players brought up half drowned from the bottom of a tank struggle to get back into the game.

Remember Dorando—the game little Italian runner who came first into the Stadium at London, only to fall time and again, unconscious from exhaustion, rising and reeling on again when Johnny Hayes came up behind him? He could have worn the Red Badge.

Looking back over the endless list, it seems to me that the wearer of the Red Badge of Courage is the man who makes good, win or lose.

And beside wearing the Red Badge winning or losing is a small affair.

Centre College Is Ready to Carry Out Coast Game Contract

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 10. OVER long-distance telephone today J. B. McGee, manager of the Centre College football team at Danville, said that Centre is ready to meet any legitimate college or university team which the San Diego Chamber of Commerce may select, in the game to be played on Dec. 26.

"We regret very much that Notre Dame canceled their contest," said McGee. "However, Centre College has a valid contract with the San Diego people and the money, $16,000, is deposited in a Danville bank to assure the carrying out of the obligations. We have wired Robert E. Hughes, vice president and managing director of the San Diego Chamber of Commerce that Centre stands ready to fulfill its contract to the letter."

$14,000 Bid for 5-Year Concession At Public Course

John Manion Offers $2800 a Year for Privileges at Municipal Golf Links.

When the Board of Public Service holds its meeting at the City Hall next Tuesday, John Manion, brother of Jimmy Manion, State golf champion, probably will be awarded the golf concessions at Forest Park for the next five years. Recently bids were let by the board and Manion's was the best received. There were five bidders.

Manion, who at present is caddy master and assistant golf professional at the Sunset Hill Country Club, bid $14,000 for a five-year contract, or $2800 a year. This figure, according to an announcement from the Board of Public Service office yesterday, will likely be approved.

Concessions at the Forest Park public course include the sale and repairing of golf clubs and other incidentals needed in the pursuit of the game. It also includes the giving of lessons.

While not officially announced it was learned that the bids for one year of the others were as follows: Otto Held, $1850; Pep brothers, $1750; Bert Ryan, $1650, and E. H. Dewe, $1210.

It is understood that Dewe, who has been at the Forest Park course for a number of years, will within a short time open an indoor golf school.

According to information, a Chicago concern probably will open a golf school here soon.

Morvich Will Be Entered in 1922 Kentucky Classic

Unbeaten Two-Year-Old Will Make First Appearance Next Year in Derby.

Unless the unforeseen happens, the next time that Morvich, Ben Block's two-year-old champion of the current year, is seen under colors will be in the 1922 Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs. The brown son of Runnymede—Hymir—went into winter quarters at Jamaica recently with Mawrcoron, the only other member of the Block establishment, and he will enjoy a well-earned rest from now until early in the new year. This is a rather small stable, but it was the most useful on the metropolitan circuit during the past season. Owner Block has yet to see his colors go down in defeat, as Morvich won 11 races, while Mawrcoron won the only three in which he started in his interest.

Block, who is a wealthy New York broker, has had designs on the Kentucky Derby since his colt first displayed his greatness early in the summer. He realized one ambition when Morvich went through the year with a perfect record, and next in order naturally comes a desire to win honors in the Derby. With Block, the financial end of owning a great horse like Morvich is of secondary importance, as he derives considerable pleasure in seeing his silks carried to victory regardless of the value of the race.

Comparison of Colts.

Unlike Samuel D. Riddle, owner of Man o' War, Block is desirous of turf patrons in all sections getting an opportunity to witness Morvich in action. Riddle did not even enter Man o' War in the Derby, giving as his reason that the race was too early in the year and the son of Fair Play would have to be rushed in his training. He won the Preakness, at Pimlico, however, and this rich event was decided just one week later than the blue ribbon event at Churchill Downs.

A comparison of Man o' War and Morvich is not out of order by any means. If anything, the odds are in favor of the latter, as he never ducked the issue as a single time and was not coddled as was the Riddle colt. The latter had several practical "set-ups" as a 2-year-old, while every time that Morvich "stepped in the park" the best juveniles in the East were pitted against him. He began his career as a selling platter, winning a stake under selling conditions his first out, and his next start found him duplicating this performance. From then on he was recognized as the champion of his age, and proved the right to this title by winning the $30,000 Hopeful Stakes and $40,000 Pimlico Futurity.

Mild Winter Would Help.

Racing enthusiasts at Saratoga last summer were clamoring for a meeting between Morvich and Miss Joy throughout the season. Several times it appeared as though they would clash, but for some reason or another Miss Joy was always sidetracked when it was a certainty that Morvich would be a certain starter. There was no comparison between these two horses, the latter being of those best informed of turf affairs, as the colt was pounds better than the filly. This is no disgrace to her, and had she been defeated by him, there would have been no sting to it. Block sought in vain to send his colt after the fleet daughter of Peter Quince, but Trainer J. C. Milam ruled otherwise.

A mild winter would be a great help to Trainer Fred Burlew in preparing Morvich for the Derby, but regardless of climatic conditions he will be gotten ready for the rich event.

AMERICAN RACE HORSES AT MEXICO CITY TRACK

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 10.—Fifty horses which recently completed the racing season at the Bowie track in Maryland, arrived here yesterday as the first consignment of United States entries for the Mexico racing season which opens Jan. 14 under the auspices of the International Jockey Club of Mexico. More than 300 horses are to be shipped from the United States, the next consignment coming from New Orleans, where the season has just closed.

The meeting here which will last 100 days, will bring more than 500 horses to Mexico City, according to club officials. The hippodrome De la Condesa, which was recently acquired by the Jockey Club, is being extensively remodeled. Brick stables to accommodate 500 horses are being constructed, an entirely new track has been laid out and a grand stand seating 7000 persons is under way.

U. S. ATHLETES CANNOT COMPETE IN CANADA

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 10.—The Amateur Athletic Union of Canada adopted an amendment to its rules today which will prevent any but Canadian citizens from competing in future Canadian track and field championships.

United States competitors have in the past taken a prominent part in Canadian meets and 20 of the 57 Canadian track and field records are held by athletes who are citizens of countries other than Canada.

The object of the change is to encourage Canadian athletes.

NOTRE DAME'S REASON FOR CANCELING GAME

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Dec. 10.—The Notre Dame University faculty board is opposed to a football game between Notre Dame and Centre College at San Diego, Cal., Dec. 26 because it does not believe it advisable to bring two teams from the same section of the country together in another part of the United States. This statement was made today with the announcement that so far as Notre Dame is concerned, all negotiations for such a contest are closed.

DAVIS CUP CHALLENGES WILL CLOSE MARCH 15

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Letters inviting challengers for the Davis cup, emblematic of the world's team tennis champion, were mailed today to competing nations of past years by the United States Lawn Tennis Association. The communication calls attention to the face that challengers for the 1922 competition will close on March 15.

Bowling Tourney Today.

A two-woman handicap sweepstakes tournament will be bowled on the Washington alleys tonight, starting at 8 o'clock. The event is open to any woman in the city with an established league average. The drawing will take place at 7 o'clock. The entry fee will be $1.60 a person. There will be three prizes.

SPORT SALAD

By L. C. Davis

A GOOD FELLOW.

I USED to be free with my matches,
And burned them by day and by night;
Now, I haven't a match
On my breeches to scratch,
And no one will give me a light.

I used to be free with my auto,
And paid no attention to thrift;
Now, my friends, as they pass,
Simply step on the gas,
And no one will give me a lift.

In times when I had the dinero,
I lavishly threw it away;
I flung a mean toe
As I scattered the dough;
Now, the fiddler's demanding his pay.

So now I'm approaching the dead line
And wondering where I will stop;
I'll either be found in the bread line
Or win my way back to the top.

NET PROFITS.

It is said that Tex Rickard, who was greatly impressed with the gate at the Davis Cup matches, will endeavor to pull off some tennis matches in Madison Square Garden. The net receipts have a strong appeal to Tex.

The draft system isn't so bad. It's the things you catch in the draft that gets your goat.

FRIENDLY RELATIONS.

WHICH same might serve to bridge the gap
That separates us from the Jap.

TOO TRUE.

You may talk about disarmament, but the world will not be free from scraps until all the boxing gloves have been scrapped.

OLD RELIABLE.

The California Winter League is figured to lose $45,000 on the season. But the old Hot Stove League as usual is in Easy street.

The team, if any, that plays California at the Tournament of Roses, will probably find that they have not fallen on a bed of roses.

KLUGMAN AND WEISS HAD GOOD MARKS IN WESTERN ASSOCIATION

Joe Klugman, first sacker and Benny Weiss, outfielder, St. Louis boys, who last season played with the Springfield club in the Western Association and who next spring will get tryouts with the Chicago Cubs, had good records for the 1921 campaign.

Official averages of the Western Association show that Klugman hit .289 and Weiss .281. Klugman was the leading base stealer with 44, and was tied for the lead in three baggers with 19.

Klugman played in 142 games, went to bat 557 times, scored 100 runs and made 161 hits. In addition to 19 triples, he had 25 doubles and two homers. Weiss batted 488 times, scored 80 runs, made 137 hits, with 30 doubles, eight triples and four homers. He pilfered 24 bases.

WATKINS IS VICTOR IN POLICE REVOLVER SHOOT

In the final match of the eight-weeks' handican tournament of the St. Louis Police Revolver Club, C. R. Watkins won with a total of 184¼ out of a possible 200 points. This makes him the winner of the match and he gets the first prize. The averages of the five winners are as follows:

	Handicap.
C. R. Watkins	30.75	88.25
F. C. Krug	14.25	86.25
Wm. J. F. Rich	.75	85.00

BEAUMONT CLUB WILL HAVE KNOT-HOLE GANG

Joe Mathes, president of the Beaumont club of the Texas League, announced yesterday that the Knot-Hole idea, inaugurated by the Cardinals here several years ago, would be introduced at Beaumont next season. Mathes said the idea had been used at Houston last year with good results.

Soldan Quintet Beaten in First Clash of Season

Last Season's Interscholastic Basket Champions Lose to Cleveland, 28-12.

Soldan High School, last year's interscholastic League basketball champion, got off on the wrong foot in the opening game of the season last night, being defeated by Cleveland High, 28 to 12, on the Cleveland court. Cleveland was the only team to defeat Soldan last season, when the West Enders won the championship.

In the second game of the double-header, Central was returned the victor over Yeatman, 31—25, in a well-played game.

A crowd, estimated at 2500, which filled the auditorium to overflowing, was on hand to witness the opening high-school tilts of the season.

In gaining the victory, Coach Fenenga used two complete teams. He allowed each quintet to play in minutes in each half. Both played equally well.

Soldan Players Tire.

Soldan showed a lack of proper coaching and made its best showing in the opening period, when the players were comparatively fresh. The score at the end of the first half was 11-9 in favor of Cleveland. However, the West End athletes tired badly in the second half, and Cleveland scored 17 points to 1. Early in the closing period Fenenga's aggregation ran up 7 points, while Soldan was scoring only one.

The game was featured by good and bad basketball. Both quintets resorted to numerous long shots. Team play of the two squads lacked polish. Hirsch played a good game as a roving guard for Soldan, while Kaiser and Barthel netted sensational field goals for Cleveland. Soldan's failure to run up a larger score was due to Levy's failure on five throws.

Central Trims Yeatman.

In winning from Yeatman, Central showed a good short passing game which, in the first half, enabled the Mid-City five to run up a lead of nine points, the score for the opening 20 minutes of play being 17 to 8. However, Yeatman rallied during the closing period, but was unable to overcome the Central lead.

Hebberger, at left forward in Walker's team, was the individual star of the game, scoring 17 points, six field goals and five free throws. Matthews played a great defensive game at guard. Steinman was the outstanding figure for Yeatman. Luenstroth proved weak on free throws.

KNABE WILL MANAGE KANSAS CITY BLUES

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 10.—Announcement was made at the office of the local American Association baseball club that Otto Knabe, manager of the club last season, had signed a contract to manage the team during the coming season. It also was announced that the club had received several offers from major league officials for "Bunny" Brief, local baseman who last season broke the minor league record by knocking out thirty home runs. One of the offers, it was announced, had come from the New York Giants, President Mcgraw's club is now in New York.

Football Squad Takes 5 Weeks To Become a Team, Roper Says

Shortness of Season Responsible for So Many Inconsistencies in Results, He Asserts, With Every Team "Pointing" Particularly for One or Two Principal Rivals.

By W. W. (Bill) Roper
Head Princeton Coach.
(Copyright, 1921.)

IN the old days, there were only half a dozen teams in any section of the country which had any claim whatever to championship honors and these uniformly outclassed their opposition.

The small student body, in the very nature of things, did not offer a coach a choice among as many heavy and big men as did the larger university and one could almost predict the result of a game by looking up the number of students in each of the two contending colleges.

The new rules make it possible, and even probable, that a college of 300 or 400 will turn out a team able to beat that of a university with ten times that number of undergraduates, and this is just what repeatedly happened this fall. This circumstance leads up to an altered aspect of the practice game idea.

The football public finds it hard, sometimes, to realize that a practice game no longer means one mentioned in a tone of casual disrespect, but one which, won or lost, is only a step in the development of the eleven. We are so used to expecting a big team to win every preliminary game, that we are inclined to attach a totally erroneous importance to the upsets which the modern rules make possible in every season.

Not a Team Early in Season.

While the record of any football team for the entire season must be taken into consideration in its ranking, I am firmly of the opinion that the football team does not exist until its season is five or six weeks along. Until that time, the coach may have a hundred players or so, but he has no team.

The baseball leagues begin their formal playing season at a period almos exactly corresponding to the stage at which college football elevens are disbanding. Their spring training trips occupy about the same length of time as the entire college football season, and they arrive at the opening of the league season in pretty much the same state of training and team play which the football teams display in early November.

It would certainly be silly to attempt anything like a championship baseball league during those spring training periods, and it is about as futile to talk of any football league in which every game would be a championship contest.

With the college term beginning in late September and the playing season ended by cold weather, before the end of November, it becomes a simple physical impossibility for a team to be developed into reasonably final shape before the last two or three games it plays, and those which come earlier than that are necessarily practice games whether or not they involve the certainty of defeat or victory, or an equal probability of an even fight.

Spirit of Rivalry.

To take a concrete example, I should like nothing better than a season which would be long enough for me to develop a team and then play besides Yale and Harvard, championship games against every other good team in our geographical territory. I should feel that the hard and tiring work of bringing a team together and perfecting its play would be better justified if we could use it against the stiffest kind of opposition more than twice.

And I am sure that most coaches would feel pretty much the same way about it. But we have a condition and not a theory to face, and facing it, we find that there are always one or two colleges toward which any other college has a particular and natural sense of an equality of rivalry, and these teams are almost inevitably, its choice for a final test of football mettle.

It is impossible to lessen or divert these curious natural antagonisms which link colleges and schools into pairs far more tightly than they can be united by mere friendship. There is no snobbery whatever about them, whether they concern powerful and great universities or small obscure colleges or preparatory schools.

Natural Friendly Enemies.

It is not snobbery nor exclusiveness which makes Lafayette and Lehigh so closely identified as rivals that one inevitably thinks of them as coupled; nor is it anything except an ineradicable bond of friendly enmity which links Pittsburgh and Penn State into a sort of twinship. Andover and Exeter, Williams and Amherst, Vanderbilt and Sewanee, Missouri and Kansas, California and Leland and Stanford, Chicago and Minnesota, Cornell and Pennsylvania, and so on with every college in the list and nearly every school, furnish striking proof that it is not exclusiveness, but something far different which guides a student body in its choice of its dearest enemy.

In the past, it has been possible to pick two or three teams in the East and say with a good deal of certainty this or that team is the strongest. But I feel it is a rash man who attempts to rate with any degree of certainty the premier team in this section this year. There are in my opinion nine first-class elevens and I will give them in alphabetical order. Cornell, Harvard, Lafayette, Navy, Penn State, Pittsburgh, Princeton, Washington and Jefferson and Yale.

Cornell, Lafayette and Washington and Jefferson have won every game on their schedule. Penn State has played to two ties and the others have been defeated once or more times during the season.

On percentage of games won and tied or lost, Cornell, Lafayette and Washington and Jefferson are, of course, at the head of the list, but it is no disparagement of these teams to bracket the six others with them. I have no hesitancy in saying any one of the nine at top form would be a mighty tough nut for the other eight to crack.

Cornell Lacks Opposition.

The Cornell team of this year was the best Cornell team since the days of Charlie Barrett. It was a great scoring machine built around a wonderful running back, Kaw. It is impossible to say how really good the team was because it was never really tested. It is hard not to fall into the error of over-estimating big scores. Cornell certainly romped through every team on the schedule with comparative ease. How could its rush line have stood up against the hard running attack of the Penn State or Navy backs? It is futile to make any comparison, so I won't attempt to try. The Ithacans certainly played consistent football and all Cornell men can be justly proud of their team.

The play of this year's Harvard eleven in its final game against Yale was a great tribute to the wonderful efficiency of the Crimson coaching system. The Princeton game took a lot out of the Harvard team and their wonderful comeback two weeks later certainly did everyone connected with the eleven a lot of credit. Harvard's field generalship and strategy never showed to better advantage than it did in this game.

I team in themselves.

They usually have good football teams at Lafayette, and this year's was one of the two greatest elevens in the history of the university. Prior to this fall, the 1896 Lafayette team was undoubtedly the best aggregation that ever represented the Easonians.

Number among its members Reinhard and Yost in the line, and Warbridge, Barclay and Bray in the backfield. This team defeated Pennsylvania, 6—4, and played the great Princeton eleven of that year a 0—0 tie.

The Yale team of this year is undoubtedly the best Blue eleven since the days of "Ted" Coy. While the season's record was spoiled to some extent by the Harvard defeat, Yale football is up and doing and the Yale eleven of next year will probably be a better team than this year's aggregation.

The outstanding figure at New Haven this fall was Capt. 'Mac" Aldrich, who combined the qualities of real leadership and expert play better than any captain I have seen.

National League Meeting Opens in New York Tuesday

American Leaguers Convene Wednesday With Joint Session on Thursday.

The coming week will be a busy one in baseball. First comes the annual meeting of the National League on Tuesday, followed by the American League gathering the following day. Thursday will be the combined meeting of the Major leagues, with the Minor league representatives called in.

The confab of the National League representatives should bring out some interesting announcements. It is almost certain there will be some aftermath to the famous New York-Cincinnati trade, which sent Heine Groh to the Giants in exchange for George Burns and Mike Gonzales and a cash consideration said to be $100,000.

Rival owners and managers were ready to do all in their power to block the trade. However, now that the deal has been announced it is likely something will be done to prevent a repetition of this sort of a trade.

Looks Like the Giants.

It is a certainty that rival managers will point out that with Groh in the batting order it will be almost impossible to stop the Giants in the struggle for the N. L. flag in 1922. With Groh, the Giants have one of the best infields in the circuit. Even McGraw has admitted that he now owns what he considers the greatest infield he has ever had. Manager Branch Rickey of the Cardinals was one of those who strongly opposed the trade. President Bill Veeck and Manager Killefer of the Cubs were others. In fact, the Bruins thought they had a chance to land the far corner guardian.

Principal interest in the American League gathering will be a probable trade between the Detroit Tigers and New York Yankees. With Babe Ruth and Bob Meusel suspended until May 20, 1922, the A. L. champions need outfielders. It is hinted that a deal will be made with the Tigers which would send Bob Veach and Howard Ehmke to the New York club for Johnny Mitchell, a rookie shortstop, a young pitcher and a cash consideration.

Huggins Could Use Veach.

One of the main issues to come up at the combined meeting of the majors and minors will be the "draft." Judge Landis, Commissioner of Baseball, at the minor league gathering at Buffalo last week made a strong appeal for the restoration of this feature. However, the minors announced nothing definite at the close of their meeting.

Two of the class AA circuits, the American Association and the Pacific Coast League, are strongly opposed to allowing the majors to draft players from their teams. Club owners in the International are split and the league's stand will be decided at the meeting of the magnates of this circuit, Tuesday.

Another feature for the major league owners to decide will be to devise a means of obtaining more material. Records of the past campaign clearly showed that the calibre of ball played in the two circuits was declining. It has even been hinted that the magnates would form training schools in which to develop the "sand lot" stars.

Average Price $5500.

The Buffalo meeting showed that players came high. One of the major league scouts who attended the gathering stated that the average price of minor league players was $5500. This scout also asserted that had tried to peddle a player going on 30 years of age for $4000. All this will have to be threshed out, when the owners get together.

While the Buffalo meeting was devoid of any news as far as the game itself was concerned, it brought out announcement of several startling trades. First in importance came the Groh deal.

However, the Giants figured in another deal, which not only set a new financial figure but also is a radical departure in baseball.

That was in the announced purchase of Jimmy O'Connell, infielder and outfielder of the San Francisco club. McGraw paid $75,000 for this player, who is not to be delivered until the spring of 1923. Baseball has seen delayed steals, delayed throws and even delayed paydays, but never before was there such a thing as a delayed reporting season. Baseball men at present are scratching their heads trying to figure whether a deal of this sort is good ethics.

Rickey Buys a Veteran.

Several other deals were announced at Buffalo. The Cardinals figured in one of these when they purchased the veteran Del Gainer from Milwaukee for cash.

Detroit also turned a big trade. The Tigers gave up a flock of players and a sum said to be $40,000 for Pillette and Johnson, two much sought pitchers from the Pacific Coast League.

Another trade was the one between Cincinnati and Oakland, which sent "Babe" Pinelli, third sacker, to the Cincinnati club for Pitchers Hod Eller, one of the stars of the notorious 1919 world's series, and Herb Brenton.

The Pacific Coast League seems to be the only one which has players to sell. Another infielder much sought is Kamm, a third sacker. It is hinted that the Browns are after this athlete.

At the meetings in New York this week, Clark Griffith, president of the Nationals, is expected to name a manager to succeed George McBride, while he also is trying to land Pitcher Dave Danforth from Columbus.

Missouri Decides to Play Billiken Team Oct. 28 Next Season

COLUMBIA, Mo., Dec. 10. Z. G. CLEVENGER, Director of Athletics at Missouri University, announced tonight that the Tigers would play St. Louis University in a football game at St. Louis, Oct. 28, next year. This was decided today at a meeting of the committee on intercollegiate athletes.

Missouri's 1922 gridiron schedule now includes games with St. Louis University, Ames, Kansas Aggies, Washington, Oklahoma and Kansas.

SAYRE, STAR HALFBACK, TO CAPTAIN M'KENDREE 1922 FOOTBALL SQUAD

Norris Sayre, halfback, has been elected captain of the next season's football team at McKendree College, Lebanon, Ill. Sayre, who is also a letter man in baseball, track and basketball, won the Southern Illinois intercollegiate football title for McKendree this season when he ran 50 yards for the winning touchdown in the title game with Shurtleff. He was named as all-state guard last season on the minor division of the "Little Nineteen" basketball team. He will be a senior next year.

Eleven men, including Sayre, were awarded their football letters. It also was announced that Gentry Adams, a member of last year's basketball squad, had been elected captain of the basketball team.

Coach Hall, who played with the Wabash College "Wonder Five," is expecting McKendree to be a strong contender for the basketball title this season. He has three letter men, Sayre, Adams and Garrett, to build around. As there are a number of substitutes from last year's squad and a large number of new recruits out for the squad he anticipates little difficulty in filling the other two places.

The schedule for the season follows: Dec. 7, Carlyle (Ill.) American Legion; Dec. 21, Luccock Union M. E. Church, St. Louis); Jan. 6, Young Boy School; Jan. 14, open; Jan. 20, Southern Illinois Normal; Jan. 27, Lincoln College; Feb. 4, Eden Seminary; Feb. 10, Shurtleff college; Feb. 17, Southern Illinois Normal; Feb. 24, Shurtleff College. The tournament of the "Little Nineteen" will commence on March 3.

35 AMATEURS ENTERED IN SOUTH SIDE SHOW

Thirty-five amateur boxers have entered the show to be held at the South Broadway A. C. next Thursday night. Entries for the show will close Dec. 14. Entries received to date are as follows:

112 pounds—E. Kaiser, Ray Alfann, J. Albright, Francis Reynolds, R. Vandeventer, Al Kenny, Company M, Sixth Infantry.

118 pounds—E. Rieth, A. Julius, F. Nicard, Al Kane, John Gennario, J. Schneman, Jack Molasky.

125 pounds—Leo Perricone, Ed Broe, John Madigan, W. Mahers; Ed Peters, Clure Lane, Slaton Whitson, Frank Kelley, Walter Roland, Irving Hewitt.

135 pounds—Elmer Feeney, Joe Damke, Harold Wolfe, Charles Wuertz, Earl Nichols.

175 pounds—Carl Noack, Al Hieger.

GIANTS HAVE ALREADY BOOKED 21 EXHIBITIONS

Twenty-one exhibition games have been scheduled by the New York Giants for their training season. In 20 of the contests the world's champions will have either the White Sox of the Memphis Southern Association club for an opponent.

The exhibition season will be opened March 11 with the White Sox at San Antonia, where the Giants' camp will be located. After a four-game series at San Antonio, the teams will move to Dallas for games March 25 and 26. They will play in Fort Worth, March 27 and 28, and then the Giants will meet the Memphis club at Vicksburg, Miss., March 29. Other games with the Memphis club will be at Jackson, Miss., March 30, and Meridian, Miss., March 31; at Memphis, April 1 and 2, and at Jackson, Tenn., April 3.

The White Sox will oppose the Giants in games at Knoxville, April 4 and 5; at Bristol, Tenn., April 6; at Norfolk, Va., April 7, and at the Polo Grounds, New York, April 8 and 9. The Fordham University team will meet the Giants, April10.

McGill to Play Syracuse.

Athletic officials of McGill University, it was reported, will accept the invitation of Syracuse University to send the McGill football team to Syracuse next fall. The University of Vermont also is negotiatoing with McGill for a game.

Redeemer Juniors Win.

The Redeemers were returned the winners over Christ Church, 28—18, in the opening game of the Lutheran Junior Basketball League. Buttner with 22 points and Reifenstein with 11 were the stars for the winners. Schneider and Kramer starred for the losers.

Hulswitt Batted .392.

Rudy Hulswitt, former Cardinal, was the champion batter in the Western Association last season, with an average of .392 in 29 games. Hulswitt batted 79 times and made 31 hits. Reiger of Enid was the homerun champion of the circuit with 20 to his credit.

A. A. Meets Dec. 20.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—President Hickey of the American Association today issued a call for the annual meeting of the club owners to be held here Dec. 20. The majority club owners favor the adoption of a 168-game schedule for the 1922 season, President Hickey said.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The Brooklyn National League baseball club announced tonight that its team would go through spring training at Jacksonville, Fla., last year the Dodgers trained at New Orleans.

Paulians Oppose Miller Eleven in Cup Battle Today

Municipal Soccer Team Will Get Real Test in U. S. F. A. Title Series.

The Paulians, members of Fair Grounds No. 2 of the Municipal Soccer League, will get a real test this afternoon in the United States Football Association cup competition when they tackle the Ben Millers of the St. Louis League, in a third round tilt. The game is scheduled to start at 2:30 o'clock, with Paul McSweeney as referee. Halves will be of 45 minutes duration.

A preliminary game between the Scullins and Screw Co., which will figure in the regular St. Louis League standings, will be played, starting at 1:15 o'clock.

Today's game will give a real line on the strength of the kicking game as played by the municipal elevens as compared to that of the professionals. While the Millers are not as good as they were two years ago when they won the national championship, Pete Ratican nevertheless possesses a good team. Weak defensive play by the fullbacks has hurt the Millers in recent games. In fact, on recent showings the Millers appear to be the weakest team in the professional circuit. In nine games, 17 goals have been scored against the Millers.

Paulians' Record Good.

The Paulians have a good record for the season, despite the fact they are tied for third in the Fair Ground division, with two victories and four defeats. Injuries to several stars have handicapped Manager Golden. The Paulians have played two cup tilts, defeating the Prendergasts, 3—0, and the Springfield (Ill.) eleven, 1—0.

For the game today Manager Golden will have his full strength to throw against the Millers. The Paulians have a set of fullbacks considered real stars. They are McAuliffe and Bischoff and reports have it that professional league teams are after the pair for next season.

Several of the Paulians have had chances in the pro circuit. They are Quinn, Monahan, Oster and Flavin, forwards, and King and Danagher, halfbacks.

Millers to Use Regulars.

The Millers will present practically the same lineup today as the one which was used last Sunday, when the champions of two years ago were stopped by De Andreis, 4 to 1. The only change will show Jimmy Dunn back at center forward with Larry Riley going to the sidelines.

The probable lineups are as follows:

Miller.	Position.	Paulians.
Sutter	Goal	Fornachon
Lancaster	Right back	McAuliffe
Murphy	Left half	King
Quinn	Center half	Danaher
Reddon	Right half	Burke
Dunn	Center	Connors
Meagher	Inside right	Monahan
Mellersy	Outside right	Quinn

Referee—Paul McSweeney. Time of halves—45m.

Gillespie Plays Caledonians.

Another third round U. S. F. A. game in which local followers will be interested will be played this afternoon between the Gillespie (Ill.) team and the Caledonians of Detroit at Gillespie. The Caledonians are the same team that forced the Scullins to extra periods to win in the Western final in the title series last year. The Detroit team has practically the same lineup as the one which faced the Scullins.

S. I. A. A. Adopts 'Migratory' Rule

Smaller Colleges Pass Measure as Retaliation Against the One-Year Rule.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 10.—Although rumors of possible splits and warfare in the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association never fully died out, the S. I. A. A. closed its annual convention here this afternoon, after one of the most important sessions in the history of the institution. The two factions, roughly divided into two groups composed of the larger colleges and smaller schools, wound up the convention on even terms, each faction putting across its "pet" issue.

POST-DISPATCH CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL TO PROVIDE GIFTS FOR 10,000 CHILDREN; 2500 BASKET DINNERS

Elaborate Entertainment, With Tree, at Coliseum on Morning of Monday, Dec. 26

Names of Those to Be Included in Distribution of Baskets Must Be Received Not Later Than Thursday, Dec. 15.

PREPARATIONS for the twenty-second annual Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival are going forward rapidly. Toys and gifts for at least 10,000 children have been provided, and the Basket List Committee estimates that 2500 basket dinners will be needed to fill the requests from those whose only hope for Christmas cheer lies through the work of the Festival Association.

Last year the association distributed 2125 baskets, which cost approximately $2.72 each, or a total of $5780, and it is estimated that each basket will cost in the neighborhood of $2.52 this year or a total of $6315 for 2500 baskets. This allows for the distribution of 375 baskets more this year than last, at an increase of $535 in cost over the amount spent last year.

Plans for the elaborate entertainment at the Coliseum are being developed by children from the municipal playgrounds under the direction of the Recreation Division of the Park Department, and announcement of the nature of this year's entertainment will be made within a few days.

Tree to Be Selected Sunday.

Santa Claus and the indispensable Christmas tree will appear at the Coliseum. An expedition to cut the tree will be made by members of the Executive Committee with city officials next Sunday morning. The party is scheduled to start from King's highway and Lindell boulevard at 8:30 a. m. The Bell Telephone Co. will donate the tree through the kindness of Percy Redmund, general manager.

The Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival is not in any sense a charity. It is simply an expression of hospitality, a city-wide endeavor to give everyone his share of Christmas cheer and to preserve in the hearts of little children their faith in the spirit of Santa Claus. Your contribution to the fund, no matter how small, makes you one of the hosts, and you are urged to give, not from a sense of duty, but rather from a desire to make your own Christmas merrier with the knowledge that you have made Christmas merry for someone else. Christmas joy, in the fullest sense, comes not from receiving, but from giving, and it is written deep in the natures of men and women that their greatest happiness lies in willing service to their brothers and sisters.

There is no greater sorrow than that of a child with an empty Christmas stocking. No expectancy in childhood or in later years is as strong as the expectancy of Santa Claus coming in the night with the longed-for doll or horn. It is childhood's right to expect, and the children who are denied this privilege are cheated out of childhood's heritage.

The Executive Committee of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival, comprising a score of business and professional men and women, undertakes to act as a medium for those who desire to add to their own Christmas joys by increasing the Christmas joys of others. In a systematic and thorough way, they undertake to see that no child in St. Louis shall have empty arms or a sorrowful heart on Christmas day, and the basket dinners sent out through the work of the committee are distributed for the purpose of conveying the physical cheer so necessary to spiritual content.

How Contributions May Be Made.

As in former years, the contribution lists of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund are placed in the leading stores and offices of the city. Individual contributions may be made through one of these lists or direct to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch. All will be acknowledged in the Post-Dispatch.

The administration expenses of the Christmas Festival work are borne by the Post-Dispatch and every penny of the money contributed is used for the purpose for which it is given—to extend Christmas cheer and food will to those who lack the material means to provide these blessings for themselves.

Only four days remain before the closing of the lists for Christmas baskets. Names must be submitted in writing to the secretary of the Executive Committee, or in person to Mrs. Mary I. McDearmon at the Information Desk of the Post-Dispatch, before 6 p. m., Thursday, Dec. 15. This will allow the Basket List Committee time to investigate the cases and permit the Basket Packing Committee to purchase their supplies and pack the baskets, so that they may be delivered in time for the preparation of Christmas dinner.

Each basket will contain about the same variety of foodstuffs as in former years, including rice, sugar, evaporated peaches, soup, bread, coffee, potatoes, apples, onions, candy and chickens. The number in the family that is to receive the basket will be taken into consideration when the packing is done, and the amounts of each food apportioned to fit the needs of each particular family. If the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association can prevent it, there will not be a single family in St. Louis, deserving a special dinner on Christmas day and unable to obtain it through its own resources, which will be without that happiness.

Children Will Fill Building.

It is a matter of regret to the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association that regulations are necessary concerning the admission of sightseers to the Coliseum for the Children's Festival. Were it possible, the entire public would be invited to be spectators on that occasion, but the capacity of the Coliseum is limited and those for whose pleasure and enjoyment the affair is arranged ordinarily fill the building to capacity. With the exception of a few prominent citizens, the only invited guests Monday morning, Dec. 26, will be the children, for whom the affair is planned. Last year motion pictures were taken by arrangement with several news-film companies in the effort to have the public witness the joy and happiness of the little guests and give Festival contributors some idea of the nature of the Christmas Festival.

Arrangements have been made for details of firemen, policemen and park guards to assist in the seating of the children at the Coliseum and the Medical Committee, under the chairmanship of Dr. A. H. Sippy, will care for any emergency case which may arise.

Free transportation coupons will be attached to the Coliseum tickets through the courtesy of the United Railways Co., which will permit the free carriage of child guests on any street car going to or from the Coliseum. The coupons are good for the trip to the Coliseum up to 10 a. m. and for the return trip, to 1:30 p. m. The entertainment will begin at 10 o'clock this year, instead of 10:30, the starting time last year, and attention is called to the fact that it is to be given on Monday morning, Dec. 26.

The Hall and Door Committees of the Festival Association have arranged for the opening of the Coliseum at 9 a. m. and arrangements are being made for the care of the children so that none will be obliged to wait outside in the cold.

Gifts of pipes and tobacco will be sent to the municipal lodging house and the various missions which will serve Christmas dinners to the homeless men. C. J. Kehoe has charge of this department of the Festival's hospitality.

Matiness for Fund.

Commencing with the 3 o'clock matinee on Saturday, Dec. 17, and continuing through and including the matinee of Friday, Dec. 23, Manager William Goldman of the Missouri Theater will turn over to the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund the entire receipts from the sale of all tickets which are sold at the box office of the theater between the hours of 3 and 5 p. m. without any reservation of any sort each day except Sunday. In addition the Fund will benefit from the sale of tickets which will be placed on sale downtown within a day or so.

The Missouri Theater will honor and accept these tickets between the hours of 3 and 5 each day except Sunday and the entire proceeds will accrue to the fund.

This unusually generous offer has been made by Manager Goldman because of a desire to assist in the raising of the $15,000 Festival Fund and the arrangement should carry a particular appeal for children, enabling them to turn their pocket money to a double purpose during the week of Dec. 17.

"Miss Lulu Bett" will be the feature picture at the Missouri Theater that week. The story is the screen version of Zona Gale's prize play based upon her own novel. The dramatization of the book was awarded the Pulitzer prize of $1000 for being the best American play produced during the season 1920-1921. The story is most appealing and there are many dramatic moments in its development. Dainty Lois Wilson plays the leading feminine role and Milton Sills is leading man, with Theodore Roberts and Helen Ferguson in the cast.

The admission charge will be 30 cents and the entire amount of money raised through the use of the Missouri Theater will be used to provide Christmas dinners and gifts and toys for the families in St. Louis which will have no Christmas joy except through the Christmas Festival Fund.

Following is a complete list of the committees of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association and the membership of most of them:

Where Tickets for Christmas Festival Will Be Issued to Children

TICKETS for the entertainment at the Coliseum Monday morning, Dec. 26, will be issued to children only between 2 and 4 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, Dec. 24, at the following places:

Soulard Playground, Seventh and Soulard streets.

Mullanphy Playground, Tenth and Mullanphy streets.

Public Bath No. 3, Twenty-third and O'Fallon streets.

Negro Y. M. C. A., 2838 Pine street.

Children are requested not to call at the Post-Dispatch Building as tickets will not be issued there, but are urged to wait until Saturday afternoon and to apply then at the ticket distribution station nearest their homes.

A Special Message to Boys and Girls

IF you want to help the poor children of St. Louis have a merry Christmas—and by merry Christmas we mean a big Christmas dinner and real, honest-to-goodness dolls for the girls and horns and rubber balls for the boys, as well as other gifts which are worth while—remember that the Missouri Theater, through the kindness of William Goldman, manager, will give a special show each afternoon except Sunday, from 3 to 5 o'clock, during the week commencing Dec. 17, and the entire box office receipts and the money from the sale of tickets downtown will go to the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund.

Just think of it! You can not only see the regular afternoon show at the Missouri Theater, but at the same time you can help some poor little child to have a happy Christmas. Be sure and go to the Missouri during those hours, the week of Dec. 17, in order that your pennies may help swell the Fund, which means Christmas joy to the boys and girls who are less fortunate than you. "Miss Lulu Bett" will be the feature picture.

Festival Fund Has No Solicitors; Lists to Go Out as in Other Years

THE Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund has no collectors of contributions and persons soliciting cash donations are impostors and should be immediately reported to Secretary of the Executive Committee, Post-Dispatch, Olive 6600, or Central 6600.

As in former years, subscription lists are being distributed by young women, where that is practical, and elsewhere by mail. These lists are sent out with the request that they be so displayed that anyone wishing to subscribe any sum, large or small, to the fund, may do so. This request is made by the young women when they distribute the lists, and these helpers will make further visits to see that the opportunity to contribute has not been mislaid or forgotten, but none of the workers is authorized to ask for or to receive money.

When a list has served its purpose it may be returned to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch by mail or messenger, or, if that be not entirely convenient, a telephone request will bring a representative of the Post-Dispatch with written authority to receive and receipt for the list and the money.

Except through subscription lists, donations can be made only in cash or by mail to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch. Acknowledgment will be made in the Post-Dispatch of every subscription of whatever size, accompanied by the donor's name, unless a request for an anonymous acknowledgment is made.

"Inasmurh as Ye Do It Unto the Least of These - - - "

JENNIE, Mary, Bessie and John are too young to understand why they shouldn't expect Santa Claus to visit them. Their mother told them the other day, a little sadly, that she was afraid Santa wouldn't be around this year. She didn't say why. A mother can't say that Santa doesn't come to see little boys and girls whose father is too sick to work. What sort of a Santa Claus would that be? She simply repeated, wearily, that she was afraid he wouldn't come this time. Maybe next year.

Jennie, Mary, Bessie and John are far from satisfied with that sort of an explanation. They want to know why. Haven't they been good? Hasn't Jennie, who is 6, looked after John, who is only 1? Hasn't she washed the faces of Mary and Bessie, who are 4 and 2? Well, then, why isn't Santa coming? Her mother cried ever so little, and shook her head, and Jennie was sorry she had insisted.

It wouldn't be fair to tell here what Jennie's papa's name is, but the Post-Dispatch has investigated the circumstances, and knows what the conditions are in that home. It knows why the mother wanted to prepare her little ones for disappointment. One of the reasons is sciatic rheumatism, which has transformed a healthy, 30-year-old workingman into a helpless invalid. And that isn't all. The flocks of four will soon be increased to five.

Mary simply wept when she learned that nothing was to be expected this Christmas. Jennie is made of stouter stuff. She set her lips and said nothing after she saw that the subject was a painful one to mamma. But she doubtless has strong opinions.

So far as she is concerned, the two rooms are home. They may be a little damp—they are, in fact — but certainly that shouldn't keep a big, jolly saint like Santa away. Her father's groans are not pleasant to hear, either, especially when they wake her up in the night, but if she isn't afraid, it doesn't look like Santa would be. It is to be feared that Jennie has become somewhat bitter. It is a test of faith that few can stand.

There is just one thing that stands between Jennie, Mary, Bessie and John and a cheerless Christmas. That thing is the philanthropy of the people of St. Louis, which annually expresses itself through the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival. Of course, these tots know nothing of that. Jennie has begun to doubt everything. Mary is hoping against hope that something will turn up. And Bessie is, too, and John isn't quite ready to walk.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The League's Easter Sunday.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IF Senator Spencer will have the goodness to recall that Easter day followed Good Friday by only three days, he will speak very, very softly about the League of Nations being dead and buried. So was Jesus Christ and His imperishable ideas dead and buried.

A reactionary Senate or Sanhedrin in Jerusalem had an impious hand in it, and even the people of that day and generation was misled into the cry of crucify him" before Pontius Pilate. But according to the Scriptures the Senator himself has so often eloquently taught in Bible class assembled, Christ rose again on the third day and with Him the Christian Church whose steeples now pierce the skies the world over.

However, just as sure as Christianity rose from the grave with its Risen Founder, so sure and inevitable will the "buried" League of Nations rise gloriously from its senatorial tomb. Nor are premonitions of such a resurrection altogether wanting.

Unless I am wholly in error, I fancy I hear vague sounds of life and movement from the direction of the League's tomb. Senator Spencer, too, may hear the same, if he has any faith at all in the coming atonement of mankind for the last world war, even though his faith be as atomic as a grain of mustard seed. Nay, what is this phrase "an association of nations" but a literal resurrection from Woodrow Wilson's Fourteen Points? What else means all this mysterious expectancy that one reads between the lines of recent Washington dispatches?

Senator Spencer may also recall from his profound studies of the Sacred Scriptures that the Saviour's resurrection was preceded by "a great earthquake." What is the conference now going on in Washington but an earthquake portending the resurrection of the main ideas of the League of Nations, as imperishable as were the main ideas of Christianity. I fancy even President Harding is feeling its tremors. No seismograph is needed to confirm that.

And there is just one trifling incident that occurred before the Saviour's resurrection, not without its counterpart in the events now developing in Washington. Senator Spencer will recall that an "angel of the Lord" rolled away the stone that was hard set against the Saviour's sepulchre.

If the Junior Senator from Missouri will but see it, he will observe that even now an "angel" is rolling away the stone of hatred the American Senate in 1919 had so hastily pushed up against the sepulchre where the League of Nations is now "buried." I think I can name the "angel" for the Senator's benefit.

He is none other than Charles Evans Hughes. When his task is done, even the Senator may have to change his tune, for the resurrection of the League of Nations shall have become an accomplished fact. The League may be "buried," but it cannot stay dead. Its Easter Day is on the way.

BERNARD GRUENSTEIN.

The Conquering Zero.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THAT first-class specimen of a New England political whiffet, Senator Lodge should be loudly acclaimed and be awarded with a fallen-hide leather medal for his wonderful display of diplomacy in the disarmament conference.

News dispatches are brimful of reports of his magic elaborations, and there should be more than uncommon reward for such valiant service, nothwithstanding the fact that Mr. Wilson, discovering his true nature, returned him of the political Spitz poodle kennel, only to be released by the larger dogs of war.

All hail to the conquering Zero.

SUBSCRIBER.

What Rejection Has Cost Us.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

HAD the peace treaty that is now operative in some 50 nations been ratified by our Congress, many of the world problems would now be settled. The question of disarmament would naturally have been one of the first for consideration, and with that settled, preparation for armies and navies stopped. The millions of material and money that have gone for war preparation would have been turned into legitimate channels of trade, and instead of the stagnation we would have now heard the hum of commercial and industrial activity. But the political trickery and chicanery stirred the nation to the depth. The time is ripe for Democracy to assert herself, to awake from her lethargy, to espouse and again champion the great cause of Democracy.

MRS. M. L. HOLLINGSWORTH.

Man Creates Nothing.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

HOW frequently the word created is used in connection with building or other enterprises, and more frequently with millinery! Your Springfield correspondent uses the term in connection with the enactment of a law by the Illinois Legislature to erect a criminal asylum at Chester, some 30 years ago.

Man can create nothing. Man produces. Almighty God created all things in six days. On the seventh He rested.

J. B. SWAYSEE, Springfield, Ill.

FOR A PEOPLE'S CONSTITUTION.

The question of a fusion ticket of candidates at large for the constitutional convention is being discussed by the Republican and Democratic organizations. There are suggestions that representatives of various interests—teachers, farmers, corporations, good roads and dirt roads—should be included in the list of candidates for the convention.

Little is said about the most important interest of all—the interest of the plain people in their Constitution—the need of the people for a sound body of fundamental laws embodying the principles which should govern lawmakers in legislation and Judges in interpreting and enforcing laws. The principles of justice and liberty, with provisions which will permit the enactment of just and effective tax laws and the legitimate development of the State and its subdivisions, should be the substance of the new Constitution.

As for a fusion ticket, it would be a good thing, in so far as it would prevent a partisan scramble in the constitutional election, but if it were utilized by the party committees to name party hacks to support party advantage and to put partisan provisions in the Constitution, it would be a bad thing. The people ought to have a voice in the selection of candidates as well as in the election of tickets.

In the selection and election of candidates naturally all elements of the State will be represented, but it would be unwise to have members of the convention pledged to special interests and fighting for advantage in the framing of the Constitution. We do not want a Constitution composed of a conglomeration of laws designed to protect or promote any special interests. No laws except fundamental laws to govern law making and governmental activity ought to be in the Constitution.

The kind of Constitution we need is a Constitution which will safeguard the rights of all the people, the rights of individuals and all interests. We want no special rights or privileges in the document.

In order to obtain a Constitution of this kind it is necessary to have in the convention the best men in the State. We need in the convention men of integrity, ability, wisdom and experience, who understand what fundamental laws are and how they should be framed for public protection against wrong or oppression and for sound progress.

The people should awake to the necessity and see to it that their interests are protected by the selection of capable representatives and the elimination of special pleaders and privilege seekers.

Most of us stick to the fighter who doesn't know when he's licked, but most of us quit the fighter who doesn't know when he has won. Pass it on to De Valera.

SUFFRAGE AND ILLITERACY.

The approaching constitutional convention, which will consider revision or amendment of Missouri's organic law might wisely go beyond the St. Louis Bar Association's recommendation in revising the suffrage qualifications and not only exclude the declarant alien, but also the citizen who cannot read and write the English language. Such an amendment has recently been adopted by the State of New York by an overwhelming majority.

New York has a very large undigested foreign-born population and the necessity for such a provision may be more apparent in that State, but it is nevertheless equally sound in principle as a rule for all states. The right to vote is not an inherent or natural right, but one conferred by society in its own wisdom. When conferred it implies political duties which the illiterate plainly cannot discharge in any satisfactory manner. We would not wish to intrust them with public office, with service upon juries, or with any of the other innumerable duties appertaining to citizenship.

It is a corollary of democracy that there shall exist the widest possible suffrage, but the benefits that may accrue are not invariably unaccompanied by dangers. In the earlier days of our state governments the suffrage was very generally restricted by a property qualification, which exists in some form in a few of them today. It has been gradually extended in most states, however, so as to embrace all citizens, men and women, without regard to property or literacy. But for the establishment of education as a primary concern of the state governments, such an increase in the electorate might have spelled disaster.

A government reflects the average character and intelligence of the electorate; it is no better and no worse. Illiteracy among the electors can only have the effect of lowering the standard.

Since E. Mont Reily's rise to fame, it is a question whether Kansas City is in Missouri, Kansas, or Porto Rico.

A MINISTER OF JUSTICE.

The climax of Lloyd George's career has been reached. It is told in four words—The Irish Free State. This man of destiny who forged his way to the supreme responsibility of directing the fortunes of the British Empire in a life or death struggle, has achieved as great a victory for the empire in council as was won in camp.

The amicable settlement of the centuries-old Irish problem is heartening to all who believe that reason can, and must, supersede force in solving difficulties between nations or peoples. Strictly speaking, the settlement cannot yet be pronounced an accomplished fact. The treaty is still to be ratified. But it is inconceivable that ratification will fail either in Dublin or London. De Valera has counseled rejection, in which he has some ministerial support, but Griffith, the fighter, "stands by the agreement," and his colleague, Collins, warrior, financier, diplomatist and parliamentarian, is as firm in his conviction as is Griffith. The favorable action of Dail Eireann is forecast in the news. The Irish press, as far as quoted, is for the treaty. A plebiscite of South Ireland, it is predicted, would be overwhelmingly for ratification.

What other verdict could be rendered? The substance of that liberty so long hoped for and fought for now is Ireland's. Ireland becomes a member of the British empire on the same terms as the other great dominions that have already gratefully and proudly welcomed her. The first article of the treaty unequivocally reads:

> Ireland shall have the same constitutional status in the community of nations known as the British Empire as Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, with a parliament having powers to make laws for peace and order and good government in Ireland and an executive responsible to that parliament, and shall be styled the Irish Free State.

In the five months of negotiation there were occasionally zero hours when it seemed as if the great effort must fail. Though all the participants in this momentous council have secured their place in history the happy consummation is due to the genius of the British Premier, who apparently has expunged failure from his lexicon.

This triumph of reason inevitably recalls the fateful days of July, 1914, when the British Cabinet through a sleepless fortnight proposed and proffered and suggested in the hope of averting the storm. Grey failed. Probably Lloyd George would have failed. It is no detraction of the Premier's historic victory to say the Irish Free State derives, in a measure, from that long, mad dance of death between Liege and the Meuse. The toll of those dreadful years, it may be, was the price humanity had to pay to learn that sheer force can no longer prevail in the affairs of people. And the Irish Free State, too, is foundationed upon the agonies and martyrdom and moral invincibility of Ireland. But to Lloyd George must go the credit of interpreting the spirit of the times into a radiant reality.

Disarmament, we are told, will not end war, nor will covenants officially attested and solemnly sealed. That may be true. But justice as between man and man and nation and nation will end war because it will root out the cause and design of war. That is the inspiration which Lloyd George has given to the world in his capacity as Minister of Justice.

Mr. Morse may be down and out, but he is not yet down and in.

NORMALCY IN SHOP RULES.

An encouraging step towards normalcy is the putting into effect of revised working rules in the railroad shops. Economies in operation, it is estimated, will run up to $50,000,000 a year. But the profit will reach farther than mere ledger savings.

Under the old rules as entered into under Government control practices were established which were wrong both in principle and effect. Classification of work was fixed and arbitrary and irrational. A workman belonging to one craft, for instance, was not permitted to perform the simplest task which would have been classifiable as belonging to the work of another craft. The loss of time, of course, was considerable, and the spirit of red tape and indifference to duty was stifling.

The principle of the open shop is readmitted under the revised rule, but will remain a principle rather than a practice. Collective bargaining is the established order of the shops and undoubtedly will remain so. But there will be a possibility of minority expression. Majority rule will take the place of former tyranny.

Such getting back to a solid foundation of service and employment should be of wholesome effect in other lines of industry. The process of pulling away from war conditions is slow and painful. The restoration of 400,000 workers to a peace basis, with the eliminations of a waste of many millions a year, is a long step.

MR. ANTWINE'S OPINION.

"THE Democrats set out after the disarmament conference began to return good for evil, but it doesn't seem to me that they are keeping it up as they should be," Mr. Antwine said.

"They naturally feel that analogies should be drawn between the present international activities of the United States and those to which the Republicans objected so violently when Mr. Wilson was trying to make us assume our responsibility to the rest of the world. Those analogies do exist, and every development at the disarmament conference makes them plainer and stronger. It is amazing to find virtue in a thing done by the Republicans after we had been told that the same thing done by Democrats was so reprehensible. Imagine the furore that would have followed an announcement by Mr. Wilson that he had arranged a working agreement for the preservation of peace in the Pacific in which England, Japan and France were joining with us! People like Senators Lodge, Borah, Johnson and Reed would have had one conniption fit after another. It would have been shouted from the stump all over this country that our sovereignty had been handed over to a supergovernment. Mothers would have been asked to say at the polls whether they wanted their sons to die in the rice paddies of Luzon or served as long pig in the wilds of Borneo.

"The Republicans deserve this ridicule, but the Democrats are hunting bigger game than revenge. The people are not interested in the hypocrisy of the Republican party. It may be possible, as Senator Harrison thinks, to prove that all the Republican leaders have stultified themselves in this matter, or we may all be convinced that for control of the Government the Republican leaders betrayed mankind. Be that as it may, the people are not interested in it. They want peace and an end to the causes of war. They want to resume the normal relations of business and life. They do not care whether a man with one or two faces brings the new order about, nor are they going to bother themselves why it wasn't done sooner.

"Their original resolution was the wise course for the Democrats. Let them stick to that. Nobody ever lost anything returning good for evil, and the Democratic party will not lose anything by it. Upon the contrary, it will dignify itself and render a service to humankind which will reward it with better things than control of the Government. I am going to set the proper example out here in the Ozarks by standing behind Mr. Harding and Mr. Hughes in every move they make to bring about peace and understanding. Not even the monkeyshines of people in the United States Senate are going to tempt me from that high ground. I hope the Democrats in Congres follow my example, and I hope the Democratic National Committee follows it. It was not as Democrats that the Democrats were overthrown. They went down under the prejudices of the old order, exactly as Galileo went to prison because he said the world is round.

"Happily, most Democrats have no disposition to discover in Republican policies parallels to policies for which the Republicans condemned Mr. Wilson. They would rather look to Republican policies for the fruit of seed which the party sowed under Mr. Wilson's leadership. Those fruits are fast ripening, and we shall be too happy in them for partisan recrimination.

"What the Democrats should do is to plan new blessings for humankind and go to political battle for them. If their causes are so good that the Republicans make them their own, then the usefulness of the Democratic party is undeniable. It is bound to have its reward," Mr. Antwine said.

As the pen is mightier than the sword, so is it mightier, too, than a good pair of lungs. Consider the fame of H. G. Wells, who writes what he thinks, as opposed to the fame of Mr. William J. Bryan, who habitually says what he thinks. Mr. Bryan has probably talked to more audiences than any man in history, yet Mr. Wells, in a single syndicated article, addresses more people than Mr. Bryan can ever hope to get at from the public platform. There is no other man of our time, perhaps, whom so many people would like to meet and hear as they would like to meet and hear Mr. Wells. Yet Mr. Wells sticks to the pen. He says he can't and won't talk, and he has refused attractive offers to tour the country and speak from the platform. Our tendency is to personalize everything, but we cannot do that in the case of Mr. Wells. He has a better medium, and he very well knows it.

It is not surprising that the Japanese should wish to come to some understanding with us as to our plans in the Pacific. We have become a very great Power. We are building a naval base at Pearl Harbor, in the Hawaiian Islands, and another one has been started at Guam after years of irresolution. We have additionally built the Panama Canal. Our naval program has been the biggest in the world. All this has frightened the Japanese, who have found in us the most aggressive objector to her own plans of empire. To compose the differences of these two nations and bring them into a concert for the preservation of peace in the Pacific is a fine feat. It is something that needs to be done, and it is surprising that the peoples of both countries have sense enough to do it. History is not able to credit many rival Powers with that much sense. It must have been a relief and a surprise to Japan to have had Mr. Hughes propose a scrapping of battleships at a time when Japan was fairly breaking her back to keep up with us. Nothing else could have so convinced her of our pacific intention; and if she is responding to it in kind, which seems to be the case, we are truly living in a new world.

Sir: A few days ago, in that valuable corner of your paper, "Mirror of Public Opinion," an editorial referred to that man Ghandi as a follower of Tolstoi's. And that editor emanated from Springfield, Mass., too. "How come?" Ghandi, the Hindu, may believe in nonresistance but he certainly could not be said to be a follower of a man who wished to live literally as Christ commanded.

I say that man Ghandi, for rarely do we read more than scraps in the news about him. Yet his seems a name to conjure with. Couldn't you feature him intelligently somehow? The popular idea of a Hindu, even as a brown white man, might be much improved. V. D. G.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

WHY JAPAN DISTRUSTS US.

E. ALEXANDER POWELL in Atlantic Monthly.

THERE are two sides to every question. Let us look for a moment at Japan's. Is it not fair and reasonable to judge her by ourselves? What should we say if the Japanese charged us with planning a war against them because we are increasing our naval strength? We are building a navy for national defense. Japan is building one for precisely the same reason. Defense against whom, you ask? Well, if you wish to know the truth, defense against the United States. For, grotesque as such an assertion may appear to Americans, the majority of Japanese are convinced that we are deliberately trying to force a war upon them. As evidence of this, they point to the discriminatory and humiliating treatment which we have accorded to Japanese in the United States; to our opposition to Japan's legitimate ambitions on the mainland of Asia; to our blocking the insertion in the covenant of the League of Nations of a clause recognizing Japanese racial equality; to our refusal to recognize the Japanese mandate for the former German possessions in the Pacific; to our unofficial but none the less active support of China in the controversy over Shantung; to the strengthening of our naval bases at Cavite and Pearl Harbor; and finally, to the long succession of sneers, jibes and insults indulged in by American jingoes, anti-Japanese politicians and certain sections of the American press. Viewing the situation without prejudice, it seems to me that Japan has as good ground for her suspicion of us as we have for our suspicion of her.

PROTECTING THE MAILS.

From the Chicago Tribune.

GOV. BLAINE of Wisconsin has asked Postmaster-General Hays to take the marine guards off the trains in that State and has served Secretary of the Navy Denby with a requisition to produce in court a marine who shot a man stealing a ride on a train. The marine thought the man was a mail robber. The marines were put on the mail trains because outlawry was making the security of the mails a joke. Mail robbers were holding up trains and were looting the mails in the terminals of large cities. They were running off with hundreds of thousands of dollars. The marines were put on the mail cars with orders to shoot. They were instructed that they had to fight no matter if the robbers got the jump on them. The man shot by the marine in Wisconsin was doing an illegal thing in boarding the train. The marine thought he was trying to commit a criminal act, the very act against which he was on guard. He is answerable to the authority which gave him his orders. The Navy Department may have to adjust the case with the civil authorities and reconcile civil and military justice, but Mr. Hays cannot be influenced by parochial protests against the method used to safeguard the mails. Gov. Blaine is not responsible for the security of the mails. The Federal Government is. The Federal Government cannot train its soldiers to expect that if they obey orders they will land in a county jail. It cannot train outlaws to look for easy money every time they see a mail bag.

Princeton Triangle Club Which Will Present a Spanish Play This Year Has Distinguished List of Patronesses—Several Important Engagements Announced.

THE Princeton Triangle Club comes to the Odeon Dec. 22 on its annual tour. It presents this year a Spanish play entitled "Espanola," perhaps in deference to the Spanish tone which is present in the fashions. Arriving at noon, the Princetonians will be entertained at a luncheon and tea dance at the Country Club. Wallace Smith, a member of the cast, and Joseph Werner, a Princeton man, will be hosts. Later they will be guests of the Princeton Club of St. Louis at a buffet supper at the University Club.

The list of boxholders includes: J. Lionberger Davis, J. D. Wooster Lambert, Dr. Willard Bartlett, H. B. Morse, W. C. Sipple, George H. Williams, R. C. Day, W. R. Compton, H. B. Compton, H. B. A luncheon will be given next Saturday by the Maryville Alumnae Association of the Sacred Heart Convent, at the Academy, Maryland and Taylor avenues, to open the bazar which will be held that afternoon. The proceeds will go to the fund of the Alumnae Association to build a gymnasium at the convent on Nebraska avenue and Meramac street, which is celebrating its jubilee this year.

The first Sacred Heart Convent in St. Louis was a little log cabin erected in 1826 at Broadway and Chouteau. The removal to the present location was made in 1872. Many of the prominent women of the city are members of the Alumnae Association and will assist in the bazar, which like the luncheon, will be open to the public.

Mrs. Robert Wilson is chairman of the bazar committee. She will be assisted by the Mmes. C. E. Maloy, W. J. Polk, Howard Benoist, Herman Von Schrenk, E. J. Walsh, W. B. Kinealy, Von Brecht, Amadee Reyburn, Herbert Jones, Thomas Thacher, M. J. Lonsway, James Ring, Louis Fusz; the Misses Leonore Cahill, Helen Schafly, Mary Plant, Elise Garneau, Elizabeth Smith, Lousita Moser, Juliette Reyburn, Ella Wilson, Frances Clover, Thelma Medill and many others.

An interesting engagement which was announced last week is that of Miss Mignon Morrow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Morrow of Los Angeles, formerly of St. Louis, to William B. Ittner Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Ittner, 5553 Bartmer avenue.

Miss Morrow is the sister of Arnold V. Morrow of 104 Interdrive avenue, with whom she makes her home. She received her education at Lennox Hall and Washington University. Mr. Ittner was educated at Washington University and Cornell. He is a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity. He is a member of the University, Sunset Hill and Glen Echo Clubs.

Miss Morrow will depart in January for a visit with her parents. The wedding will take place in Los Angeles in the spring.

The Misses Anna Polanek, Estelle Nangle, Alice Hutti, Frances Koch, Marguerite Grace, Rita Henckler, Ella Heckelkamp, Mrs. James W. Grace and Mrs. J. J. Carey will be the hostesses at the reception which the Catholic Women's Association will give tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at Hotel Statler.

A musical program directed by Miss Bertha Donelly will be given, and 500 new members will be received into the Association.

The marriage of Miss Marie Louise Poleman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Poleman of 5720 Clemens avenue, and Walter Clarke Jackman of Buffalo was solemnized yesterday at the Church of the Ascension. The Rev. Dr. Bunting officiated. The guests included only members of the immediate families. There were no attendants. Mr. and Mrs. Jackman departed after the ceremony for a honeymoon trip in the East, after which they will make their home in Buffalo.

The engagement of Miss Dorothea Theresa Reder, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Francis Reder of 6346 Pershing avenue, to Ray Edward Bolin was announced Thursday. The wedding will take place Jan. 3 at the Church of St. Michael and All Angels, the Rev. Dr. Norton officiating. A reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents.

The bridal party will include Mrs. Harold Morehead, Miss Eloise Reder, sister of the bride, Misses Virginia and Aline Bolin, the bridegroom's sisters, Miss Mary McAuliffe, Miss Margaret Barnes, Miss Marion Martin, Miss Dorothy White and Eugene Irwin.

Miss Reder was educated at Mary Institute and Abbot Academy at Andover, Mass. She has served twice as a maid at the Veiled Phophet ball. Mr. Bolin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Bolin, 5519 Bartmer avenue. He was educated at Smith Academy and served in the navy during the war.

Two weddings of interest which will take place Saturday will be that of Miss Louise Elizabeth Moore and Young H. Helwig, and that of Miss Elsie Woerman and Dr. Wycliffe E. Kling.

The marriage of Miss Louise Elizabeth Moore and Young H. Helwig, son of Dr. and Mrs. H. J. Helwig, will be solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George V. Moore of 4553 Forest Park boulevard. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Dr. Bitting, and will be followed by a reception. The bride's attendants will be Miss Mary Virginia Holme, Miss Mary Rothwell, Miss Anita Hermann, and Betsy Deane. Mr. Helwig will have as his attendants Victor Cunningham, George Stevens Moore, brother of the bride, Heywood Watson, Frank Eversole Jr. and Richard Kahle.

The Kling-Woerman ceremony will be solemnized by the Rev. Dr. Fullerton at the home of Miss Woerman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Woerman, 5108 Cabanne avenue. There will be no attendants. A reception will follow the ceremony.

Mr. Thomas Lora Horn and Mrs. Murray Lawing Horn of 1640 Waterman avenue have issued invitations for a tea to be given Wednesday, Dec. 14, from 4 to 6 o'clock. Those assisting will be the Mmes. J. M. Lynch, C. J. Salisbury, I. J. Connell, H. D. Kelly, B. Valle Grossman and the Misses Faye Salisbury, Letitia Breck, Laura Bird and Mary Elizabeth Lynn.

William Edwin Green, who is a student at Princeton, will arrive this week to pass the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Green, of 6203 Washington boulevard.

A birthday party in honor of Miss Mary Dwyer was given Dec. 3 by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Dwyer, at their home, 5835 Etzel avenue. The guests were the Misses Elsie Waters, May Bess Gerber, Ruth Dougherty, Barbara Temm, Marion Eberle, Delphine Rauch, Helen Teuscher and Messrs. Raymond Dwyer, Gordon Bader, Gerald Bader, George Eberle, Charles Temm and Howard Peterson.

Fleener, H. Hamburger, G. Meyer; Misses M. McFessel, C. Metzler, E. Groppe, T. Murphy, E. Perry, E. Kinsman, M. Bushmeyer, L. Martin, F. Martin, A. Wibbing, L. Price, A. McDonald, A. Tueteberg and H. Dombach.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Michelson, 2624 South Broadway, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Frances Michelson, to Nathan Kornblum, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Kornblum of 1245A Euclid avenue.

Mrs. George Fodenbeck and two children of New York, are guests of the former's sister, Mrs. Lemoine Skinner of Webster Park. Mrs. Rodenbeck was, before her marriage, Miss Kyle Adams.

Miss Wilma Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Robinson of Webster Groves, will return home for the holidays after a visit of several months with relatives in Canada.

A dance will be given at Hotel Statler Dec. 29 by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society.

Mrs. Walter W. Candy of 8 Kingsbury place will be hostess Tuesday at a bridge-luncheon at her home.

C. Spencer Meredith Jr. of Chicago is the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Spencer Meredith of 3940 Delmar boulevard. Mr. and Mrs. Meredith Sr. will visit their son and daughter-in-law in Chicago during the holidays, remaining until Jan. 15.

Walter and Billy Candy, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Candy, 8 Kingsbury place, will arrive home Dec. 17 from school at Lawrenceville, N. J.

Miss Dell Pendergast, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pendergast of 310 Belt avenue, will return home from Wellesley College Dec. 15 for the Christmas holidays.

Prominent women who are interested in the workshops' committee of the Missouri Association for Occupational Therapy, will have charge of the Christmas sale which opens tomorrow at 3510 Washington avenue, to continue for three days. Articles made by patients in the shop for the handicapped, and the Junior League Shop at Barnes Hospital, will be on sale.

Mrs. S. L. Swarts is chairman and others interested include the Mmes. Elias Michael, George O. Carpenter, Isaac Morton, Albert Stix, Irvin Bettmann, I. Kline, George S. Levis, William A. Stickney, Clarence Howard, Charles Passmore, W. A. Layman, William H. Danforth, Max Kotany, Arthur Rice, Will C. Wissmuth, and the Misses Eunice Smith, Charlotte Glasgow and Jean Wilson.

The Women's Guild of St. George's Episcopal Church will give a luncheon Tuesday from noon until 2 p. m. at the parish house, which will be followed by a Christmas sale.

Mrs. M. A. Isaacs of Blytheville, Ark., who has been the guest of Mrs. William H. Barnes, 5770 Waterman avenue, has returned to her home.

Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Blackstad, formerly of 1246 Amhurst place, are now occupying their new home at 5631 Pershing avenue.

The annual ball of the Margaret A. E. McLure chapter, U. D. C. will be given at Hotel Statler Feb. 10.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Miravalle are occupying their new home at 5846 Pershing avenue.

Invitations have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. M. Lentin of the Del Monte Hotel for a formal dance at which they will be hosts Dec. 28 at the Claridge Hotel, complimenting their daughter, Miss Dorothy Beatrice Lentin.

An organ recital and sacred concert will be given this afternoon at the Church of the Assumption from 3 to 4 o'clock. Miss Edith Hannauer will be the organist, assisted

The Touch That Puts The World To Work

The mere touch of a human hand on the Electric switch sets in motion the machinery of the World! We whizz across continents, sail the seas, rush under mountain ranges—at a finger's pressure!

One single lever places this same power under absolute control in electric passenger cars. No shifting, no balking, no stalling—a simple thrust of the hand and a world-power is at your beck and call.

Simplicity of operation is but one advantageous feature of Electric cars. Ample speed, ample cruising range, climbing ability and economy are others that make Rauch & Lang Electric Automobiles ideal for every day use. Ask for a demonstration and let the car speak for itself.

berta Meyer, Rosemary Luttrelle, Virginia D'Arcy, Ursula Donohue, Marie Nirgenan, Alice Gamewell and Julia Estelle Runge.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Marguerite Padberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence P. Padberg, 3901 South Broadway, and Arthur C. Striebel. Mr. Striebel is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Striebel, 4654 Virginia avenue. No date for the wedding has been set.

Miss Dora Lloyd Livingston, 6032 Suburban avenue, entertained with a dinner Dec. 3 at her home, to announce her engagement to F. M. Deggendorf of Potosi, Mo. The wedding will take place Christmas day at the home of her sister, Mrs. M. V. Clive of Upper Alton, Ill. The guests at the dinner were Misses Marietta French, Frances Pressler, Elizabeth Cannon, Marie O'Connell, Irene Britton, Katheryn Church, Leola Church, Lillian Freese, Margaret Stanton, Regina Casey of Potosi, Mmes. John Goodyear of Wood River, Ill., H. V. Olive of Upper Alton, Charles Werner and Frank Westlake.

252 Births and 203 Deaths.

There were 252 births and 203 deaths reported in St. Louis last week. Twenty-eight persons died of pneumonia, 25 of organic heart trouble, 20 of Bright's disease, 17 of cancer, 15 of diseases of the circulatory system, 12 of tuberculosis, 11 of apoplexy and five of diphtheria. There were six accidental deaths, five suicides, two homicides and two deaths as the result of criminal carelessness.

Mistake in Vital Statistics Notice.

Through the clerical error of a typist in the Health Department on Dec. 6 a mistake was made in the publication of a list of births. Through the mistake the arrival of a child in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin M. Kaufmann, 5827A Minerva avenue, was omitted, and a birth in the family of C. and A. Wooley of 4849 Natural Bridge avenue was said to have taken place at 5827a Minerva avenue, which was the home of the Kaufmanns.

Relatives' Auxiliary of 85th Division.

The Relatives' Auxiliary of the Thirty-fifth Division will hold a meeting Tuesday at 2 p. m. at Scruggs Auditorium to arrange for Christmas work at the hospitals. The Hospital Committee of the auxiliary will give an entertainment to the inmates of the Public Health Hospital tomorrow evening.

Record Dress Sale

6000 Dresses Recently Valued From $49.50 to $195 Choice $25

Just one year ago we made our second attempt to sell, in one day, 3000 Dresses at $25 each, and came exasperatingly close to this goal—much closer than our first attempt. However, we feel that it is going to be done this year, for we have succeeded in assembling the greatest assortment of high-grade Dresses and Robes we have ever offered in any one sale at one price. But few Dresses recently worth less than $65.00, while fully 50% of them were worth $69.50 to $195.

Total Sales of $75,000 in One Day—This Is Our Goal!

The ENTIRE HOUSE will be given over to this sale. No coats, suits, furs, blouses or anything else will be advertised for Monday—nothing but these marvelous Dresses at $25 each. We are thoroughly prepared to sell $75,000 worth of these Dresses in the one day. In fact, we expect to do so, for the values are the greatest we have ever offered.

The Entire Third Floor From Broadway to Sixth Street Given Over to This Sale

This $95 Dress of orange Georgette and satin, beautifully trimmed in brilliants, is only one of the 800 styles involved at $25.

MISSOURIANS FIGURE IN WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Last Week Marked by Many Private Affairs, Besides President's Dinner to Governors.

The Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The week in Washington was fraught with social interests not only on account of the dinner at the White House on Thursday night for the Governors of the States, but the many brilliant and interesting private dinner parties. Since the distinguished visitors from other lands within our gates have all been entertained at dinner at the various embassies and legations and Cabinet homes, the bars are down for unofficial entertainment.

The strict formality of the White House was broken pleasantly by the recitations of a clever monologist, playing at one of the Washington theaters, which were greatly enjoyed by the guests. The President and Mrs. Harding received the guests in the East Room, Mrs. Harding wearing a handsome gown of heavy white crepe satin made in a draped train effect with an overdrapery of black tulle and embroidered in Rhinestones.

Dinner at White House.

The dinner was served in the State dining room at a horseshoe-shaped table, a clever contrivance for the formal State functions, which gives both the President and his wife a vantage point from which to see and be seen by the guests and also provides for greater seating capacity for a large company. The pink chrysanthemums, relieved by dainty pink pompoms and maiden hair ferns, formed banks on this table throwing into relief the snow-white hand-woven White House linen with the crest of the United States interwoven in it and the gold rimmed china with the seal of the United States, which is the favorite dinner service of Mrs. Harding. The ornate but stately mantelpiece at the side of the room was also banked with ferns and chrysanthemums.

Before and after the dinner the guests strolled through the State rooms on the main floor which were especially decorated with flowers from the White House conservatories in their honor. Mrs. Harding has stepped aside from the unwritten law that only American Beauties must be placed in the Red Room, which is used as formal family sitting room, and has tried out, with very good effect, roses of a smaller variety and a lighter shade than the American Beauties. Also she has introduced the placing of golden blooms in chrysanthemums and yellow roses in the oval-shaped Blue Room, which has been the scene of notable weddings.

Clubs Open to Women.

The interest of women in the conference is not confined to the four representatives women of the Advisory Council who sit on the weighty issues to be brought before the delegates, but among other official women as well as club women generally.

Headquarters for the visiting women have been opened at the club houses of the various organizations. Among the prominent women who have come here are Mrs. Philip North Moore of St. Louis, president of the National Council of Women. Mrs. Moore is always popular and has a wide acquaintance with the foreign women because of the number of times she has attended gatherings of the International Council of Women in Europe.

As a friendly attention from Missouri to Iowa, Mrs. Selden Spencer, wife of Senator Spencer, poured tea last Wednesday at the first of the at homes of Mrs. Henry C. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture.

H. G. Wells, the well known English novelist and publicist who has declined all invitations to speak or even attend "tea fights," having met Mrs. Coolidge at dinner, broke his rule and attended her "at home" where he was constantly the center of an admiring group. Gen. Pershing, Missouri's gallant soldier son, also was a conspicuous figure at Mrs. Coolidge's affair, but he followed the rules of a good soldier and went bravely into the battle of the afternoon, visiting each Cabinet home, drinking tea, fruit punch or eating sherbet as the case might be.

Sullivan Death Accidental.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned yesterday in the case of Mrs. Annie Sullivan, 52 years old, of 713 South Fourth street, who died Thursday night at the city hospital of injuries suffered that afternoon when struck at Fifteenth and Locust streets by an automobile. The car was driven by George Geissler of 3953 Ohio avenue. Witnesses testified Mrs. Sullivan stepped in front of the automobile.

THE WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS
PATEK, PHILIPPE
JULES JURGENSEN

No better index to the character of the merchandise carried by this store could be given than that Bolland's is sole agent for these celebrated Watches in St. Louis and the vicinity.

Scientifically constructed of the finest materials and especially jeweled, each Watch of either make is unerringly accurate.

All models are shown. It is a beautiful display and the gift of one of these remarkable timepieces would be regarded as something apart from everything else and therefore valued accordingly.

Diamonds Sapphires Pearls Emeralds

The utter loveliness of these genuine gems make a deep appeal to those who admire fine jewels. The various mountings of platinum and gold are exquisitely fashioned. Nothing in jewelry surpasses the Bolland collection and exhibit.

The seeker for unusual gifts, gifts distinctive in every respect and, best of all, exclusive, will find the most discriminating to be at Bolland's.

Just a word about price. Bolland's prices are moderate—an outstanding fact that has made its 73 years of successful business possible and popular.

with the zest which betrayed his enjoyment of a duty well done.

Denby and Weeks Functions.

At the home of the Secretary of the Navy, additional dashes of color were given by the uniforms of the foreign and our own army and navy officers, all of whom divided their time between the Denby home or that of Secretary of War Weeks, interspersed by brief visits to pay respects at other Cabinet homes. Mrs. Denby had assisting her several house guests and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy. Mrs. Denby wore a gown of cream Georgette crepe embroidered in gold in a Greek key design. Mrs. Roosevelt looked very young and charming in a gown of King's blue Canton crepe, with long, flowing sleeves with cuffs of gray satin and gray fur. A wide girdle of gray satin edged with fur marked the long waistline and hung down in panel effect below the gown.

Much interest is manifested in Washington in Beatrice Henderson, granddaughter of the late Senator John B. Henderson of Missouri, who is a "sub-deb" and will make her formal bow to Washington society in a year or two. Miss Henderson is of the athletic type, devoted to sports, and is noted for the natty appearance of her sport clothes. Miss Henderson, who is the daughter of John B. Henderson Jr., only son of the Senator, and Mrs. Henderson, has won additional popularity among the younger set since her doting grandmother put in the beautiful swimming pool that is now one of the principal attractions of "Henderson Castle," as the stately English-type house on Upper Sixteenth street is called.

Grandmother Still Active Figure.

The pool is the most elaborate private one in Washington and during the summer many swimming parties were held there. Mrs. Henderson, despite her advancing age, is still a leader in Washington social circles. She is noted for her vegetarian theories and is said to be able to compose a dinner of vegetables that leaves not a trace of a longing for flesh or fowl.

Part of the Missouri delegation is quartered at Congress Hall, the popular congressional hostelry where lived former Speaker Champ Clark, Representative and Mrs. W. Shackleford and other well-known Missourians of the present period. At this hotel are Representative and Mrs. Leonidas C. Dyer with their two daughters, Representative and Mrs. Edgar C. Ellis and Representative Samuel A. Shelton.

Mrs. James A. Reed, wife of the Senator from Missouri, has arrived in Washington and reopened her house at 1926 Biltmore street, N. W., which is a center of Missouri hospitality. Senator Reed, as one of the ranking Democratic Senators, is prominent in conference festivities and Mrs. Reed is a frequent and interested spectator in the gallery at the open sessions of the conference.

PLAN FOR THREE GARBAGE INCINERATORS INSTEAD OF ONE

Aldermanic Committee Would Let Various Parts of City Join in Unpleasantness of Odor.

A plan to establish three garbage incinerators at three different points about the city has been adjudged preferable to the proposal to establish one incinerator at Spring avenue and Gratiot street by the Public Utilities Committee of the Board of Aldermen.

Chairman Reis of the committee, after a conference with Mayor Kiel, announced that the committee would not approve the one-plant bill now before it and had asked for a three-plant bill to be substituted by Director of Street and Sewers Fisk.

The advantage of the new proposal, as seen by the committee, is that it will reduce the haul and compel each section of the city to bear the unpleasantness of the odor of its own garbage. Residents in the vicinity of Spring and Gratiot have protested the establishment of the plant there. They said that the hauling of the entire city's collection of garbage past their doors would be offensive and would depreciate property values.

COFFEE AND BREAD FOR JOBLESS

A cup of coffee and a slice of bread will be served to jobless and homeless men who are walking the streets in the downtown section within a radius of four blocks around Seventh and Market streets every morning between 7:30 and 9:30 during the winter months at the expense of the C. F. Blanke Tea and Coffee Co., which is equipping a coffee-serving place in the northwest corner of the Blanke Building, Seventh and Market streets.

In a letter to the Mayor, telling of the project, Blanke said that probably more hungry men are walking the streets in this section than in any other section of the city. He said he would welcome the co-operation of any charitably inclined citizen.

Wife Sues Truck Firm Manager.

Mrs. Edith M. Rising yesterday filed suit to divorce CharlesA. Rising, 1148 Blackstone avenue, manager of a truck company, alleging incompatibility and that he treated her with coldness and nagged her. She also charges that he would go out in his automobile and leave her at home. They were married Jan. 29, 1902, and separated April 2 last. They have one child, Harold, 16 years old.

ST. VINCENT DE PAUL SOCIETY'S REPORT

$49,935 Expended Through Various Conferences in Year Ended on Sept. 30.

A complete review of its work in helping the poor, during the year which ended Sept. 30, is contained in the printed annual report of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, made public today. It shows that $49,935.84 was expended through the 72 conferences, or branches, distributed throughout the city. A total of $70,077.76 was collected in the city during the year.

Archbishop Glennon, in a letter to William L. Igoe, who is president of the metropolitan council, urges that the extension of the number of conferences should not be abated until there is one in every parish. There is no parish that does not need a well-ordered charity, he says.

Receipts are from a large variety of sources, including meeting and church collections, sales of the Sunday Visitor and legacies. SS. Peter and Paul conference had the largest receipts, with $2652.30, being barely ahead of St. Anthony's, which had $2651.26. The latter is the largest conference in the city, having 319 active members. The SS. Peter and Paul collection was swelled by a $1600 legacy.

During the fiscal year the conferences distributed 3744 pieces of clothing, 657 pairs of shoes and 63 pieces of furniture. They also distributed $28,183.70 worth of provisions. Expenditures of the central headquarters totaled $18,536.53 for general purposes, and $1478.82 for special purposes.

During the year the society leased the building at 111 North Sixteenth street as a central headquarters. In his report to the national headquarters, Igoe stated that a building fund had been created, out of which it is hoped to purchase the building in the next year.

Collections in St. Louis for all purposes were $20,816.14 more in the year just passed than in the preceding year, and the expenditures were $17,635.72 greater. There also was an increase of 332 in the total number of active members in the city, which now stands at 2787.

During the year, St. Margaret's conference undertook the new work of furnishing advisers and confidents to the Catholic boys at Bellefontaine farm. Igoe reported that this work had been successful.

SAY $30,000,000 IN BUILDING WOULD FOLLOW WAGE CUT

Master Builders Have Framed Letter to Workmen to Be Distributed With Referendum Ballot.

$10,000,000 OF THIS FOR THE WORKMEN

Comparative Figures Given on Costs of Materials to Show Why Pay Reduction Should Be Approved.

That reduced building costs would result in starting building projects in St. Louis aggregating $30,000,000, of which $10,000,000 would be for wages, an average of $800 per man for the 13,000 men in the building trades, is stated in a letter from the Master Builders' Association to the workmen in the building trades.

This letter is to accompany the ballot for a referendum vote on the proposal of a voluntary decrease in wages of 20 per cent, from the prevailing wage of $1.25 to $1 an hour for these workmen after Jan. 1.

It will be remembered that Director of Public Welfare Cunliff made a survey of building projects being held up by high costs and reported an aggregate of $15,000,000 in projects of $200,000 and upward. This followed an exhaustive survey by the Post-Dispatch in which it was shown that buildings aggregating $20,000,000 in cost were being held back by high costs.

The Builders' Letter.

After reviewing the conferences of the Joint Committee of builders and union leaders, the letter, which was signed by R. L. Rinehardt, president of the Master Builders' Association, directs attention to the following facts:

"While the list of proposed building projects totals more than $15,000,000 in value, as this list includes only projects that cost $200,000 or more, it is the opinion of the Master Builders that fully twice that much work is contemplated and can be induced to proceed by a properly reduced cost.

"Considering that 35 per cent of the cost of these structures is money paid to the building crafts workmen, and assuming that $20,000,000 worth of work will be induced to proceed in a reasonable time, then over $10,000,000 will be paid in workmen's wages. There are approximately 13,000 such workmen; therefore, this work will result in a wage of about $800.00 to each workman when equally distributed.

"Attention is called to the schedule of comparative wage scales paid in a number of large cities in the United States, showing that at present St. Louis has the highest wage scale for building crafts workmen in the United States. This condition does not encourage building enterprise in St. Louis.

"During the past nine months, as is shown by the amount of building work done, such cities as are about the size of St. Louis have done two and three times as much building and many cities one-half the size of St. Louis have done twice as much building as St. Louis.

Comparative Material Costs.

"Attention is called to the chart showing comparative costs of building materials in 1913-1920-1921. According to this table:

$1.00 worth of brick in 1913 would cost $1.61 in 1921.
$1.00 worth of gravel in 1913 would cost $1.28 in 1921.
$1.00 worth of sand in 1913 would cose $1.77 in 1921.
$1.00 worth of cement in 1913 would cost $1.58 in 1921.
$1.00 worth of structural steel in 1913 would cost $1.28 in 1921.
$1.00 worth of plumbing goods in 1913 would cost $1.70 in 1921.
$1.00 worth electric goods in 1913 would cost $1.13 in 1921.
$1.00 worth of building wages in 1913 would cost $1.82 in 1921.
$1.00 worth of living cost in 1913 would cost $1.52 in 1921.

Note that building wages cost more today as compared with 1913 than do the materials, as well as living cost.

"In summing up this matter let it be understood that this method of arriving at a new wage scale is a distinct departure from the means heretofore used.

"There can be no doubt the public today feels that the wages paid in the building crafts are too high. If wages are reduced as recommended by the Master Builders' Association, it will be a voluntary action on the part of the building trades workmen and public sentiment towards these organized workmen will be greatly improved.

"The Master Builders' Association firmly believes, by adopting this recommendation, the building trades workmen will restore public confidence and those desiring to build will have no further reason to delay their building program."

The letter, pamphlets and ballots are being run off the press today and will be turned over to the Building Trades Council early next week for mailing to the membership. About 11,000 men, only those who are receiving the basic wage of $1.25 an hour, or who did receive this wage up to Sept. 1, may vote.

SUIT TO GET PROPERTY SEIZED IN RAID FAILS

Judge Faris Refuses to Order Malt Extracts and Syrups Returned.

Judge Faris in the United States District Court yesterday denied the application of the K. B. Supply Co., 21 South Fourth street, and the George P. Steyh Supply Co., 19 South Fourth street, for the restoration of property seized in raids by Federal agents about two months ago. The property seized included malt extracts and syrups and paraphernalia for use in making and bottling drinks. Officers of the companies are awaiting trial on charges of violating the Volstead act.

The applications for restoration of the property alleged that the search warrant and the application for it were not in legal form.

Judge Faris, in his opinion, said he had examined the application, which was supported by an affidavit made by Andrew McCampbell, a special agent for the Internal Revenue Department who swore that he had good reason to believe and did believe that the companies had in their possession certain articles fitted for use in making intoxicating drugs.

"On that statement alone the search warrant could not have been issued," said the Judge, "but in the affidavit McCampbell went further and said he believed these things because he had seen these articles with his own eyes and had purchased some of them. In the search warrant the Commissioner issuing it did not state all of these details, but so long as they were in the affidavit it was not necessary that they be put into the body of the warrant."

The Judge pointed out that the search warrant clause of the Volstead act specifies that warrants are to be issued in accordance with the procedure laid down in the espionage act of June 15, 1907, which provides that such warrants may be issued for probable cause supported by an affidavit describing the property to be seized and naming the persons holding the property and describing its location. This act provides that search warrants may be issued by United States District Judges, United States Commissioners and Judges of State courts of record.

Lecture to Advertising Club.

R. N. Fellows of Chicago will deliver an illustrated lecture to the Advertising Club of St. Louis Tuesday at Hotel Statler. The subject will be "To Sell More, Hustle More." Members of the Sales Managers' Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce have been invited to attend.

Are Weak Nerves Sapping Your Strength, Ruining Your Health And Holding You Back In Life?

What to do—Physician Explains How to Revitalize Wornout, Exhausted Nerves, and Increase Your Strength, Energy and Endurance, Often in Two Weeks' Time.

Weak Nerve Force is often the sole cause of chronic ill health and lack of success in your undertakings. Thousands of able, intelligent men and women are struggling, trying to get ahead in life, but they always fall just short of success because they lack sufficient Nerve Force to give them the physical and mental power to overcome difficult obstacles which lie in their path.

Without plenty of Nerve Force you lose your magnetism, force and courage, you feel your own weakness and others know that you are weak. The minute you enter an office to apply for a position, or try to sell goods, or put through a business deal of any kind, the man opposite you instinctively knows and feels that you are weaker than he, and you are therefore doomed to failure, while the strong, courageous, forceful magnetic man, with plenty of Nerve Force in his nerve and brain cells, successfully faces and overcomes every obstacle and difficulty and goes on to great success in life. When your Nerve Force becomes weakened, all the vital organs of your body lose their normal strength and vigor, and as a result, all kinds of alarming symptoms may appear. Headaches and extreme nervousness are very frequent symptoms, and most persons are moody, irritable and easily depressed. In such cases it is worse than foolish to waste your time taking mere stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs—you must have something to furnish an increased supply of the nerve-vital fluid to your nerve and brain cells. This is most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product contains the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most nearly resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. It also contains organic iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Organic iron enriches the blood and plenty of rich red blood means more Nerve Force, so that Nuxated Iron not only feeds what might be termed artificial Nerve Force to the nerve cells, but it stimulates the blood to manufacture a greatly increased supply of new nerve force.

NOTE—Artificial nerve force with organic iron—true blood and nerve food—may be had from any druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron. The successful results attending its use by over 4,000,000 people annually enable the manufacturers to guarantee that it will increase your nerve force, strength and endurance in two weeks' time or they will refund your money.

PORTO RICO LEGISLATOR TALKS ABOUT REILY

W. McK. Jones, on Stop in St. Louis, Says Governor Declared He Would "Make Clean Sweep."

W. McK. Jones of Ponce, Porto Rico, a member of the Porto Rico Legislature and of the commission of the Unionist party sent to this country to prefer charges against E. Mont Reily, Governor of the island, was in St. Louis Friday on his way back to Washington from Kansas City. Reily's home, where he had been investigating Reily's career. He said he had obtained information which would be made the basis of charges supplemental to those involved in Reily's administration in Porto Rico.

Jones said he had promised Secretary of War Weeks, to whom President Harding had delegated the investigation of the complaints on which the demand for Reily's removal was made, that he would not make public the detailed charges until Weeks had had an opportunity to look into them. He told one or two interesting stories of the Missourian's reign in Porto Rico, however.

Meeting in Washington.

"I first met Reily in Washington after his appointment, but before he had taken office," Jones said. "I am an American and have lived in Porto Rico 17 years, and I think I know something of the ways of the island affairs should be handled. I called on Reily in the Washington Hotel. He had a suite of two rooms. In one, the first one into which I was ushered, were a group of ward politicians from Missouri. Reily took me into the other room.

"'I am going to make a clean sweep in Porto Rico,' he told me. 'I am going to fire everybody there and get men loyal to the United States.'

"'Don't you think you had better wait until you have been on the job two or three months,' I ventured to suggest, 'and then you will have information as to who you want to retain and who you want to fire?'

"'I know all about it now,' he replied. 'I'm going to take the best detective in the world down there, the finest detective in Kansas City.'"

"I asked whether this man was acquainted on the island and if he spoke the Spanish language.

"'No,' Reily said, 'he doesn't need to. He can detect in English just as well as anybody can in Spanish.'"

"Guards Always With Reily."

Jones said there was much pomp and ceremony connected with Reily's administration. When he goes out in his automobile, Jones said, the Chief of Police, with drawn revolver, stands on the running board on one side, and the "greatest detective in the world," also with drawn devolver, on the running board on the other side. Following his car is a squad of policemen on motor cycles.

Jones said that when Riley is away from his residence he insists upon having the two officers constantly at his side.

Accompanying Jones on his trip to St. Louis and Kansas City was C. B. Keene, a Washington lawyer employed by the commission to aid in pressing the charges against Reily.

FIVE WOMEN NAMED TO BOARD OF CHILDREN'S GUARDIANS

Ordinance Increasing Membership to 12 and Providing for Women Members Passed in July.

Five women were appointed yesterday to membership on the Board of Children's Guardians, thus increasing the membership to 12. Heretofore the members were men only, but the Board of Aldermen in July, at the request of women's organizations, passed an ordinance increasing the board's membership and providing for the appointment of women.

Those appointed were Mrs. Warren F. Drescher, Washington Hotel, second vice-president of the Women's Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. Michael J. Cullinane, 3811 Ashland avenue, representing the Queen's Daughters, a Catholic organization; Mrs. James J. Connell, 4373a Laclede avenue, representing the Catholic Women's Association; Mrs. John S. Payne, 5173 Kensington avenue, president of the Eighth District, Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. G. V. R. Mechin, 5083 Raymond avenue, president of the Big Sisters' Association.

The Mayor stated that his main purpose in appointing the women was to insure passage of the bill in the Board of Aldermen providing an appropriation of $100,000 for the construction of a girls' industrial home similar to the boys' industrial home at Fort Bellefontaine. It has been planned to erect the home opposite the municipal farm for the insane at Bellefontaine and Larrimore roads, St. Louis County.

The other members of the Board of Children's Guardians are Forrest C. Donnell, Philip C. Scanlan, George H. Williams, C. G. Rathmann, Irvin Bettmann and Ferdinand C. Meyer. A vacancy created by the recent resignation of Francis G. Eaton has not yet been filled.

COMBINED POULTRY AND PET SHOW TO BE HELD AT COLISEUM

Poultry, dogs, pigeons, rabbits and canaries will be combined in one show at the Coliseum Dec. 29 to Jan 2, and, at the same time, conventions of breeders and fanciers of these creatures will be held in this city. Charles Key Cullom has charge of arrangements for the show, and the St. Louis Convention, Publicity and Tourist Bureau is preparing for the conventions.

Included in the premium list which is now available for prospective exhibitors are 15 silver cups in addition to cash prizes, medals, diplomas, ribbons and other minor awards.

The organizations to be officially represented are the American Polish Fowl Club, American Poultry Association, Mid-Western Bantam Association, Rhode Island White Club of America, American Barred Rock Club, National Fanciers and Breeders' Association, Boston Terrier Specialty Club, Missouri State Poultry Association, Pigeon Fanciers' Association and the American Canary Breeders' Association.

RAILROAD MAN'S LETTER ON THE BARGE SERVICE

Head of Illinois Central Says Statement Service Is Paying Is Misleading.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3, 1921.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The signed article by Mr. Clark McAdams in the Post-Dispatch of Nov. 13 in reference to the operation of the Federal barge line on the lower Mississippi River is misleading, in that it magnifies beyond its true importance a statement of alleged operating results which covers only a short period of time and fails to take into consideration items of expense which would be chargeable to a commercial venture operating under otherwise similar conditions.

The Illinois Central System is not opposing the experiment which the Federal Government is making with its barge lines on the lower Mississippi and the Warrior rivers. We have gone the experiment every assistance we have been called upon to give, and we favor seeing it carried to a conclusion. To say that the operation of the barge line on the lower Mississippi is a business venture in which the Government has made money is to ignore these facts: that the line is not a business venture, but an experiment to determine what part inland waterways shall play in the future transportation plans of the country; that up to the short period in this year when a profit is reported the line had sustained operating deficits which are large in comparison with the business handled, and which the taxpayers have had to make good; and that the reported profit takes no consideration of the great investment which has been poured from the public treasury into keeping the waters traversed navigable, takes no consideration of the investment in facilities and equipment provided by the taxpayers, and takes no consideration of taxes, depreciation and insurance—all items which would have to be charged against a commercial venture and which, by reason of not having been charged against this experiment, must be met by the taxpayers of the country.

"National Experiment."

The national experiment which we are making with inland waterways to determine what part they shall play in the national transportation plans of the future must be fair—fair to the waterways themselves, to the other agencies of transportation (operating on a commercial basis), and to the people at large. It is not fair to exaggerate beyond their relative importance alleged results which appear more favorable than they are. I regret to see this effort by Mr. McAdams and other overenthusiastic friends of water transportation who are trying to make the present experiment profit at the expense of other transportation agencies, especially the railroads. It reveals a lack of vision on their part, a lack of vision which is the more deplorable because of the assistance and co-operation which have been given the experiment by railway men.

No informed person recognizes the Mississippi-Warrior experiment as a business venture. The following is from the report of the Chief of Inland and Coastwise Waterways Service to the Secretary of War for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920:

"Congress has in numerous instances, and particularly in consideration of the disposition of the rail carriers, distinctly recorded itself as opposed to a general policy of Government operation of public utilities. . . . It is believed to be incompatible with public desire to consider the retention of these water lines once they have been established upon a satisfactory operating basis and reduced to a condition of effective operating efficiency by the Federal Government."

The public welfare demands a well-correlated and efficient national system of transportation. To secure such a system, we must make use of those instrumentalities which prove themselves most efficient and most economical. The three most popular methods of transportation—by railroad, by waterway and by motor truck—must be considered in the light of our national problem, and their use must be directed along lines which will work for the efficiency and economy of transportation as a whole. The motor truck probably will take a definite place in this plan as an agency for the transportation of freight, and especially high-grade freight, in short distances in congested areas, and in supplementing the railroads and the waterways by penetrating regions which they cannot reach. There are places where the waterways have proved their ability to handle freight more economically than the railroads, and in those regions the railroads have discontinued competing services. There are other sections where the waterways are, but where the railroads, by reason of various considerations, have been able to handle traffic more cheaply and efficiently, and the waterways have gone out of business. There are still other sections where waterways cannot be provided, and there the field is the railroads'.

RAILROAD MAN'S LETTER ON THE BARGE LINE SERVICE

If the water carrier service is in fact more feasible than rail service in any particular territory, the railroads should be permitted to own and operate barge lines to supplement and co-ordinate their services by rail. By making the railroads and the waterways co-ordinate parts of the whole plan of transportation, mistakes of the past can be eliminated. There would be no disposition to ruinous competition, but the most feasible route would be utilized in each line of traffic. Neither rail nor water facilities would be developed to such an extent as to make for large economic waste, but each would be developed in line with the business problems to be met. Each could supplement the other. A constructive national transportation policy should contemplate permitting the railroads to operate water carrier service, from which they are now barred by legislative restrictions.

"Cost Paid by Taxpayers."

In the reports of the Federal barge lines which I have seen only the actual expenses of operation, selling traffic, maintenance of equipments, etc., are taken into consideration. In addition to similar expenses the railroads are required to build their own lines and facilities and buy and replace their own equipment; the railroads pay more than a quarter of a billion dollars annually in taxes; and they must earn a capital return sufficient to compensate the investors whose invested savings have made their enterprise possible. Instead of the direct users of the waterways service doing this in the case of the Government's experiment, the taxpayers of the country as a whole pay those items—they provide the funds to make the rivers navigable, they have purchased for the barge lines the equipment and facilities used in operation, they pay the taxes from which the barge lines are exempted, and they will be called upon, if the Government continues in the experiment, to replace the facilities and equipment as they are worn out or become out of date.

I do not bring up this phase of the subject in protest against the methods pursued by the Government in the operation of its barge lines; I bring it up to show how utterly unfair it is to exaggerate the importance of alleged operating results produced by these experimental water carriers. It is unfair to the waterways themselves, it is unfair to the railroads, and it is wholly unfair to the public, in whose interest the experiment is being made. Representing to the public that the barge lines are saving the shippers money is, in the face of facts thus far produced and given circulation, entirely misleading. If the taxpayers met the costs of providing the railroads with facilities and equipment and renewing them from time to time, if they agreed to absorb the quarter of a billion dollars in taxes now paid by the railroads each year—in short, if the railroads were treated on a parity with the barge lines now operated as an experiment by the Government—would the barge lines then be able to render a service as economical and as altogether feasible as that produced by the railroads? Or, if the water carriers had to meet these costs from which they are now freed—as they should have to meet them when the experiment is ended and their operation becomes a commercial venture—would they then be able to charge rates which would produce savings for the shippers? These are the questions to be considered in viewing the Federal barge lines experiment.

"Benefits Must Be National."

If we do not view the situation in that light, we are not playing fair to the taxpayers of the country as a whole. If the inland waterways are to be an extensive part of our future transportation plans as a nation, and the people as a whole are to be called upon to provide the funds for making the rivers navigable, their benefits must be national. If they are not to be a national benefit, but are to be used solely or largely for the benefit of the communities located directly upon the waterways, their costs should be borne by those who receive the benefits.

The article by Mr. McAdams makes the point that the operation of the lower Mississippi barge line removes the disadvantages to the shipper of the Middle West of having to compete for Pacific Coast business against the Atlantic Coast shipper who uses a through water service. Here again is an example of how a fault in our national waterways policy has had a discriminatory effect. The people of the Middle West were taxed to help build a Shipping Board fleet at a large expense, and those vessels are now being operated at a loss in excess of $5,000,000 a month to carry business at rates which take transcontinental traffic from the railroads. The taxpayers of the Middle West also helped to build the Panama Canal, through which it is proposed these coastwise trading vessels shall be given free passage, without being called upon to pay, in the form of tolls, for the cost of operation and maintenance of the canal and the return upon investment. Mid-Western shippers should feel keenly that discrimination.

The article published Nov. 13 also gives circulation to some of the untrue things which have been said about the railroads, charging that they have not kept pace with the march of business and that they broke down during the war. I realize that the impression that the railroads have not kept pace with business has been given general circulation. It is true that they have had a long, hard fight to be permitted to serve the public. For many years they were called upon to meet every kind of political attack, and they fought unsuccessfully for years for rates which would permit them to be developed as they should have been developed. Because of their small net earnings, productive new capital was practically forced out of the railway investment field. But to say that the railroads have not met their obligations in the performance of transportation service is misleading and untrue. As an example of how they have increased their capacity, take the case of the Illinois Central System. In 1910, we produced 7,659,045,000 revenue ton miles of freight service; in other words, we carried the equivalent of that number of revenue-producing tons one mile. In 1920, on practically the same mileage, we produced 15,777,746,000 revenue ton miles, an increase of 106 per cent. What has been true of the achievements of the Illinois Central System has also been true of other railroads. There is no limit to what the railroads may do in expansion and growth under fair and equitable public treatment.

Breakdown in War Denied.

To say that the railroads broke down during the war is also misleading. Five days after the war was declared, 175 executives of the railroads of the country met in Washington, agreed upon a virtual pooling of their interests for the war emergency, and created a Railroad War Board to co-ordinate their services. They practically turned the railroads over to the Government for its war uses. During 1917 the railroads of the country carried 127,000,000,000 more ton-miles of freight than they carried in 1915, two years previous. The increased ton mileage handled by the American railroads in 1917 over and above the amount which they handled in 1915 was of itself greater than all of the ton mileage handled by all of the railroads in England, Germany, Russia, Austria and France during the last year officially reported. During the period of the War Board's activities orders were given by the board for the movement of more than 200,000 empty cars regardless of ownership from one part of the country to another, where they could be used best to promote the winning of the war. Nothing of the kind had ever been done before or even contemplated in this country. During the summer of 1917, when it was necessary to build as quickly as possible the several large national army cantonments required, it was necessary for the railroads to furnish empty cars at the hundreds of places where needed on main lines, branch lines and side lines for all the different kinds of materials necessary for construction purposes, and during the period of about eight weeks while construction was most active the railroads moved more than 140,000 carloads of material required for cantonment and shipyard purposes. This large tonnage was moved so promptly and so satisfactorily that the Secretary of War himself is authority for the statement that the construction program of the Government, unprecedented as it was, was not delayed in the slighest waiting for transportation.

The Car Tieup in 1917.

Shortly after war was declared the demands for transportation to the seaboard, and in connection with governmental activities of all sorts, became so great that the terminals of the Eastern railroads became badly congested. The Government itself made demands upon the railroads for priority movements which greatly impaired the ability of the railroads to handle the other business offered. The demand for workers in the industries engaged in the manufacture of war supplies and the offer of exorbitant wages made it difficult for the railroads to secure efficient help. The climax came with the advent of the worst winter ever experienced. In the early winter of 1917, there began to be an excessive accumulation of cars on the Eastern seaboard, and that served to slow up transportation movement, although the fault was plainly in that the railroads were able to and did carry more tonnage than could be absorbed by ships for export and by mills for manufacture, and not because of a shortage of transportation. It will be recalled that it was only the railroads serving that section of the country largely devoted to the manufacture of war materials, and which were called upon to bear the brunt of adverse conditions, that had any real serious difficulty in handling the traffic offered. Certainly no one ever claimed that the Western and Southern roads were not able to provide transportation for all the traffic which shippers were able to load and unload promptly and for which overseas space could be provided.

We of the Illinois Central System advocate giving the fullest publicity to transportation matters. Since the railroads occupy the unique position of doing busines at rates fixed by their patrons, the public, through the Interstate Commerce Commission, and producing a service the cost of which is largely determined by the public through the Railroad Labor Board's power over railway wages, the greatest item of expense, it is necessary that the public have the facts. We stand willing to assist in securing the broadest dissemination of information which will be reflected in an attitude by the public toward the agencies of transportation which will work out to the best interests of the people.

In justice to the Post-Dispatch and its readers, I ask the privilege of suggesting that you publish this letter. While it cannot undo the harm of the original story, it can supply the facts for those who read with a desire to learn. Yours very truly,

C. H. MARKHAM.

ROLLA WELLS TREASURER OF WILSON FOUNDATION FUND

Date for Receiving Contributions Set for Jan. 16—Quota of State Placed at $60,000.

Announcement that Rolla Wells, receiver for the United States Railways, has been chosen treasurer for Missouri of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation was made yesterday by J. Lionberger Davis, chairman for Missouri. The purpose is to raise a fund for awards of prizes for distinguished services to democracy, liberty, justice and humanity. The Missouri quota is $60,000.

The date for the acceptance of contributions has been foxed for Jan. 16, but it was announced yesterday that any persons desiring to contribute before that time may send the subscriptions to Wells.

The work of organizing the State according to congressional districts and also organizing each county to collect the fund is progressing satisfactorily, it was stated, and by next week it is expected a county chairman will have been chosen in each county.

Mrs. Joseph W. Lewis of 12 Hortense place and Breckenridge Long, formerly Third Assistant Secretary of State, represented the Missouri organization at a meeting of the National Committee in New York last week. Permanent plans were made for carrying out the purpose of the Foundation. There will be a Board of Trustees of 15 members, and the Jury of Awards will consist of 25 members, 10 to be appointed by the trustees and 15 by National Organizations selected by the trustees.

REFERENDUM TO DEFEAT ROAD BONDS PLANNED

William Hirth, Head of Farmers' Association, Says Steps Will Be Taken at Once.

OPPOSED BILL IN LEGISLATURE

If Sufficient Signers Are Obtained to Petitions Amount to Be Spent Next Year Will Be Cut.

By a Saff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 10.—Steps for a referendum on the road bond bill, passed at the special session of the Legislature which adjourned a month ago, will be immediately taken by the Missouri Farmers' Association, William Hirth, its head, told a Post-Dispatch reporter today over the long-distance telephone from his home in Columbia. The purpose of the referendum is to defeat the $60,000,000 road bond project of the State.

The immediate effect of the circulation of the petition, if a sufficient number of signers is obtained to suspend the law, will be to prevent the expenditure of $10,000,000 on the roads of the State in 1922, and limit the expenditure to approximately $2,800,000.

Decision for the referendum, Hirth said, was reached at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the association at the Marquette Hotel in St. Louis last Thursday. He said the meeting was attended by 20 members.

Fight Made in Legislature.

Hirth was the leader of much of the opposition to the good roads program at both the special sessions of the Legislature this year. He fought through an attempt to organize the farmer members of the Legislature to prevent the passage of the good roads bill at the first special session in the summer. He was defeated, but succeeded in preventing the passage of a bill permitting the issuance of the bonds immediately. Through his activities and those of persons associated with him, the Legislature fixed the date of the issuance of the first $10,000,000 of bonds for March 1, 1923.

This action meant that there would be another regular session of the Legislature before the bonds would be issued, and the opponents of good roads would have an opportunity to conduct a campaign to defeat candidates who were favorable to road progress.

Issue Wixed for March, 1922.

The purpose of Gov. Hyde's call for the second special session was to repeal this law and to advance the date of issuance of the first $10,000,000 of bonds. The Legislature complied with the Governor's request and fixed the date for March 1, 1922, one year in advance of that fixed in the first bill.

Under the law referendum petitions to suspend a law may be filed with the Secretary of State at any time within 90 days after the adjournment of the Legislature. This gives Hirth and his organization approximately 60 days in which to obtain between 60,000 and 70,000 signatures. He said the task would be easy through his organization, which, he said, had 3000 "school-house clubs" in Missouri, through which the petitions would be circulated. He must obtain 5 per cent of the legal voters in each of two-thirds of the congressional districts of the State.

Hirth for Dirt Roads.

If the bond issuance law is suspended, no bondy can be issue before March 1, 1923. The Legislature will be in regular session in January, 1923, and it is said to be Hirth's intention of attempting to have radical amendments made in the State road law to meet the demands of himself and his followers that no State money shall be expended on hard-surfaced roads, and that a dirt road program shall be followed.

It had been the intention of the State administration to issue $10,000,000 of bonds next March, and to immediately let road contracts for the expenditure of that money.

At the State Highway Department it was stated today that there will be available from motor car licenses for State road work in 1922 approximately $2,800,000. In addition to this there will be about $700,000, which, under the law, will be distributed to counties on the basis of $1200 a mile for two roads. This is under thfe McCullough-Morgan law, and represents the amounts due counties under that law.

Edward B. Pryor Recovering.

Edward B. Pryor of 5257 Lindell boulevard, president of the State National Bank, who was operated on at St. Luke's Hospital for appendicitis five weeks ago, is convalescing at his home and expects to be back at his desk in a short time. The rapid recovery of Pryor is considered remarkable in view of his age. He is 67 years old. He was able to leave the hospital a week ago and has since been out riding.

Make Gloves One Gift For Every Member of the Family

Christmas comes at just the time of year when Winter wardrobes are beginning to show the wear and tear to which they are constantly subjected. Everyone is glad to replace accessories of dress, especially the Gloves.

You may choose Gloves for cold weather, for street or dress wear. There are long Gloves and short ones, and strap wrist styles. Some of them are of capeskin, others of kid, chamois, suede, mocha and suede, in all of the best light and dark shades. They range in price from $1.75 to $4.50 for children; to $8.00 for grownups.

AUTOMOBILE CLUB HERE CHANGES NAME

Now Known as St. Louis Division of Automobile Club of Missouri.

Members of the Automobile Club of St. Louis voted last week to change its name to the Automobile Club of Missouri, thus making possible the creation of the larger State organization with an extension of the free service garages which for the past year have been used by St. Louis members in the eastern half of Missouri.

Through the consolidation of other automobile clubs with the St. Louis Club there are now 25,000 members of the Automobile Club of Missouri, each of whom for the payment of $10 annual dues is entitled to free service from a garage in any part of the State. The Club guarantees that if a member's car is stopped, he can, by telephoning to the nearest official garage, have it started without cost, and if the trouble is too serious for starting, it will be hauled free to the nearest official garage.

Free Legal Aid Given.

In addition to this service members receive free legal aid, information regarding routes and weather condition, and may take advantage of the car forwarding bureau, through which lower transportation rates for automobiles are obtained.

Hereafter the St. Louis Club, which has 15,000 members, will be known as St. Louis Division, Automobile Club of Missouri. There will be 14 divisions. Division headquarters have been established in Hannibal, Joplin, Kansas City, Chillicothe, Springfield, Rolla, Cape Girardeau and Sedalia, and other division headquarters will be established before the end of the year.

The St. Louis Club is the oldest organization of its kind in the State, having been started 20 years ago.

Active in Legislation.

With the co-operation of the Kansas City and St. Joseph clubs it has been responsible for the automobile laws of recent years and through representation in Jefferson City has prevented legislation considered unfair to motor car owners. It has taken an active lead in the good roads movement, and was particularly active in the campaign for the $60,000,000 road bond issue.

Body of Sailor Due Wednesday.

The body of Chief Boatswain's Mate Oscar D. Meisner, who was killed by accident at the naval submarine base at San Pedro, Cal., on Dec. 7, will arrive in St. Louis Wednesday. Heisner, who was in the navy for 19 years, is survived by his mother, Mrs Lena Heisner of 817 St. Louis avenue, East St Louis, by two sisters, Mrs. Alma Schmisseur and Mrs. Florence Levy, and by Walter Heisner, Richard Heisner and Arthur Heisner, brothers.

Woman to Speak on City Plan.

The Round Table Luncheon Committee of the Chamber of Commerce has invited 190 organizations to appoint two official representatives of each organization to attend a series of round table discussions on the underlying problems involved in the city's progress. Mrs. E. J. Russell will speak Friday at a luncheon at the American Annex Hotel on "A City Planning Goal for St. Louis to Attain by 1930." Arrangements to attend the luncheon may be made through the Municipal Development Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce.

GARY WANTS REAL ROAD EXPERT TO ADVISE HIM

Chairman of Missouri Commission Has Asked Texas Highway Engineer to Aid in Work.

One of the plans of Theodore Gary of Kansas City, chairman of the recently appointed Missouri Highway Commission, for the expenditure of the $60,000,000 of road bonds under the commission's jurisdiction, is the employment of a man at his own expense to be his adviser in all road matters.

Gary desires that this adveser shall have capacity beyond ability as an engineer and road builder, and shall be of the executive type likely to assimilate all suggestions made to him and choose from them those best adapted to giving Missouri a road system excelled in none of the States.

It is known that Gary has asked R. J. Windrow, State highway engineer of Texas, to be this adviser. No decision in the matter has been made.

Windrow's Work.

The Post-Dispatch requested its Austin (Tex.) correspondent to prepare a statement of Windrow's accomplishments in Texas, and has received the following reply:

"Rollin J. Windrow, State highway engineer, was appointed to his present position in May, 1919. After graduation from the State Agricultural and Mechanical College, he was employed by the United States War Department on levee and improvement work at Vicksburg, Miss.; from there he went to the Santa Fe Railroad as location and construction engineer. He next spent two years as instructor in engineering at the State Agricultural and Mechanical College, leaving that position to become bridge designer for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. He returned to Texas in 1913 as county engineer of McLennan County, which place he held until 1917, when he was appointed a member of the State Board of Water Engineers. He retired to private practice and also served as city engineer for Waco until his appointment to his present position. It is stated that his appointment was not in any way of a political nature.

Construction in Texas.

"During the time he has been State Highway Engineer more construction has been carried on in Texas than in any other State, the total amount of State and Federal aid involved in these projects being approximately $50,000,000. At this time highway construction under Windrow's supervision is being carried on at the rate of $2,000,000 a month. During the calendar year of 1920 contracts were awarded for 1505 miles of highway construction costing $18,730,088, and during the present calendar year, up to November 1, contracts for 1075 miles of highway construction, costing $14,012,882, have been awarded.

"The total number of active highway projects now under Windrow's supervision is 525. These projects are in various stages of completion. It is stated that Windrow, through his faithful and careful attention to the work, has been able to secure a higher class of construction work than formerly prevailed and at the lower cost. The highways which were built and are being built under his direction are of different types, some of the mileage being of concrete construction."

THREE MURDERS A DAY SAID TO BE AVERAGE IN GERMANY

Trial of Architect for Killing of Stepdaughter in Castle Arouses Alienists' Interest.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, Dec. 10.—Germany is averaging three murders a day, against a prewar record which showed fewer crimes of the kind for the whole country than were reported daily in the City of New York. Robbery is usually the motive for the present run of crime. Most of the slayers escape and the few who are caught get free for the most part through the aid of alienists, if brought to trial.

Architect Grupen is now on trial for the murder of his stepdaughter, Dorothy Rohrbeck, an heiress. The crime occurred in the medieval castle of Kleppelsdorf. No insanity defense has been attempted by the accused man, but many alienists are attending the trial to study him as an interesting subject, and they are expected to prove insanity for him. Grupen's predicament is serious, as a nurse, Fraulein Zahn, has testified: "Dorothy said to me that her stepfather wanted to kill her, and she asked me to keep watch over her so as to protect her."

The nurse said: "Dorothy wanted a white satin dress for confirmation and got it only for burial." It is said the dress was taken later from the grave.

The continued absence from the trial of Grupen's wife, Dorothy's mother, is telling against the prisoner.

FLYING AT BRIDGETON TODAY

Club to Open New Field There—Stunts and Parachute Drop.

The Flying Club of St. Louis will give an exhibition airplane stunt flying this afternoon at its 180-acre field near Bridgeton, St. Louis County. The feature of the exhibition will be a parachute drop. Participating in the exhibition will be flyers of the club and army flyers from Scott Field, Belleville, who will fly over to Bridgeton at 10 o'clock this morning. Throughout the day the public will have access to the new clubhouse and the field.

The Bridgeton field may be reached by the St. Charles car line or Natural Bridge road by automobile.

The outfit includes Locomotive, Pullman Car, Observation Car, 16 feet of track in 12 sections—straight and curved—and a transformer that supplies the electric current from an ordinary electric light socket, in just the right voltage for safe, low cost operation. (Dry cell batteries may be used if preferred.)

The locomotive has two sets of drive wheels, each 2½ inches in diameter, connected in pairs and driven by separate motors.

The train length is 48½ inches. It is 4 inches wide and 6 inches high. The entire outfit weighs 21½ pounds. Unusually attractive in finish and sturdy in construction, it is truly a masterpiece among electric toy railroads.

Sample outfits are on display in the window of the Frank Adam Electric Co., 904 Pine St., and in the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Toy Dept. Actual Retail Value is $52.25!

STRONG FOREIGN EXCHANGE MARKET FEATURES WEEK

Sterling Rate Climbs to Highest Basis in Two Years—Stocks Mark Time—Bank Reserves Still Gain.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Political events of the first magnitude and striking developments in the foreign situation have diverted attention from our domestic markets. Already the Washington conference promises to exceed all expectations, while the Irish agreement augurs well for greater stability in Europe, lessens possibility of friction between Great Britain and ourselves and opens the way for freer international conference and fuller co-operation. In addition, the cables bring persistent and convincing reports that a revision of the reparations program along rational lines is in the making. Such news should indeed calm the prophets of disaster. The world is moving forward, even if its progress must of necessity be gradual. Not unnaturally, our own markets have marked time. With trade demands reasonably satisfied for the time being, cotton is waiting on successive ginning reports and crop estimates. Prices have been firm. Wheat has suffered from continued lack of export buying and liquidation of speculative commitments in the December future. Security prices have hesitated after a strong and prolonged rise. Bank reserves still gain.

Sterling Over $4.13.

"Sterling and other allied exchanges have developed remarkable strength. At better than $4.13 the former has reached the best price since November, 1919. At 75 francs have recovered nearly a cent from the low of about two weeks ago. The Irish news may have helped sterling and the continental currencies may have benefited by a certain amount of pre-Christmas remittances while a scanty supply of bills has also made for firmness. It is clear, however, that the allied exchanges have fluctuated with the German mark and have benefited substantially by its recent recovery. That such should be the case is definitely encouraging. Revision of the reparation terms undoubtedly means that the allies must relinquish, or at any rate postpone, a substantial part of their cash claims on Germany. In so far as this may increase their present, needs for cash or, more specifically, dollars, it might be taken as a bear point on their exchanges. Over against this, however, is the greater gain of securing a workable basis with Germany, increased stability in Europe, and greatly brightened trade prospects. The rise in francs showed that the exchange market realises this truth.

"Some prophets, nevertheless, can see nothing but danger ahead for France. Talk of unbalanced budgets is mixed with allusions to a gigantic and precarious juggling of funds. Temporary expenditures covering the emergency of the post-war period are treated as a continuing and almost perpetual menace. Yet this is the France which has already corrected its trade balance, which has reduced its note circulation by three billion francs during the past year, whose Government has repaid the bank 147 billion francs of the extraordinary war advances, and whose income from taxation is improving. It is a France, furthermore, which has seen the worst of the world depression and whose people are noted for their thrift and recuperative power. One may safely judge that the strong advances in European exchange and the sharp gains in foreign bonds which have featured the past week are better indices of European prosperity than the foreboding of a group of disappointed idealists.

German Loan Problem.

"Talk of a dollar loan to Germany, which came as part of the reparations rumors, unquestionably is premature. Such a loan certainly cannot be offered to the public under existing conditions of uncertainty. A revision of the reparations terms which will insure a stable basis for Europe must first be arrived at. Developments along this line are, to be sure, encouraging, but the basis must, to a certain extent, be found by experiment, and progress must be gradual. To turn over a large sum to Germany at a high price merely to have it passed on as the last installment of an obsolete reparations program will not do. When a German loan is made assurance must be had both that the lender will have proper security and that the borrower will use the funds for a constructive purpose. The first step, then, is an agreement between the Allies and with Germany on an economically sound basis for reparations."

Market Active Saturday.

"The stock market ended the week with a burst of activity which centered in the copper shares, some of the oils and equipments and a number of specialties. These issues displayed strength for special reasons while the main body of the market was swayed by these considerations which usually influenced trading in anticipation of a holiday.

"A more important feature of the day's financial markets than the action of stocks was the sharp rise in foreign exchange, again under the leadership of London. Sterling advanced 2¾ cents to a new high level of $4.13 on fair amount of business French bills, which closed yesterday at 7.69½ cents, sold as high as 7.81 cents by morning and Italian lire advanced 3¼ points to 4.41 cents. German marks were up 4 points to 0.55 of a cent. The Swiss franc recovered after its slight recession below par yesterday, and Spanish bills moved up 15 points to a new high level for the year at 14.40 cents.

"The Clearing House bank statement showed a decrease of $7,704,750 in actual surplus, bringing that item down to $10,283,010. A decrease of $38,597,000 in loans during the week was accompanied by a reduction of $39,632,000 in demand deposits. Government deposits were practically unchanged. Reserve of member banks in the Federal Reserve Bank decreased $11,244,000."

NEW YORK STOCKS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

New Hgh Records.

A dozen or more stocks made new high records for the season. Among these was Baldwin Locomotive, which counting in the 2½ per cent dividend that came off the price several days ago, went well through its former high of 98½. Another was Bethlehem Steel B. American Locomotive got up above par again and American Car Foundry which sells ex. the quarterly dividend of 3 per cent next week, was likewise in demand. The coppers, however, were the leaders of the market.

The Bond Market.

During the day's brief session the bond market diverged scarcely any from the path of yesterday's dealings. Liberty Bonds, with the exception of the Victory 4¾s, which remained at par, fell sharply in two or three instances, but in the late dealings regained some of the ground lost.

In the foreign Government section, the feature was the rise above 84 to a new high for the year of the Dominican Republic 5s. Zurich 8s got to 108 again. The leaders of the group, including the United Kingdom, French Government, Republic of Chile and the South American securities were steady.

The bonds of the United States Steel Corporation and several of the independent steels were strong. The coppers, too, continued firm. Telephone and sugar issues and the motors all sold at practically the same level of last night's close. There was weakness in a few specialties like Detroit River Tunnel 4½s, which lost almost a point and in Virginia-Carolina Chemical 7½s, down a full point. Wilson & Co. bondus both gained about half a point.

The Missouri, Kansas & Texas issues were most active among the rails. Tractions were a bit reactionary.

EBTOR NATIONS MUST ECONOMIZE, PRIME ESSENTIAL

This Is Necessary, London Writer Holds, to Preserve Self-Respect and to Insure Recovery on a Sound Basis

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Arthur W. Kidder, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in the financial review today says:

"The biggest real factor in the situation is the Washington Conference, because there can be no real prosperity for us or for you until the conditions of peace are more settled. It is generally considered that so far the results of the Washington Conference exceed the best expectations, having regard to the supremely difficult and complex problems involved. The opinion also continues, however, that the permanent results of the conference cannot be secured by mere decisions and documents, and that there must be some form of living organism with periodical meetings to discuss mutual problems.

Debtor Nations Must Economize.

"It is also considered that quite apart from the financial and economic aspects, a business-like settlement of outstanding international indebtedness is necessary for the maintenance and preservation of those conditions of mutual respect and which good understanding must rest. Moreover, while indulgence and relief may be necessary in various directions, the cardinal essential is that debtor countries recognize the necessity for wiping out debt through economy and industry. This is necessary to preserve self respect and also to insure recovery on a sound basis.

"It is recognized, nevertheless, that this means, sooner or later, clearer recognition of what after all is frequently the prime cause of political tensions; namely, international financial and commercial competition. Memories of and warnings from the last war will not last indefinitely and the weakness of human nature inevitably will reassert itself.

"We are interested in cables from you reporting the likelihood of a funding scheme for the Allies' debts before long, and presume that Britain's case will be taken up first. Our personal obligation in the way of interest and sinking funds is, after all, little more than you had to meet in pre-war days on American securities held in Europe. Your position was easier, however, on account of the great natural resources of America, while we are mainly dependent upon manufacturing activities. Nevertheless no serious concern is felt, because the old proverb about necessity being the mother of invention is peculiarly applicable to the British race on either side of the Atlantic.

Money Still Easy.

"Assuming that no serious hitches occur with regard to Washington or Ireland, it is probable that the improvement in securities and the general buoyancy will be well maintained over the end of the year, especially as monetary conditions are comfortable. Slowness on the part of your Federal Reserve authorities to reduce rates is highly appreciated because it is recognized that the relief essential is a revival in trade, and that if the latter occurs it will require large credit resources.

"Shrewd quarters, however, anticipate a further advance in investment securities on both sides of the Atlantic, basing the belief on the idea that a large revival in trade is impossible until European countries are in a more favorable position. This must inevitably take a considerable time, and, moreover, is also impossible unless America and England move very strongly and unitedly. Good quarters consider that both countries should take hold with a strong hand of the Ted Meulen bond scheme which, although owing its inception to neither Britain or America, has strong merits.

Cut in Bank Rate Unlikely.

"Our November banking statements show that aggregate advances of clearing banks are £87,000,000 below the highest point of the year, namely in March when taxation caused large borrowing from the banks. A fall in our bank rate is not expected unless an extremely strong lead is given in that direction from your side."

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The market was stronger than on any day this week. Toward the close profit-taking sales made themselves felt to some extent, but in the meantime the record had been set up by many of the most important industrial stocks going through their previous high of the year.

As to what extent the Stock Exchange movement was influenced by such broad considerations as the signing of the four-power agreement in the Pacific and the more reassuring accounts of the Irish sentiment toward the peace treaty, was a question.

In the foreign exchanges was the main feature found. The advance was resumed simultaneously in sterling, francs and marks. Sterling got more than a cent beyond its previous high and francs also went well through their recent levels.

In the equipment stocks, the steels and the coppers were the leaders at the start and the oil group was the feature in the last half hour. There was heavy short covering in Mexican Petroleum and Pan-Aemrican both of which sell ex-dividend at the close of next week. Texas Co. and Pierce were heavily traded in at advancing prices and there was considerable strength in Royal Dutch, California Petroleum and one or two other oil specialties. The market for the industrial leaders continued strong.

Foreign Exchange and Domestic Money

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The foreign exchange market in the past week presented developments of world-wide interest and at the same time reflected other developments of the most important character in connection with the general affairs of the world. In the course of the week's trading first place was held by the movement in sterling, which rose to $4.13 for demand on Saturday, the highest level touched since November, 1920, a little over two years ago. The market in that month was unsettled as were all security trading groups, by the action of the Federal Reserve Board in directing the liquidation of all credits and ending abruptly new banking accommodation for all security dealing requirements. In that month demand sterling ranged from $4.17 to $4.05 and continued its downward movement until Feb. 4, 1921, when demand sterling sold at its low record of $3.78. How large a part the strength was due to the agreement by which the quality is attributed in the relations of Great Britain and Ireland must be a matter of conjecture, but the suggestion was made that this new historical event must have been an impressive factor in directing the movement of sterling exchange.

Reports on both sides of the Atlantic of the consideration of a three-year holiday for German reparations played an important part in the movement of exchange and back of both influences was a foundation for improvement furnished in the conference at Washington.

Dealings in sterling were at times on a large scale and banking leaders agreed in the statement that an enormous amount of sterling had been absorbed in this city while the war unward movement was in progress.

French exchange late in week moved up from 7.36c to 7.81c and was followed on this advance by both Italian and Italian exchanges. Swiss exchange once more moved above parity and held firm at above 19c to the Swiss franc. Spanish sold at a new high for the year and Swedish exchange also sold at a new high for the year. German exchange underwent no material trading position, with a substantial advance, but transactions in German exchange are now restricted by banking regulations, and dealings are only made for what are classed as legitimate purposes and speculative operations are prevented to as great an extent as possible.

The top on sterling was scored at the end of the week. Sterling advanced 2⅛c to a new high level of $4.13 on fair amount of business. French bills, which closed yesterday at 7.69½c, sold as high as 7.81c by morning, and Italian line advanced 3½ points to 4.41c. German marks were up 4 points to 0.55 of a cent. The Swiss franc recovered after its slight recession below par yesterday, and Spanish bills moved up 15 points to a new high level for the year at 14.40c.

EXPORT DEMAND FOR CORN STEADIES LIST

Wheat Follows Irregular Course —Moisture in Southwest and Receipts Factors.

The swonfall in the Southwest where drouth had been complained of entered as a factor in price range of wheat the past week.

Increased offering of wheat from Southwestern sources became quickly apparent after reports arrived telling of rain and snow over parts of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas, states in which lack of moisture had of late been persistent. As a result, July, a new crop month, was bearishly affected in particular and touched a new low price record for the season. Meanwhile, gossip about heavy Japanese buying failed to stimulate values, and the market proved unresponsive also to talk about Germany possibly obtaining a respite from cash indemnity payments. Reported poor demand for wheat and flour at Minneapolis and Kansas City and a bank failure in Germany acted as further weight on vlues, but were subsequently counterbalanced in a measure by reported export demand and by a report that British stocks of wheat had dropped to less than a third of the total a year ago. The question of receipts again was a factor.

Good export demand for corn did a good deal to steady corn and oats. Strike troubles tended to restrict trading in provisions and to make quotations irregular.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

In the cash grain market Saturday, offerings were small and, with fair milling demand, prices rose 1 to 1½ cents. There were no offerings of hard wheat and the market was nominal. Cash corn was steady to ½c lower, with demand fair for export. Cash oats were steady to ½c lower. There was fair shipping demand.

Of the three northwestern markets combined Saturday had 1360 cars of wheat, compared with 1025 week ago, and 1371 last year. Minneapolis receiving 976 cars, Duluth 313, and Winnipeg 91.

Primary receipts of wheat were heavier than a week ago and lighter than last year, being 1,122,000 bushels, compared with 1,070,000 a week ago and 1,182,000 last year. Corn receipts were heavier than a week ago and heavier than last year, being 1,564,000 bushels, compared with 1,298,000 a week ago and 501,000 last year. Oats receipts were heavier than a week ago and heavier than last year, being 1,888,000 bushels, compared with 307,000 a week ago and 390,000 last year.

Primary shipments of wheat were lighter than a week ago and lighter then last year, being 585,000 bushels, compared with 1,074,000 a week ago and 868,000 last year. Corn shipments were heavier than a week ago and heavier than last year, being 1,029,000 bushels, compared with 376,000 a week ago and 250,000 last year. Oats shipments were lighter than a week ago and lighter than last year, being 454,000 bushels, compared with 608,000 a week ago and 405,000 last year.

Grain clearances included 280,000 bushels of wheat, 137,000 bushels of corn and 280,000 bushels wheat and flour.

Primary receipts Saturday were 441,289 bu, compared with 67,000 a week ago, and 150,000 last year and included 21 cars local and 15 through. Corn receipts were 110,500 bu, compared with 171,600 a week ago and 61,000 last year and included 61 cars local and 54 through. Oats receipts were 32,000 bu, compared with 42,000 a week ago and 76,000 last year and included 14 cars local and 2 through; 279 cars of hay local and 21 through.

Grain stocks in St. Louis Public Elevators included: 2,284,091 of wheat, 35,077 of corn, 266,867 oats. Wheat stocks comprised 49,161 bu. of No. 1 hard wheat; 702,300 of No. 2 red winter wheat, 108,800 No. 3 hard winter, 503,687 No. 2 hard winter wheat, 2048 No. 2 corn, 43000 No. 2 white corn, 17,253 No. 2 yellow corn, 7401 No. 3 corn, 1586 No. 4 white oats, 225,252 No. 3 white oats, 54,399 No. 2 red and 6299 kaffir corn.

LOWER RANGE TO GRAIN PRICES ON CHICAGO MARKET

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—In a heavy market grain prices sagged and provisions barely held their ground on the Chicago Board of Trade today. At the finish wheat was 3c to 1¼ net lower, corn was off ⅜ to ⅝ and oats were ⅛ to ¼ lower. Pork and lard finished unchanged but ribs lost 2½ points.

Wheat started with a weak undertone and there was an early break when a trade rumor of a moratorium in Germany was denied. The drop attracted some buying but the trade fell away and the second hour saw little variation in prices. Just before the close shorts covered on reports of an improved cash market in Winnipeg coupled with report that Argentina returns indicated about a normal crop instead of the big yield that some traders had looked for. This movement was shortlived and prices sagged again at the close.

Corn was under pressure but resisted fairly well because of continued export demand and the fact that outside markets were obbidding Chicago in the cash market. The sellers pointed to increased country offerings and predicted increased arrivals for next week.

Oats wer a bit duller than is usual for Saturday and merely followed rorn.

Provisions were quiet. Only a few slattered holding were offered.

New York Coffee.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The market for coffee, futures showed further advances today, closing steady, 10 points net higher. The general market opened unchanged to 10 points higher and active months sold 5 to 12 points above last night's closing futures, making new high records for the season on all deliveries, with March selling at 8.80c and May at 8.77c. There was a further broadening of commission house demand promoted by talk of higher cost and freight offers and the market held most of its gains, closing net unchanged to 9 points higher. Sales were estimated at about 41,000 bags. Dec., 8.85c; Jan., 8.83c; March, 8.80c; May, 8.72c; July, 8.70c; Sept., 8.70c.

Stage — "Morality" Comedy, "A-Morality" Farce, at Local Theaters

Week's Pictures

Screenland — News of Studios and the Players

Mrs. Fiske Subdues a Bumptious Husband in "Wake Up, Jonathan"

Fantasy of Domestic Life Will Be Presented Tomorrow Night at American—"Ladies Night," Turkish Bath Farce, Tonight at Jefferson.

IN "Wake Up, Jonathan," a whimsically humorous comedy which opens a week's engagement tomorrow night at the American, Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske's strongly individualized abilities as a comedienne have congenial scope in the role of a caustic, sensible and cheery wife, who proceeds with witty ridicule to puncture the blatant egotism of her bumptious and vulgarly rich spouse, and to reduce him to a state of repentant domestic subservience.

Her present medium has been described as a "morality play." The same term would scarcely apply to the farce, "Ladies' Night," which will be presented tonight at the Shubert-Jefferson. It was inevitable that the bedroom should grow flat, stale and unprofitable as a shocker, and that the playgoer's nerves should in time demand a drug even more violent. This the expedient Al H. Woods has found by plunging from the boudoir down into the Turkish bath—on ladies' night, too—for the locale of the present comedy.

Mrs. Fiske's play is related in three acts, besides a novel prologue, laid in prehistoric times, which is designed to show that human nature was always about the same as it is today, and that the impractical dreamer did not even in the cave era always come off second best in the eyes of the other sex, in his conflict with the practical man of affairs.

Taming a Colossus.

IN the comedy proper, Jonathan Blake, a busy, pragmatical and money-grubbing soul, forsakes home, wife and children because he believes they interfere with his plans for conquering the world. He returns 10 years later, a colossus of finance, who believes himself a combination of Napoleon and Romeo.

The successive steps of his awakening to the responsibilities which he owes to home and family takes place on Christmas eve. His wife, a high-spirited, sensible woman, was years before the sweetheart of a poet and dreamer who has proved a failure in life. She brings the two men into contact and leads each to see the error of his ways.

"Wake Up, Jonathan" is the work of Hatcher Hughes, professor of the drama at Columbia University, and of Elmer L. Rice (formerly Reizenstein), a practical playwright who wrote "On Trial" and other successes. It opened at the Henry Miller Theater, New York City, on Jan. 17, 1921, and ran there for 104 performances.

The production is by Harrison Gray Fiske, and there is special music by W. Franke Harling. In the supporting cast, which includes several of the original company, are Charles Dalton, Donald Cameron, Helen Holt, Herbert Hodgkins, Lois Bartlett, Edith Lawson, Freddie Goodrow, Richard Abbott, Walter Butterfield and Nora Stirling.

"Ladies' Night" is from the prolific and prosperous pen of Avery Hopwood, author of "Fair and Warmer," "The Bat" and "The Gold Diggers." One of its principal roles is given to Allyn King, formerly a professional beauty in Ziegfeld's "Follies." The farce opened at the Eltinge Theater, New York, on Aug. 9, 1920, and ran 375 performances. The first and third acts are in Jimmy Walters' apartment; the second is in the Larchmont Baths.

A Diffident Man.

JIMMY WALTERS, the hero, is so distressfully bashful that he objects to women in decollete gowns and positively blushes whenever he glances at the fashion pages in the magazines. Two friends determine to cure his infirmity by taking him to a very Bohemian ball. The resort is raided by the police, and the trio, garbed as women in fancy dress costumes, climb over the roof and inadvertently through a window into a Turkish bath, where the wives of two of them and the fiancee of the other happen to be spending the evening.

Needless to say, the hero finds before the night is over that the cure is all it pretends to be, and is not so very painful at that. In the present compay are Walter Jones, Evelyn Gosnell, Josephine Saxe, Edward Douglas and numerous others.

"Miss Lulu Bett," a dramatization of Zona Gale's novel—a play which won the Pulitzer prize of $1000 for the best American original drama produced during the season of 1920-21—is the Shubert-Jefferson's announcement for next week, beginning Sunday night. The original New York cast is promised, with Carroll McComas as star.

That rotund comedian, George Sidney, familiar here in musical comedy, will be presented in a legitimate role in "Welcome Stranger," which comes to the American next Sunday night. For the following week, the show announced is George White's "Scandals of 1921," after which Mitzi Hajos is promised in "Lady Billy." In the offing for January are a revival of "The Merry Widow," Elsie Janis, and Otis Skinner in "Blood and Sand," a dramatization of Ibanez's novel. During February the American expects to present the first of the Theater Guild plays to be offered in St. Louis. It is "Mr. Pim Passes By."

Ethel Levy at Orpheum.

AFTER an absence of nearly a decade, Ethel Levy, famous singing comedienne of another day, the former wife of George M. Cohan, will appear at the Orpheum this week, with headline position. It is said that her present tour is limited to four weeks, one of which is given to St. Louis. Miss Levy is now the wife of Claude Grahame-White, an aviator. She is expected to give some of those character songs which she was one of the first to do, and which she made familiar both in this country and abroad.

Others on the same bill will be: Charles King and Lila Rhodes in a song and dance sketch, "Post Your Horn;" Percy Bronson and Winnie Baldwin, in a humorous skit, "Visions of 1970;" Miller and Jack, in comedy, song and dance; the Lorraine sisters; Carson and Williams in "Meet the Doctor;" the Wilson Aubrey Trio, comedy gymnasts and wrestlers; and Frank Wilson, prodigy of the bicycle.

Features of other vaudeville houses are announced: Columbia, Pallenberg's bears, an animal act; Grand, "The Story Book Revue," a musical comedy offering; Rialto, Ona Munson and her company, in "A Manly Revue;" Empress, Charlie Murray (himself), a favorite Mack Sennett comedian, who will talk on "Movieland and Moviefolk;" and Gayety, Sam Howe's "New Show," with a company of 50 people, and, as a special feature, the illusion, "Cutting a Woman in Two."

Josephine Saxe, Allyn King and Evelyn Gosnell, in "Ladies' Night"—Shubert-Jefferson.

Winnie Baldwin, comedienne.—Orpheum.

Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, in "Wake Up, Jonathan"—American.

Odd Facts About the Movies and Those Who Make Them

AFTER three years of research and production, the completion of an unbiased and non-sectarian screen version of the Scriptures for use in theaters, churches and schools has been announced. A group of California philanthropists have financed the undertaking, and clergymen and educators have sponsored the historical backgrounds.

Giovanni Pastrone, who has been called "The Griffith of Italy" has just completed an elaborate film version of "Hedda Gabler," which will be presented in America.

Will Rogers declares the success or failure of a picture is really determined by the hats he wears, as a hat carries more personality and character than any other article of wearing apparel. He has kept every hat that he has ever worn in a photoplay.

The atmosphere of the story of "Slippy McGee" was retained by having the picture photographed in Natchez, Miss., which is the locale of the story. Colleen Moore and Wheeler Oakman have the leading parts.

Juanita Thomas, who won Iowa's state beauty contest, is at the Talmadge studio in New York City, where she will have a part in Norma Talmadge's new picture, "Smilin' Through."

The last picture George Loane Tucker made before his death was "Ladies Must Live," adapted from the story by Alice Duer Miller. Betty Compson, Beatrice Joy, Mahlon Hamilton and William Mong are among the players in this picture.

One of the cell blocks in a modern reformatory is said to be unique in set construction in Elaine Hammerstein's new picture "Handcuffs and Kisses." It shows fully 30 cells on two tiers. There are heavy iron doors, spiral staircases, grilled railings around the approaches to the cells and even the multiple locking devices for the cell doors in the blocks are locked and unlocked by the turning of a single lever.

Dorothy Dalton was the favorite leading woman of a middle-western stock company before she went to California and joined the Ince forces.

Lila Lee's real name is Bessie Apple.

Alice Joyce has done all her work in Eastern studios, and it is reported that her contract calls for her working exclusively in the East.

Bill Hart is 57 years old.

At present Mabel Normand is said to receive the highest salary paid out regularly in movieland. Many stars such as Mary Pickford, the Talmadges, Charlie Chaplin and Charles Ray have their own companies and are not on a salary basis.

Plot "Stood on Its Head" in Miss Akins' Play

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.
Special to the Post-Dispatch.

THE second play of Miss Zoe Akins, formerly of St. Louis, to be produced this season on Broadway, had its premiere Monday night at the Hudson Theater. Professional observers seemed principally interested in "The Varying Shore" because of a technique which, as one of them remarked, curiously stood the story upon its head. In other words, the plot is related backwards.

"A game of progressive lovers" is the way another critic describes the play. In the prologue the heroine is dead an aged woman, and her spirit is in communion with the constant lover of her youth who has crossed her path in every episode. Through the successive scenes she grows younger and younger, until, in the last act, she is a mere stripling of a maid, forming her first tragic acquaintance with the world's evils.

The literary distinction of the play is remarked, as well as its glow of romance. Miss Elsie Ferguson, cast in the stellar role, is described as lovely to look upon, less lovely to hear, "and only intermittently convincing as an actress." In her speeches was detected "the monotony of an unchanging tremulousness."

"To many," writes the New York World critic, "the artifice of 'The

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

Jean Paige, who plays the leading feminine role in "The Prodigal Judge," Vitagraph's special production, based on the novel by Vaughan Kester, has completed her scenes in the picture and has returned to California, where she will spend the winter. A few final exterior scenes which do not require the presence of the star are being filmed near Savannah, Ga. A week's work in the Brooklyn studio when the company returns will complete the picture.

Antonio Moreno, who recently completed "A Guilty Conscience," a story of India, will make an "Old Mission" trip through Southern California before beginning his next production. Moreno was born and spent his boyhood days in Spain and always has been interested in missions, although he has had but little time to study them since he came to this country and made a name for himself on the screen.

"The Inner Chamber" has turned out to be one of the most successful picture in which Alice Joyce ever starred. It is a screen adaptation of the novel, "The Blood Red Dawn," by Charles Caldwell Dobie.

Although it is now nearly a year since "Black Beauty," Vitagraph's big special production based on the story by Anna Sewell, was presented to the public, it is in as great demand as ever. The prediction made by the critics at the date of release—that time would not dim its popularity—has been splendidly borne out. There is scarcely a city, town or community that has not seen the picture and in many places it is being repeated again and again.

Lucille Carlisle, one of the best-known comediennes of the screen, is Larry Semon's leading lady in his new Vitagraph comedy, which is nearing completion at the West Coast studios. Miss Carlisle appeared with the Vitagraph comedian in many of his comedies, but has not been seen in his most recent productions. As the new comedy has its action in and about a theater Miss Carlisle will have a role in which she is thoroughly at home.

At least 20 changes of gowns will be made by Gloria Swanson, Paramount star, in her new picture, "Beyond the Rocks," from Elinor Glyn's novel.

Ann Forrest, Paramount actress, is perhaps the first motion picture player to be presented to a King at court. She has just been so honored by King Christian of Denmark. Having just completed her role, "Love's Boomerang," she went home for a visit. Her fame there through appearing in "The Prince Chap," "The Faith Healer" and other pictures led to her presentation.

Al Green, who worked with Mary Pickford in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," has been engaged to direct Tom Meighan in his next picture, temporarily called "The Proxy Daddy," from the story by Edward Peple, author of "The Prince Chap."

Fifty of the prettiest girls in Hollywood film circles and an equal number of the best looking men were engaged for the grand ball scene in George Medford's production of "Moran of the Lady Letty," in which Dorothy Dalton is featured with Rudolph Valentino as leading man.

"Manslaughter," the novel by Alice Duer Miller, will be translated into film form at the Paramount studios in Hollywood.

William D. Taylor's Paramount production of "The Noose," starring Betty Compson, will show: An old palace of Napoleonic times on the outskirts of Paris, Old Roman catacombs now utilized as Apache dens, a traveling street show, or Petite Cirque, in the Rue Macabre in Paris, exterior and foyer of a Parisian theater, a fashionable French hotel, a raid on an Apache den by gendarmes at the outbreak of the war, the purlieus of Paris, a liaison trench on the battle front, New York harbor and the Statue of Liberty, a Fifth avenue tearoom, a ballet school in New York, a costume ball, many beautiful exteriors at a Long Island home. Miss Compson will dance under the instruction of Theodore Kosloff.

John S. Robertson, Mrs. Robertson and his company are now in Spain filming exteriors for Maurice Hewlett's novel, "Spanish Jade." The company includes Mr. and Mrs. David Powell, Evelyn Brent, Shaw Lovett, Harry Ham, Frank Stanmore, Lionel D'Aragon, Cameramen Roy Overbaugh and Mrs. Overbaugh, Joseph Rosenthal, Maj. Charles H. Bell and Charles de Rochefort. Madrid will be headquarters.

"All for a Woman" is the title under which Associated First National will release the foreign production, "Danton," a story of the French revolution, in the United States this season. Emil Jannings,

Wallingford in Films "What Do Men Want?" Local Screen Offerings

"The Queen of Sheba," With Betty Blythe, Enters Its Third Week at Liberty Theater.

AFTER furnishing excellent book and stage material, "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," that arch schemer created by George Randolph Chester and first visualized by George M. Cohan, has come at last to the screen. With "Blackie Daw," "Eddie Lamb" and other shifty companions in unctuous exploitation of business that is too good to be true he makes his bow to St. Louis at the Missouri Theater this week.

While it is announced that there is no star, the cast includes Sam Hardy in the title role, Norman Kerry, Doris Kenyon, Diana Allen and Billie Dove.

The Wallingord stories follow the fortunes of a suave promoter who has wonderful schemes for getting other people's money. He skirts dangerously near the main line to the penitentiary, but always has a reserve of resourcefulness to get himself out of peril before the crash comes.

The week's offering at the New Grand Central is "What Do Men Want?" a Lois Weber production which is described as a series of incidents in the careers of a boy and girl, with special reference to the changing ideas and demands of the boy as he passes into youth and early manhood. Claire Windsor has the leading feminine role. On the bill also is Johnny Hines in a new "Torchy" comedy.

After two record-breaking weeks at the Liberty, "The Queen of Sheba," with Betty Blythe, goes into its third week at that house.

ENGLISH LORD MAKES PLEA FOR FORMER TEUTON EMPERORS

Newton Tells House Powers Have No Right to Interfere With Peoples' Wishes.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Pleas for former Emperors of Germany and Austria-Hungary were made in the House of Lords recently when Lord Newton, raising the question of the exclusion of the Hapsburg dynasty from the Hungarian throne, said that the Hungarian people evidently desired to have a king.

"Why," he asked, "should the Hapsburgs be excluded any more than any other dynasties that were still allowed to rule?" How could the attitude of the great Powers be reconciled with the principle of self-determination? It was, he added, a gross and intolerable interference with the Government of a free nation.

Lord Oranmore and Browne regretted that Britain had agreed to act as jailer for the ex-Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary and had become responsible for sending him to a new St. Helena.

Lord Phillimore, an eminent lawyer, asked what authority the Powers had for telling the people of Hungary who should be their king or not, or whether they should have a king at all. He protested against any interference in Hungary's internal affairs.

He thought it was a mistake to have dethroned the Hohenzollerns, "because," he said, "with a chastened Emperor on the throne, we would have had a more steady Germany, and have stood a much better chance of getting our money back."

The Earl of Crawford, replying for the Government, said he could not discuss the question of the restoration of dynasties.

ASTHMA CURED BY SIMPLE REMEDY

Famous Druggist Discovers Simple Remedy for Asthma and Makes General FREE TRIAL Offer to Readers.

Thirty years ago Mr. C. Leavengood, a widely known Kansas druggist, discovered a simple, easy to take prescription for Asthma. He gave it to people who had suffered for years and, to their amazement, they say they were easily cured. These people told their friends, and in this way thousands have found the sure way to cure Asthma. Mr. Leavengood feels so confident that his prescription will cure in all cases that he generously offers to send a big bottle on 10 days' Free Trial to any reader of this paper who will write for it. If it cures pay $1.25, otherwise you owe nothing. Send no money—just write to C. LEAVENGOOD, 1590 S. Bl. Roesdale, Kas., and the big bottle will be mailed immediately.

Sir Anthony Hope's Romantic New Comedy

LONDON, Dec. 19.

PRODUCED at the Royalty Theater by the Play Actors' Society, "Mrs. Thistleton's Princess," by Sir Anthony Hope, unmistakably reveals the hand of the writer of the incomparable "Dolly Dialogues" and of the novelist to whom we owe those enchanting romances, "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Rupert of Hentzau."

The Princess Vera of Boravia, whose uncle has usurped the throne, flies to England to take refuge with Mr. Thistleton, a well-to-do solicitor, to whom she assigns the task of recovering her private fortune, amounting to $400,000. She is penniless, and gladly accepts Mrs. Thistleton's invitation to make her home with them at the Manor House, Southam. There she meets a young journalist, Philip Tregaskis, who falls in love with her; but he must depart on the following day for Madrid.

Returning three months later, he finds the situation sadly changed for the worse. Thistleton's endeavors have proved fruitless, and the Princess finds herself obliged to renounce her title, and accept the humble position of governess to Bessie, youngest daughter of the house.

In that capacity she becomes the victim of the unwelcome overtures of Charles Miles, an uncouth, mannerless fellow, who up to then had been regarded as a favored suitor of the elder sister, Molly, whose jealousy has been aroused. There is nothing left for Vera to do but to fall in with her hostess' suggestion that she find another place. A lucky chance provides the desired opportunity.

The morning arrives when the Princess is to depart. But an unexpected turn of fortune's wheel brings the news, communicated by Tregaskis, of a revolution in Boravia which has resulted in the overthrow of her uncle and a demand that she take her rightful place on the throne.

An Appealing Scene.

BETWEEN love and duty she must needs choose; it is duty that wins the day. The scene in which she announces her determination to Tregaskis, while assuring him that nothing will ever efface the memory of his loyalty and unfailing kindness, is one instinct with beauty and an exquisite sense of emotional tenderness. Sir Anthony has never written anything more touching and appealing.

The characters are drawn with a master's hand. Mrs. Thistleton, in particular, is a creation of sheer joy. Her shrewd wit, her motherly gentleness, her abounding common sense, her pardonable belief in herself—"if someone were to accuse her of being the Divinity," declares Tregaskis, "I don't think she would deny the soft impeachment" — her thoughtfulness of others, all combine to make of her an unforgettable study.

"The Painted Laugh," by Leonid Andreieff, has been put on at the Garrick in an English version by a young Russian-American actress, Miss Khyva St. Albans. The play is melodrama, very picturesque, highly emotional, and at the close lurid.

All the action takes place in the anteroom of Brikye's circus, where the troupe is met off duty. The outstanding performance, quite remarkable for power and versatility, was that of Basil Rathbone as "Tot, who receives slaps"—a man wronged in his home who becomes a clown to conceal his identity, and falls in love with the horseback tango queen. Miss St. Albans played the circus heroine with charm, and her dance with Mr. Kotchetovsky, from the Moscow Imperial Ballet, gave some of the most enjoyable moments of the afternoon. Agreeable incidental music was supplied by Lucien Wurmser of the Paris Odeon.

Miss Thorndike's Evadne.

"THE MAID'S TRAGEDY," by Beaumont and Fletcher, has been revived at the Phoenix, giving the whole text, including the masque, for the first time since the mid-eighteenth century. Miss Sybil Thorndike, in the role of the unhappy heroine, Evadne, is described as "a born tragedy queen," with authority, style, ample gesture and superb elocution, helped by a voice that can send a thrill through the house.

She triumphed in the wedding-night scene, when the heroine is the unregenerate, the cruel, felly cold Evadne; and also in the scene of the murder, when the King is suddenly awakened to find his arms tied to the bedstead and his mistress standing over him with a gleaming dagger.

Cohan Praises Guitry.

GEORGE M. COHAN, who has returned after a month in London and Paris, says that two American actresses who are great favorites in the English metropolis are Willette Kershaw, in "Women to Women," and Dorothy Dickson in "Sally." In Paris he for the first time beheld Lucien Guitry, and declared him the greatest actor he had ever seen. "I strongly advise all American actors," said Cohan, "to study this man and learn the art of 'not acting.'"

W. C. T. U. Meeting Tomorrow.

A meeting of the Central Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow at St. John's M. E. Church, King's highway boulevard and Washington avenue. An oratorical contest will be held, the winner to receive a silver medal.

Livingston to Provide Gifts.

The board of trustees of Livingston, Ill., has appointed a committee, consisting of the Mayor and two members of the Board of Aldermen, to solicit money for a community Christmas tree and to provide gifts for all children.

DR. W. O. COFFEE

Noted Specialist Says Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises Can Be Relieved by His New Treatment.

Let Him Treat You Once Free Tuesday or Wednesday

Dr. W. O. Coffee, the noted specialist in the treatment of deafness, head noises, catarrh, and diseases of the throat, has special hours for free treatment. These hours are set aside for the purpose of demonstrating to those who have never been benefited by his treatment, that catarrh, catarrhal deafness and head noises cannot be cured. Dr. Coffee has had many years of experience in the treatment of these troubles, and has made a study of the cause of catarrh, deafness and head noises, and has discovered a treatment that is unfailing in relieving the worst cases. Dr. Coffee has had many years of experience in the treatment of these troubles, and has made a study of the cause of catarrh, deafness and head noises, and has discovered a treatment that is unfailing in relieving the worst cases.

completely relieved and many hopeless and all cases of catarrh cured by non-surgical system of treatment. In many diseased tonsils and diseased turbinated bones can usually be treated without an operation. He has treated over 20,000 people by this treatment. He cured himself of catarrh, deafness and head noises. His article is a constitutional condition as well as local, and every case is curable. J. R. Meyers of East St. Louis had catarrh, deafness and head noises for eight years; was completely cured. Dr. Coffee is treating thousands of cases like these. He wants every person afflicted with deafness, head noises or catarrh to see him. He will examine them, and if he thinks he can help them he will give them one treatment free to show them his treatment acts. During the month of December. This won't cost you a cent to try his new method one time. In cases of head noises and deafness quick relief.

20% DISCOUNT ON GLASSES.

Dr. Coffee invites all people wearing glasses not properly suited, or need glasses examined and tested for proper fit, to see him during the month of December. He will make a 20% discount on all glasses fitted in December. His expert, E. Coffee, assists him and does the testing of eyes, who is an expert in optometry and refractionist. He not only requires experience and skill in properly fitting glasses to many people, but must find out just what the people will accept, what they will need and what they will wear suitable to their eyes and their work. Dr. Coffee is one of the largest and most widely known specialists in the above diseases in the United States. People come to him from all sections of the country for his treatment. He has devoted to this specialty, is responsible financially and professionally. Any one suffering with deafness, head noises or catarrh that cannot come to St. Louis to see him should write him for his free booklet just being published on these troubles. It tells all about deafness, head noises and catarrh and the kind that can be cured. He is in his St. Louis office every Tuesday and Wednesday, rooms 409 Odd Fellows Bldg., Olive St. Phone Olive 8413 for appointment. Permanent office in Davenport, Iowa. O. Coffee, Davenport, Iowa.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

who portrayed King Henry VIII "Deception," will be seen in the principal role as Danton. Werner Krauss will be seen as Robespierre and Hilda Werner as Babette.

The first Mack Sennett all-star comedy to be released by Associated First National for Associated Producers, has been titled "Be Reasonable." It features Billy Bevan and Mildred June.

Pauline Starke gained seven pounds in weight during the filming of a special production, "Flower of the North," in which she heads the cast with Henry B. Walthall. And the gain in weight was made despite the fact that she had to overturn a canoe in a seething rapids, almost go over a cataract, ride horses at break-neck speed and battle with a halfbreed.

George Seigman, who plays the role of Pierre Gavot in Gasnier's "Silent Years," from the popular novel, "Mam'selle Jo," was a lieutenant in the Signal Corps in the world war and was severely gassed. He took part in the Argonne and other heavy campaigns.

Little Miriam Battista, who has an appealing role in William Christy Cabanne's "At the Stage Door," presented by R-C Pictures, has crowded a world of theatrical experience into her 8 years of life. At the age of 3 years she appeared with Maude Adams in "A Kiss for Cinderella." She played the role of a small boy in Ibsen's "A Doll's House" with Madame Nazimova. She played also with Henry Miller in "Daddy Long-legs" and in "The Red Dawn" and "The Inner Man" with Wilton Lackaye. She led the famous children's sextet in the revival of "Floradora" and was in "The Whirl of New York" at the Winter Garden. Then she went on the screen. Her biggest success was as the crippled child in "Humoresque." An almost equally appealing part is assigned to her in "At the Stage Door."

Corinne Griffith in making a new production, "Received Payment," used the Brighton Beach Music Hall, near the more famous Coney Island, for the theater scenes. A huge cyclorama was borrowed from a Broadway theater and hung in the seaside theater for use in the picture.

Several of the famous California redwood trees, which grow to a height of 300 feet and more, as seen in Larry Semon's newest Vitagraph comedy, "The Sawmill." The comedy was filmed near the wild Lake Hume region of California.

Wilfrid North has just finished directing Earle Williams in a picture entitled "Lucky Carson," in which the star appears, at different times, as a "down-and-outer" and a polished gentleman of fashion.

Wallace MacDonald suffered a badly burned forehead last week while engaged in a scene for the Vitagraph serial, "Breaking Through." He was rescuing the heroine from a burning shack when he fell with his burden.

In filming the new special production "The Prodigal Judge," Vitagraph accomplished what the expert rivermen of the St. Lawrence River hitherto have refused to undertake—the sending of a small craft with passengers through the dangerous Cedar Rapids. Rafts have been sent through, but without a guiding hand, and small boats have avoided its turbulent waters by taking a circumventing canal. The story of "The Prodigal Judge," by Vaughan Kester, required that a small keel boat and a double cabin raft of the type used on the Mississippi in 1835 pass through just such rapids. Jean Paige, who heads the all-star cast of "The Prodigal Judge," made the exciting trip without mishap.

Frank Alexander is the heaviest fat man in motion pictures today. He weighs 850 pounds and appears in Larry Semon comedies.

The famous "Wallingford" characters, before the public so many years in the magazines, are on the screen now. J. Rufus, his pal, Blackie Daw, and the rest of them, are seen in Vitagraph's new production, "The Son of Wallingford."

Under the direction of an expert designer, three dressmakers are constantly at work creating the lovely, old-fashioned gowns that Jean Paige is wearing in her new Vitagraph special production, "The Prodigal Judge." The play, taken from Vaughan Kester's famous novel of the same name, deals with the America of 1835. Those who remember Miss Paige's charming appearance in the quaint costumes she wore in "Black Beauty" will rejoice at this opportunity of again seeing her in a play of bygone days.

Maryon Aye and "Bob" Reeves have responded to the peremptory command of "Ready! Action! Camera! Go!" Their first picture under a joint starring contract, made with Cactus Features, is "The Yellow Streak." It is laid in the West.

The presence of a large number of blue-coated policemen in and about the Vitagraph Western studio this week indicated merely that Jimmy Aubrey's comedy cops were getting ready for a location trip. The comedian has begun work on another of his two-reelers. In this comedy, Jimmy becomes the innocent victim of a ruthless gang known as the "Croakers," who are bent on discovering the formula of a new explosive mysteriously called "It." The position of the "Lost Battalion" in the Argonne Forest was a safe place compared to the situation in which the well-meaning but blundering fellow finds himself.

Osteopaths Allowed to Vaccinate.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 10.—The Attorney General's office today issued a ruling that osteopaths may vaccinate against smallpox if the schools from which they are graduated teach the administration of vaccine as a preventative for that ailment. Osteopathic schools teach the administration of vaccine, but some osteopaths, like some alopathic and homeopathic physicians are opposed to vaccination.

"Chocolate Soldier" Will Be Revived Tomorrow Night

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.

A REVIVAL of the Oscar Straus operetta, "The Chocolate Soldier," with several in the cast and in executive positions who have been active in the municipal opera of St. Louis, is the feature of next week's theatrical announcements, which follow:

Monday.

Century—"The Chocolate Soldier," operetta by Oscar Straus, after George Bernard Shaw's comedy, "Arms and the Man." Cast, headed by Donald Brian and Tessa Kosta, will include Mildred Rogers, J. Humbird Duffy. Music director, Max Bendix; stage director, Charles Sinclair.

Tuesday.

Maxine Elliott's—"The Mountain Man," by Clare Kummer, starring Sidney Blackmer; settings by Robert Edmond Jones.

PLOT STOOD ON ITS HEAD IN ZOE AKINS' PLAY

Varying Shore' is always too much in evidence to make Miss Akins' play Something of the value of the tragic wholly illusory and convincing tale is lost through the audience's constant occupation of watching the wheels of the mechanism revolve. The production is beautiful, and the acting fairly adequate. But there remains a feeling that this is an exercise in technique rather than a story out of life.

Ghosts Begin and End Play.

"YOU witness the consequences of Julie's misspent life—we use for convenience one of her several names—before you are made familiar with the causes which bring about its changing phases. It is a life which covers three quarters of a century. In the prologue she is a spirit communing, in a Monte Carlo cafe, with the faithful lover who, from her girlhood in Virginia, has always crossed her path. In an epilogue to the play this ghostly communion is still continued until the aged man, alone at his table, also dies.

"The three acts intervening trace Julie's life backward along the primrose path. In the first episode the year is 1870, and we learn there is no radiant beauty in all Paris, save the Empress Eugenie, to compare with Julie. She is the mistress of a rich American who offers marriage to her to remove obstacles in the way of her illegitimate son's marriage to a young girl from her native land. But the millionaire finds that he cannot go through with the sacrifice he has proposed.

"You see her next, in 1859, a beautiful woman in her late twenties, living just outside the New York of Buchanan's time with a handsome young wastrel to whom she is utterly devoted. When she finds that he is foregoing a marriage with a girl he loves just out of pity for herself, she packs up wearily and starts forth again upon her wanderings.

"The final episode—except the epilogue—reveals Julie's Virginia home in her youth. The time is 1847. The beautiful Southern belle has loved unwisely and too well, and evades the marriage which propriety would force upon her by setting out upon the long and tempestuous excursion which the preceding acts have already traced.

"Through all these episodes Miss Ferguson was an impressive and beautiful figure; physically she contrasted with striking effect the various phases of the character; but there was always the monotony of an unchanging tremulousness in the delivery of her speeches.

The Supporting Company.

OTHER members of the cast found it more difficult to make convincing these contrasts of time. Charles Francis probably contributed the most effective support to the star. Some of the others were Paul Everton, James Crane, Clyde North, Geraldine O'Brian, Wright Cramer and Rollo Peters. The costuming of the play, covering widely separated periods from 1847 to the present time, was unusually beautiful and picturesque."

The reviewer for the Tribune found that the novel construction of the play detracted little from its suspense. "We were all as engrossed in the proceedings," he wrote, "as we would be at 'Hamlet' or any other drama with whose contents we are familiar.

"Those rules and apothegms of the drama which order a play to begin at the beginning and stop, if not end, at the finish, are interestingly disregarded by Miss Zoe Akins in 'The Varying Shore.' Monday night at the Hudson she stood that sad story upon its head in the prologue, in which engaging posture she maintained it deftly until in the epilogue it resumed its conventional footing.

"That is, the play started beyond the grave, with Miss Elsie Ferguson as an aged spirit recounting her earthly adventures, and it proceeded through those adventures cradleward from kept-womanhood to betrayal as a child.

"This blithe indifference to the laws aroused in the first audience no indignant sense of litigation, for 'The Varying Shore,' despite its topsy-turvy structure, proved intelligible and appealing. It appeared to detract nothing from the enjoyment of those present that the lady whose fortunes we were observing was but a ghost, hovering about the terraces at Monte Carlo. Suspense appeared to be at hand in sufficient quantities."

Written With Gusto and Elation.

THE Times reviewer was greatly impressed by the play, but not so much by Miss Ferguson's acting. He wrote:

"Zoe Akins has spun a fine, glamorous tale in the new play of hers called 'The Varying Shore,' which came Monday night to the Hudson Theater. It is the tale of sad little Julie Venable of Richmond, who is seduced by the casual and engaging John Garrison, and who dies three-quarters of a century later at Monte Carlo—a gay, humorous, rather gaudy old lady, a past-mistress of many men, a brave and honorable woman to whom the world has painfully taught wisdom.

"The woman, slowly revealed in the restrospective sequence of the scenes, is played by Miss Elsie Ferguson. It is a rich and infinitely varied role, that calls for more than Miss Ferguson has to give. Lovely to behold, considerably less lovely to hear, and only intermittently convincing as an actress, she bestows on Miss Akins' play a monotony it does not deserve.

"But she leaves it, as she found it, an interesting piece, written with a kind of gusto and elation that the theater began to lose when the realists swarmed into it. There are a great many playgoers in what the playwrights like to call 'This grim world of ours,' who would derive a great deal of vicarious and rosy-hued pleasure in attending 'The Varying Shore.'"

The Herald reviewer states that the title of the play was taken from a phrase in "Antony and Cleopatra," and thinks interest is dulled by the fact that the audience knows the story from the rising of the first curtain. Miss Ferguson, we are told, was greeted by an audience so obviously delighted in her return to the stage that it seems heartless in her ever to leave them for the cinema.

"Miss Akins," he continues, "has touched her episodes with a degree of imagination which she, better than any of her colleagues, is able to impart to a play. Then there is always a degree of literary distinction in the speech of her characters."

One Critic Satirical.

THE American critic indulges in a few ribaldries concerning the play, and concludes:

"Miss Akins, who is a clever person, could have gone on writing 'The Varying Shore' back to Noah's ark, or even to the Garden of Eden. We might then have seen Miss Ferguson as Eve, giving the fatal apple to Adam. Miss Akins, however, thought it was time for us to go home.

"The play appeared to be a game of progressive lovers, played retrogressively, so far as Miss Ferguson was concerned. She was always naughty, and always solemn and mournful. She was Mme. Leland, and she was Julie Venable, and she looked awfully nice. But not only did each act show that she was younger, but each act showed that she was duller. It is rarely permitted any star to grow younger as each act ends, but Miss Akins gives this movie opportunity to Miss Ferguson. But she seemed to insist that the handsome star should also grow duller, and this was a pity."

Other plays presented during the week were a dramatization of Theodore Dreiser's tragic novel, "The Hand of the Potter," by the Provincetown Players, at the MacDougal street theater; a comedy, "The Fair Circassian," by Gladys Unger, at the Republic Theater, and two revivals —"Bought and Paid For," at the Playhouse, and "Alias Jimmy Valentine," at the Gaiety, with Otto Kruger and Margolo Gillmore as hero and heroine.

Who "Edymar" Is, or Are.

THE mystery has been cleared up concerning "Edymar," announced as the author of "Marie Antoinette," in which Grace George was starred at the Playhouse. The nom de plume is a combination of the last three letters of the name of Aubrey Kennedy and the first three letters of the name of Margaret Mayo, who collaborated in the piece. This was done, explains Miss Mayo, "lest a name so long associated with farce might handicap the serious enterprise on which we were embarking."

Fritz Leiber, who has been ill, is recovered sufficiently to permit the announcement that he will resume acting after the holidays, in Shakspearean repertory, at the Lexington Theater. . . . George M. Cohan has turned over all his rights in "Mary" to the authors, Otto Harbach, Frank Mandel and Louis Hirsch, and they are enlisting a cast to take the popular opus on another tour of the country.

Forbes Robertson, who recently won a judgment of 6 cents against Daniel Frohman, Inc., for alleged breach of contract, has obtained an order for a new trial from the Appellate Court. . . . Tonight, at the New Amsterdam, "Sally" attained its 400th performance. . . . The Provincetown Players are to bring Susan Glaspell's tragedy, "The Verge," uptown to the Garrick Theater for a series of special matinees.

At the Savoy Theater, in London, last Thursday, Peggy O'Neill celebrated her 707th performance in "Paddy the Next Best Thing." . . . "One of the most prosperous trades in the country and one of the most disgraced of arts." This was the definition with which Granville Barker characterised the English contemporary theater in an address at Liverpool University.

Choose Between Faith and Play.

EDITH KING, leading woman of the comedy "Thank-U," at the Longacre Theater, and George A. Schiller, a member of the same company, have given two weeks' notice. Both explain that they had to

FAMOUS OLD RECIPE FOR COUGH SYRUP

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap, but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

RUPTURE KILLS MORE THAN RAILROADS AND MINES

Statistics show that more people die from Rupture than are killed by railroad and mine accidents combined. Over eight thousand persons annually are laid away, the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and all truss sufferers in the land are invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own homes. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD when adhering closely to the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—comparatively inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, no buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., 172 Stuart Bldg., St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and instructive information.— (c)P. L.

Mary Nash in Comedy.

MARY NASH, emotional actress, who recently toured the West in "Thy Name Is Woman," is rehearsing for a forthcoming production of a comedy, "Capt. Applejack," by Walter Hackett, who collaborated with Rol Cooper Megrue in "It Pays to Advertise." Under the name of "Capt. Applejack's Adventures," the Hackett comedy is one of the most popular offerings of the current season in London, with Charles Hawtrey in the leading role.

Sidney Blackmer, who had the leading male role in "Not So Long Ago," has been engaged for the leading role in "The Mountain Man," Klare Kummer's latest play, which opens at the Maxine Elliott Theater Monday night.

W. E. JOHNSON BELIEVES INDIA IS READY FOR PROHIBITION

American, Now in Calcutta, Thinks Subject Appeals to the People.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 9.—William E. ("Pussyfoot") Johnson, American prohibition worker, told the members of the Rotary Club here that his impression after an extensive tour of the country, is that India is more ripe for prohibition than America was five years ago.

Johnson was the principal guest of the club at its Tiffin meeting, where he was subjected to a good-natured bombardment of questions.

Describing his reception in India, Johnson said he had been welcomed because he represented a crusade that appealed to the people of India.

"In the districts I have visited in the past few weeks," he said, "I have been entertained by every class, from the Viceroy and the native Princes downwards, and only on a single occasion—at Patna several days ago—did I hear an Indian stand up to oppose prohibition.

"It was at Patna that I witnessed a remarkable demonstration in support of a 'dry' India, a great crowd of nearly 5000 at the request of the chairman voting on the question by a show of hands. So far as I could see, every hand in the audience—and in some instances both—was raised immediately in favor of prohibition, and not a solitary hand against."

Rose Tinted Cheeks

Oh! How you have longed to bring that Rose-tinted glow of healthy Beauty to your cheeks. How impossible and inadequate have rouges, powders and paints, with their only too apparent glamor proven to be. For years our laboratory has worked to make your desire possible and now we feel that in we have placed your desire within your reach. It renders to your cheeks a delicate, refined Rose-Tint, so natural and subtle in effect that the use of a Toilet Preparation cannot be detected. All of the qualities of Gouraud's Oriental Cream have been retained in our new product. That soft, velvety skin, its soothing and antiseptic effect are but a few of the many virtues it renders to your skin and complexion. Try it to-day and see the new door to Beauty it opens.

Try These Three Gouraud's Preparations

Just send us 25c. and your dealer's name and we will send you a bottle of Gouraud's Oriental Cream, (pink or white), a large cake of Gouraud's Medicated Soap and a tube of Gouraud's Cold Cream. They beautify, purify and cleanse the skin and complexion.

Enos A. Mills' Charges Against National Park Service; Official's Reply

Naturalist's Claims of Monopolies in Playgrounds Contradicted in Detail by Acting Director B. L. Vipond at Washington.

Enos A. Mills of Long's Peak, Colo., the well-known naturalist and author, was in St. Louis Thursday and Friday, in the midst of a trip of three months, at his own expense, covering the country from California to Massachusetts, the purpose of which is to arouse the public against what he brands as "an illegal and irresponsible transportation monopoly in our national parks."

In an interview with the Post-Dispatch, Mr. Mills made the following assertions:

No traveler is permitted to ride in a hired car, unless that hired car is a White automobile, in any of the following national parks: Glacier, Mount Ranier, Yosemite, Sequoiah, Rocky Mountain, Yellowstone and Mesa Verde.

All of these parks are monopolized by transportation companies of various names, but all based on a certain make of automobile.

The monopoly was established not by act of Congress, but by arbitrary fiat of Stephen T. Mather, Director of National Parks, who has the support of his chief, Secretary of the Interior Fall.

Privately owned cars entering Yellowstone Park must pay a toll of $7.50, and a toll of $5 in both Yosemite and Glacier National Parks. Next year it is planned to establish a similar toll of $5 in the Rocky Mountain National Park and in the Grand Canyon.

In Yellowstone Park the monopoly has already destroyed all independent business, and has usurped control of hotels, stores, camps, the hiring of horses and guides, and even the developing of photographs.

Makes Charges in Address.

The naturalist has made it a point, within the last month, to deliver his charges in public addresses at Los Angeles, which is the business headquarters of Director Mather, and in El Paso, the home of Secretary Fall. In both places, he avers, resolute but futile efforts were made to prevent his speaking.

He says that St. Louisans will understand the situation if they imagine that the Park Commissioner, without authority from the Board of Aldermen, were to issue a ukase banning every sort of hired car and taxicab from Forest Park save those of one certain make; and were to compel privately owned automobiles to pay a toll before entering Forest Park. He continued as follows:

"All of the leading national parks are afflicted with a transportation monopoly, created by a bureaucratic official in violation of the laws of Congress. The monopoly works entirely outside the control of the public; operating, as it does, under the protection of the Director of National Parks, it tends to obtain a dictatorship over all the utilities and public needs in the national parks.

"He who controls the transportation to a given region controls all the other business of that region. As a result of monopolistic transportation in Yellowstone Park, all former independent concerns—hotels, stores, camps, etc., have been put out of commission, and all the business of the park has been seized by the monopoly.

"In Glacier National Park there is only one remaining independent hotel, and only one independent hotel survives in Yosemite. Unless the national park policy is changed, all the remaining independent places of business which serve the public in the national parks are doomed.

"The Rocky Mountain National Park, which has double the attendance of any other of the national parks, was established about seven years ago. Those who created the park were aware of the evils which had arisen in other parks from monopolistic transportation. So provisions were included in the act for the conservation of public roads in the park. A clause ordained that 'no lands located within the park boundaries now held in private, municipal or State ownership shall be affected by or subject to the provisions of this act.'"

Lands held in State ownership were the public roads, which were, of course, under the jurisdiction of the State of Colorado. They are still legally under that jurisdiction. But the roads have been seized by armed park rangers, who forcibly exclude all pubic carriers except the Rocky Mountain Transportation Co.

Speaks of "Monopolization."

"Such seizure and monopolization of these roads would have been illegal even without the special provision in the Rocky Mountain Park act. A public road is a public highway, which anyone has a right to travel at any time, for business or pleasure. Everyone has an inalienable right to the use of the public roads—a right which cannot be transferred or denied, in any way that is legal or ethical.

"Nevertheless, men in business within the boundaries of the Rocky Mountain National Park are forbidden to have their own transportation. There are a number of privately owned hotels in this park; but what chance have they to survive against the hotels that are owned by or are interlocked with the monopoly? The local people are no longer free agents; and remember that they have no access to the courts, but are under the dictatorship of remote Washington officials."

That the monopoly probably holds the balance of political power in Colorado is maintained by Mills. He declares that the entire congressional delegation from the State is silent on the subject with one exception—Senator Nicholson, who, with Gov. Shoup, is opposing the trust.

He declares that none of the leading Denver newspapers will print anything in criticism of the Rocky Mountain Transportation Co., and that the Colorado Mountain Club and the Denver Tourists' Bureau refuse to permit the subject to be discussed. Denver merchants, he alleges, must keep silent, or else lose the opportunity to market their goods in the park.

"The building of a national highway," he continued, "for linking together 11 of the national parks, is being aggressively urged by the transportation monopoly. Do these park manipulators hope also to monopolize this highway after it, like the public roads in the parks, has been built by the public out of the public's pocket?

"Here in St. Louis you can hire an automobile of any make and tour freely all over the country—until you come to the boundary of any one of the principal national parks. There you must stop and change to a car of designated make, or you cannot enter, though all the legislation proclaims that the parks are open to the freest use of the public. "The remedy needed is, of course, competitive transportation service. More than any known factor, competition does after all control price and quality of service. Then, too, the

MORE THAN A BRASSIERE
A Sensible Xmas Gift

A CIRCLET is a gift that is sensible because it is useful as well as ornamental. It is "more than a brassiere" and beautifies as it encircles. It is self-adjusting and controls the figure above the waist as the corset does below. Sisters, Mothers, Aunts, Cousins—all would welcome one as a Christmas gift.

The Circlet illustrated, No. 2504, is a beautifully tailored model made in pink batiste of a fancy weave. Like all other Circlets it has no hooks nor eyes to tear or pull out. The price is $2.50.

CHARGES AGAINST NATIONAL PARK SERVICE AND REPLY

parks should be under the laws of Congress instead of the rules of an appointed official; and means should be provided that all of his rules be subject to review by the courts."

Mills himself operates a resort hotel, Long's Peak Inn, which is within the boundaries of the Rocky Mountain National Park. Prior to the advent of the Rocky Mountain Transportation Co. he operated for hire automobiles which carried tourists and their effects to and from the railroad, and travelers on sight-seeing trips. This service he has been compelled to discontinue, he says.

"MILLS PRIMARILY HOTEL KEEPER," SAYS ACTING DIRECTOR

The Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Enos Mills' criticisms of the National Park administration were submitted by the Post-Dispatch correspondent to the office of Secretary of the Interior Fall and in reply the following statement was made by B. L. Vipond, acting director of the National Park service:

"Mills is primarily a hotel keeper in Rocky Mountain National Park. High motives of patriotism and unselfish devotion to the public cause have been too liberally attributed to him because of his writings.

"Mills operates a hotel on a large tract of private land within the boundaries of the Rocky Mountain Park, which, upon being included within the park, greatly increased in value. He operates this without any supervision of any kind by this service as to rates or types of service. He and any other hotel keepers have the right to carry their patrons from stations or from Estes Park to their hotels and return without restriction.

"Our reports show that he made no objection to the transportation franchise in effect in the Rocky Mountain Park when it was first granted, but it seems that he was under the impression that he could have all cars routed in front of his hotel and thus have early opportunity to secure the patronage of incoming visitors. When this routing was not authorized he began his attacks upon the department's transportation policy. Later he applied for a transportation franchise, which was denied. He sought redress in the Federal Court and the Court has upheld the policy of this department under the law.

"Secretary Fall during the past summer personally visited five of the larger national parks and after a full and thorough examination into all the phases of park administration, after hearing every protest by letter or otherwise on file or offered on the ground, and after giving personal consideration and careful study to all of the administrative problems, made upon his return to Washington the following significant statement: 'I have become entirely convinced that the present principle through which the parks are handled is the proper one.'

"In reference to the assertions made by Mills:

"1. That no traveler is permitted to ride in a hired car unless that hired car is a white automobile.

"In Glacier Park the transportation company operates only White automobiles; in Mount Rainier National Park the transportation company operates Whites, Reos and Cadillacs; in Yosemite there are two transportation companies, the Yosemite National Park Company operates White cars, while the Yosemite Stage and Turnpike Company operates exclusively the Pierce-Arrow cars; in Sequoia Park the transportation company operates the Chandler and Dodge cars; in the Rocky Mountain Park the transportation company operates almost entirely White cars; White cars are operated by the transportation company in the Yellowstone, while in the Mesa Verde Park the transportation company operates Oldsmobile and Buick cars. The fact that several of the transportation companies operate White cars is simply an endorsement of that car.

2. That all of the above named parks are monopolized by transportation companies of various names but all based on a certain make of automobile.

"With the exception of the Glacier and the Rocky Mountain Park Transportation companies, which are operated and controlled by the same interests, there is absolutely no affiliation between any of the other transportation companies operating in the parks. The parties holding the Rocky Mountain and Glacier Park franchise have been constantly and continually losing money since they commenced operation. They are only holding on because of the hope that through future development these services will reimburse them for losses and outlays; in the meantime, transportation service is kept up to the very first class.

"3. The monopoly was established not by act of Congress, but by arbitrary fiat of Stephen T. Mather, director of National Parks.

"All public utility franchises are granted in the national parks by the Secretary of the Interior under the act of Congress approved Aug. 25, 1916.

Fee Question Explained.

"4. Personally owned cars entering Yellowstone must pay a toll of $7.50 and a toll of $5 in both Yosemite and Glacier National Parks.

"Fee for admission for private cars is charged to a number of national parks. These fees are based on the mileage of automobile roads in the various national parks, and vary from 50 cents in the Gen. Grant National Park to $7.50 in the Yellowstone, where over 300 miles of road are available for the use of the motorist. The purpose of the fees is generally not understood because the average citizen is not familiar with the financial policies of Congress. Congress, while always willing to appropriate funds for the maintenance, protection and improvement of the national parks, demands that those who use and enjoy these playgrounds shall contribute toward their administration and upkeep. The amount of this contribution is fixed, of course, by the department, and the funds derived by the collection of the various fees is paid into the miscellaneous receipts of the treasury and an account to Congress is rendered. The fee for admission to Glacier National Park is $2.50 for the east side road system and 50 cents for the west side road system. There is no connecting road through the park.

"5. In Yellowstone Park the monopoly has already destroyed all independent business and has usurped control of hotels, stores, camps, the hiring of horses and guides and even the developing of photographs.

"Nothing could be further from the facts. There is an affiliation through ownership of the companies operating the transportation and the hotels. Five permanent camps, which accommodate nearly as many people during the season as the hotels, are operated by a distinct company. All the general stores in the Yellowstone Park are operated by separate and distinct interests from either the transportation, hotel or camp companies. Both the hotels and camps are permitted to provide horses and guides, and, as for the photographic franchise, this is conducted by Haynes of St. Paul and was conducted by his father before him, one of the most noted of the early pioneers of the Yellowstone region.

Policy Thoroughly Tested.

"The policy of granting transportation franchises has been thoroughly tested out by the Department and is in accordance with good, sound business principles. Such a transportation system may be likened to a street car line or telephone system, a multiplicity or even duplication of which destroys opportunity for proper earnings on investments and brings high rates and decidedly poor and annoying service to the public. In the handling of such large masses of people as visit our national parks there must be an established transportation operator financially responsible for possible damage to persons and personal property. This policy has the approval and is in fact demanded by agencies and companies whose business consists in promoting and arranging accommodations for tourist parties. Park transportation companies are under complete control of the department."

Secretary Fall is not in the city. Attention was called by the department to the following statements regarding the national parks which appear in his annual report to the President, issued last Tuesday.

"I have recently visited many of the national parks and have given time and consideration to the management of the same, both in the field and in the Washington office.

"From time to time complaints come in with reference to the policy adopted in handling transportation, hotel, and other privileges in the parks. These parks are, of course, national property and are maintained and operated through national funds under the authority of Congress itself. Being situated, however, in the States, the people of the State, while appreciating the great benefits from such location within their boundaries, and while realizing that the visitors from other States bring in large sums of money which are expended in their midst, yet are desirous of conducting enterprises within the parks and are prone to complain to their Congressmen and others where the national policy adopted and enforced apparently excludes them, or the majority of them, from indiscriminate enjoyment of the opportunities to make money.

Central Authority Needed.

"No criticism is intended in calling attention to this fact, but of course it is apparent to anyone that these parks, being national projects supported and maintained by the National Government as national playgrounds, must be operated and maintained by some authority having control over transportation and transportation charges, public camps, hotel privileges, and other activities within the parks. The season is short in each of the parks and great crowds surge into them during practically three months of the twelve.

"After considering all protests and giving most serious attention to the different problems I cannot refrain from expressing my gratification at the excellent, businesslike, tactful and competent management of the majority of the parks under the jurisdiction of the different superintendents and the general authority of the Director of the National Parks. It has given me pleasure to be able to assist in reconciling some of the differences which have existed."

And Now St. Louis' Foremost Talking Machine Store Announces the Biggest Surprise of All—

Console Style Phonographs

—Complete Instruments of GENUINE Mahogany—Manufacturer's List Price, $350—Offered, Beginning Tomorrow—in Time for Buying That Christmas Gift for the Home—at $115

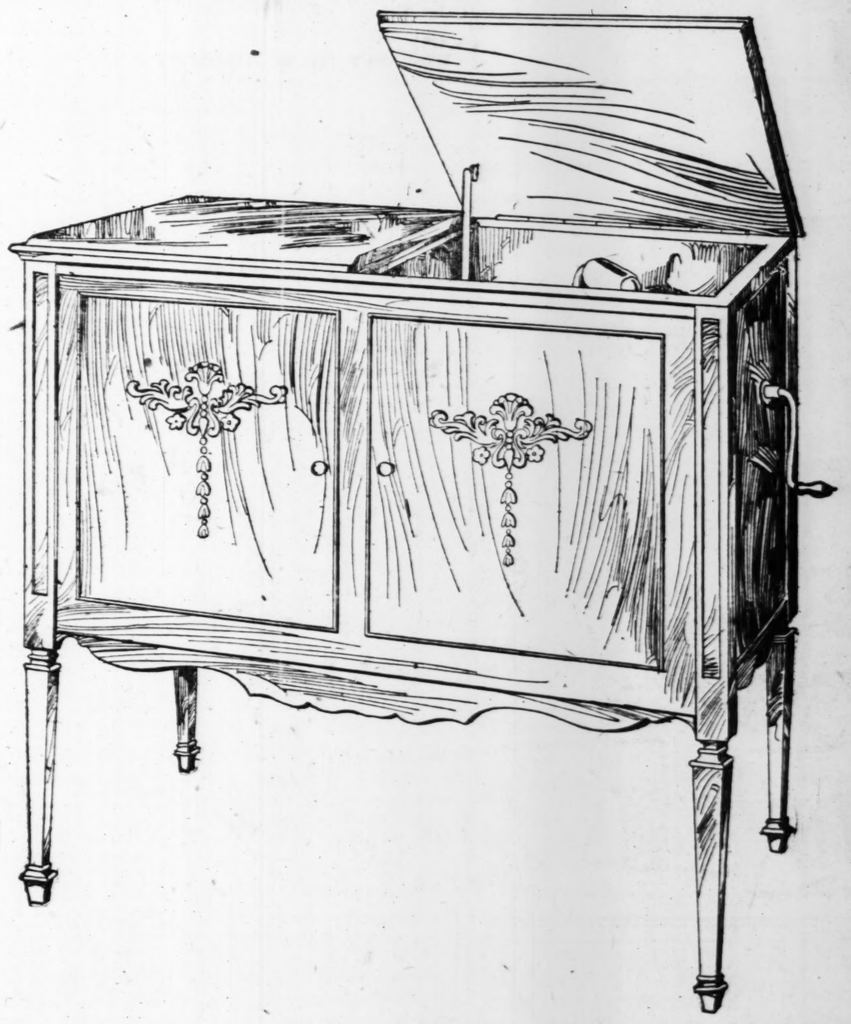
$8.00 Cash $7.00 Per Month



¶ Don't confuse these Console Phonographs with those recently advertised about town where a medium priced Phonograph or Talking Machine is fitted into a console type cabinet—these are not that kind. These are complete—the Phonograph being built right into the cabinet and an integral part of it.

Standard equipped, all metal parts heavily gold plated, size 36½x 41x23½ inches — ONLY GENUINE MAHOGANY USED THROUGHOUT — artistically designed in the Queen Anne and Sheraton styles — the very best workmanship — made by a factory that has been known for its excellent workmanship for over 25 years — all motor parts are standard, plays all makes of records. Guaranteed by the maker and Famous-Barr Co.

¶ This most unusual price is possible on only a limited number of instruments and results from a most advantageous arrangement with the manufacturer—a price that does not begin to cover their cost of manufacture.

¶ Listed by the manufacturer to sell at $350 and our price of $115 makes it what we consider to be the biggest value in a console-type phonograph ever offered in St. Louis or anywhere else to our knowledge.

The Console Type Makes an Ideal Christmas Present

—Because it combines the features of a real high-grade musical instrument and the usefulness of a beautiful piece of practical furniture—something that can be enjoyed every day in the year. Every instrument will be delivered in time for Christmas.

And you'll want your records to come from this store, too—they are sealed always, making you the first to play them

A Small Cash Payment Will Place One of These Phonographs in Your Home for Christmas!

EARLY CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

BY W. E. HILL

"For goodness' sake, if you don't like it on me, say so now—don't wait till I get it home and then say you don't like it!" Papa is helping the little woman pick out her own Christmas present. Papa is being very noncommittal. What else can a man be with the appealing glance of a beautiful blond saleslady leveled at him?

Clever salesman in the men's furnishing department showing a doubter that, really, the scarf isn't a bit too loud.

Very apologetic man with something to be exchanged. Does a great deal of explaining, all about how he got it for a friend and the friend didn't like it. So sorry he's causing so much trouble, etc., etc.

And here is a beautiful lady with something she wants to exchange. You didn't catch her doing any apologizing or explaining—not a bit of it. Instead she has an injured air, and all but demands an explanation from the store for selling her something she didn't like when she got it home. (Much more successful than the man.)

Mrs Lilly does think of the best Christmas gifts! She's found such a cute little basket at the 17-cent gift counter. With a paper lace lining and some jelly beans to fill it, what a splendid present it's going to be for the telephone girl in Mrs. Lilly's apartment house.

Very surprised lady from the suburbs trying to go down an up-escalator.

Five perfectly entranced lady shoppers gazing at the model early Italian room of the interior decorating department exhibit. And to-morrow five suburban parlors are going to show signs of department store early Italian influence.

Mrs. Blivin isn't getting along very well with her Christmas list, but she has seen a lot of things she wants for herself. She has just tried on the nicest little brown dress—but it was too small. Life is like that, isn't it? One disappointment after another. She is planning to have the little brown dress copied at home.

"Miss Bernstein, will you please gimme back my pencil!"

Very tired errand girl with a load of extra stock.

"Oh, yes, indeed, Modom will posi-tive-ly have it finished in time for the afternoon delivery. And just to make sure, I'll mark it 'special.' Not at all. 'Good day.'" Miss Walsh, the head of the fitting room, perjuring her otherwise spotless soul with the blackest of lies. Miss W. is one of the nine hundred and ninety-odd fitters who "have been with Lasilla."

$2000 in Gold in Old Clock.
Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Dec. 1. — Inside the case of a grandfather clock bought by a furniture dealer in a village near Kingston recently was found £400 (normally $2000) in gold sovereigns. The clock had belonged to a woman who died three years ago, and since that time it had been in the possession of a relative who did not wind it up and consequently never discovered the money.

VICTORY BOND BUYERS HIT BY NEW TAX LAW

Income Tax Specialist Says Those Not Original Buyers Lose Interest Privilege.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—A change in the new revenue act has denied taxpayers their former privilege of deducting interest paid in carrying Victory bonds paying 3¾ per cent interest, unless they are the original purchasers, Joseph J. Klein of Klein, Hinds & Finke, certified public accountants specializing in the income tax, declaares.

Dr. Klein said the effect of the change, which he described as a last moment one, was to penalize those who had supported the Federal bond market when higher interest bearing securities in the form of municipal bonds were open to those who had money to invest. It was learned that an attempt might be made to have Congress change this part of Section 214, which specifies deductions allowed individuals. It reads as follows:

Section 214 (a) (2). All interest paid or accrued within the taxable year, except on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry obligations or securities other than obligations of the United States issued after Sept. 24, 1917, and originally subscribed for by the taxpayer, the interest upon which is wholly exempt from taxation under this title.

"This provision, in even more drastic form, appeared in the House draft and was then somewhat modified in the Senate draft, which was finally accepted by the conferees," said Dr. Klein. "Let me illustrate its unfairness. Early in 1921 an investor had the option of purchasing entirely tax-exempt municipal bonds which carried interes at 5 per cent, and even higher rates. The law, which was then in effect, permitted purchasers of Victory 3¾s, the interest from which was entirely exempt, to deduct as an expense the interest paid in connection with such purpose, and the inference is absolutely clear that those who were led to make the investment had a right to rely on a belief that Congress would not change the situation without due and timely notice being given.

"As a matter of fact, the new revenue act of 1921 in the provision, effective from the first of January, 1921, now says to these investors: 'Though you had the right to believe that you could deduct the interest paid on the money which enabled you to purchase these low interest-bearing bonds of your Government, you cannot now deduct the interest which you had a right to believe, when you made your purchase, that you could deduct.'

"Such conduct is entirely reprehensible and would not be countenanced in a private transaction between individuals. Congress has broken faith and should at the very first opportunity redress this wrong. This can be done by making this part of section 214 effective either from the date of the passage of the act, or, more fairly still, from next Jan. 1."

America Would Not Be America Without PITTSBURGH

¶ Pittsburgh is the industrial center of the world. It is the last to feel depression, the first to come back. To the national and the international mind it typifies America.

¶ As might be expected, when business everywhere is starting to rebound, Pittsburgh already is well on the way. Orders are coming in to its steel mills and other great industrial plants in increasing volume.

¶ Two orders recently received by one institution alone amount to over $9,000,000—which means that Pittsburgh, first of all the cities, is getting back to its old time buying power and business confidence.

Pittsburgh Would Not Be Pittsburgh Without THE PITTSBURGH PRESS

¶ THE PRESS has no selfish interest to serve. It has an unbossed, unbiased policy of square dealing and protection of the people's rights.

¶ H. G. Wells is covering the Arms Conference for THE PRESS.

¶ THE PITTSBURGH PRESS circulation thoroughly dominates Pittsburgh and the whole Western Pennsylvania district. Being a newspaper for all the people it maintains its great and growing leadership in circulation.

¶ Automobile manufacturers recognize it with the largest volume of automobile advertising printed in any newspaper in the United States.

¶ The great masses recognize it with a volume of classified advertising almost equal to that of the six other Pittsburgh newspapers combined.

¶ The department, furniture, music and specialty stores of Pittsburgh recognize it by using in THE PRESS more copy than in any other Pittsburgh newspaper.

¶ Grocers and food manufacturers recognize it by giving it more advertising than any other newspaper in the United States.

THE PRESS Is to Pittsburgh What Pittsburgh Is to America

Daily Circulation Over 155,000 Sunday Circulation Over 180,000

From New York American, October 14, 1921

This will interest editors only, but it WILL interest them. Mr. Hershman, who owns the Pittsburgh Press, sends out a pink slip giving the United States Government circulation statement for October 1, 1921. The Press daily circulation, bigger by fifty per cent than any other evening paper, gained 21,000 copies in the year, and 3,300 since last April. Every Pittsburgh evening competitor has lost since last April.

Mr. Hershman's Sunday Press, with circulation almost one hundred per cent greater than any other Pittsburgh Sunday paper, gained 21,000 in the last year and has gained 3,000 since April 1. CONCERT AT FARMERS' HALL

Oakville Male Chorus to Give Program Sunday.

The Oakville Male Chorus will give its annual free concert next Sunday evening, beginning at 7 o'clock, at the Farmers' Club Hall, three miles south of Jefferson Barracks. Max Gundlach is director. There will be an orchestra, and tenor solos by A. Benack and H. Weiss.

Among the club's numbers will be the soldiers' chorus, from "Faust;" "Hymn of Thanksgiving," Kremser; "After the Battle," Schultz; and "Good Night," Pfeil. There will be several orchestral selections, including a march and an overture by Von Suppe.

Your Own Shock Absorber

To absorb the shocks of walking—repeated 4000 to 8000 times a day, for that is the number of steps you take—nature made the foot arch flexible. "The imprint of the human foot," writes Dr. Lillian Whitney, "shows that only the heel, ball and outer border touch the earth, while the hollow of the foot, that part upon which the greatest weight rests, does not touch the earth at all. Here lies the great elasticity of this wonderful mechanism."

A flexible, elastic and shock absorbing foot arch calls for a flexible shoe arch. But all ordinary shoes have a rigid piece of steel imbedded and concealed in the shank.

No wonder that women find the day's duties less tiring, less of a strain on nerves and muscle, when they wear Cantilever Shoes with flexible arches. The Cantilever shank is all-leather, and conceals no hidden metal. Free movement of the foot, elasticity in walking, a normal support to the foot while standing, make Cantilever Shoes the shoes you should wear for standing or walking. They are modish in appearance and wonderfully comfortable.

MONTREAL TO MEXICO HIGHWAY ASSOCIATION

New International Road to Cross Mississippi at Cairo, Ill., Planned.

Following the announcement that a "Y" or wye bridge was proposed to cross the Ohio River at Cairo, Ill., to Kentucky and again extend into Missouri, affording a main line connecting link for the Illinois Central Railroad, an organization to be known as the "Great Southwestern International Highway," was formed. The highway will extend from Montreal to Mexico City, Mexico, and will cross the Mississippi River at Cairo, providing an uninterrupted trail across the United States.

The temporary officers elected are President, Thad Snow of Charleston, Mo., who is president of the Southeast Missouri Agricultural Bureau; Secretary, John H. Jackson of Cairo, who is one of the 12 directors of the Illinois State Automobile Association. C. M. Smith Sr. of Sikeston, Mo., was named vice-president.

The next meeting of the organization will be held in Louisville, Ky., at a date to be named. At that time permanent officers will be elected, a constitution and by-laws will be adopted and representatives of the various sections of the country will be selected.

The highway route will touch such cities in the order named as: Quebec, following the New York-Albany-Quebec route through Montreal to Rouse's Point, N. Y., thence to Malone, Watertown, Rochester, via the Theodore Roosevelt International highway; Rochester to Buffalo, Erie, Cleveland, via the Yellowstone trail; Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati, via the Ohio Market road No. 1; Cincinnati to Covington, Ky., then to Frankfort, Louisville, West Point, Hardinsburg, Cloverport, Owensboro, Henderson, Morganfield, Marion, Smithfield, Paducah, Wickliffe, to Cairo, Ill. Bird's Point, where the trail will cross the Mississippi River to Charleston, Sikeston, Dexter, Poplar Bluffs and then to Little Rock, Ark. From Little Rock the trail will continue to Texarkana, Tex., Dallas, Waco, Austin, San Antonio to Laredo and then across the border to Mexico City, Mexico, via the Lone Star route.

The highway will be marked by a 12-inch black square with two inches of white at the top and bottom and a two-inch diagonal orange stripe.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE WEEK AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Any of these books will be sent by parcel post to card-holders on receipt of postage, in order of application.

ENGLISH INTO FRENCH. By D. N. Samson. Five thousand English phrases rendered into idiomatic French. A useful book for the student.

THE MARCH TOWARDS SOCIALISM. By Edgard Milhaud; translated by H. J. Stenning. A book bearing upon the social problems which are uppermost in the public mind today. The author is well known in Europe as an advocate of Socialism.

THE PROPHETS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT. By Alexander R. Gordon. A companion volume to "The Poets of the Old Testament." The author says, "The prophets are set on the back-ground of their time, and portrayed in their sharply contrasted personality and experience, but the stress throughout is laid on translations of their significant utterances, which reproduce as nearly as possible the sense and rhythm of the original."

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF EVERYDAY LIFE. By James Drever. The author states that the aim of the book is to bring the ordinary educated man into closer acquaintance with the science of psychology. An attempt has been made to present, in nontechnical language, wherever possible, the main facts of the science which would be of interest to the general reader.

A SHORT MANUAL OF FOREST MANAGEMENT. By H. Jackson, M. A. Simple and brief; based on a purely practical foundation. Has an index.

DRUGS IN COMMERCE: THEIR SOURCE, PREPARATION FOR THE MARKET AND DESCRIPTION. By John Humphrey. Short descriptions of the drugs, with references to their chief constituents. Many illustrations.

INDIA RUBBER GOODS MANUFACTURE: A PRACTICAL GUIDE. By "Factory Manager." Shows how various kinds, qualities and classes are made, describing the methods of manufacture and the machinery employed.

CHEMISTRY AND ITS MYSTERIES. By Charles R. Gibson. The story of what things are made of, told in simple language. For boys and girls from 10 to 15 years of age.

SAILING THE SEAS, THE LOG OF TOM DARKE. By James Baldwin and W. W. Livengood. The purpose of this book, which was written at the request of the U. S. Shipping Board, is to awaken the interest of American boys and girls in the commercial achievements of our country.

THE MAKING OF OUR COUNTRY. By Smith Burnham. The author states that he has made a special effort to treat adequately the last 50 years of American life. He has omitted many unimportant names and facts and given more attention to the men and events that have played a vital part in the making of the American nation. Many illustrations and maps.

EUROPE-AFRICA TUBE PLANS AGAIN ARE BEING CONSIDERED

Greatest Tunnel Would Be at Least 24 Miles Long and Quarter Deep.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—All the tunnels in the world would shrink into mere burrows in comparison with one that would link Europe and Africa. But the project to traverse the Straits of Gibraltar with a tunnel is being seriously considered again.

The French have always regarded Mediterranean Africa as practically a part of our own continent. A direct railroad from Paris to Tangiers and Capetown would certainly, apart from its immediate practical consequences, vividly strike the imagination and would help us to realize how inter-related are countries and continents.

In conjunction with a tunnel under the English Channel—which is a comparatively trivial operation—or even with the Channel Train-Ferry from Calais to Richborough, the Gibraltar tunnel would make it possible to travel or to send goods from London to Capetown without changing conveyance.

The conception is audacious, but it is technically sound. To show how bold it is, it is only necessary to remark that the Gibraltar tunnel at its lowest level would be 1254 feet below the surface of the sea. In the English Channel the tunnel would be at nothing like such a depth.

Two schemes are approved by experts. One is by a Frenchman, M. Bressler; the other by a Spaniard, Senor Rubio Y Bellue. They differ in many respects, but it seems to be agreed that the shortest crossing possible is about 24 miles.

A tube about six yards in diameter is proposed. There would be a single track with three stations, at which the line would be doubled to permit trains to pass. The tunnel entrance on the Spanish side should be 10 or 12 yards above sea level; on the Moroccan side seven yards. The slope is figured at one in 40 at the maximum.

GIPSY SMITH WILL SPEAK TO MEN IN WEBSTER TODAY

Meetings Are to Continue Through Week—Several Addresses to Be Made in St. Louis.

Capt. Gipsy Pat Smith, who is conducting a series of meetings in the Webster Groves Presbyterian Church, will speak to men in the church at 3 o'clock today. He will speak on "A Soldier's Confession," tonight, in the Ozark Theater.

Capt. Smith's meetings will continue through this week. He will speak before three St. Louis luncheon clubs, the City Club Wednesday, the Kiwanis Club Thursday and the Optimists Friday.

Capt. Smith spoke in St. Louis two years and a half ago, and his account of his war experiences printed in an interview in the Post-Dispatch at that time, has been reprinted in pamphlet form and circulated widely.

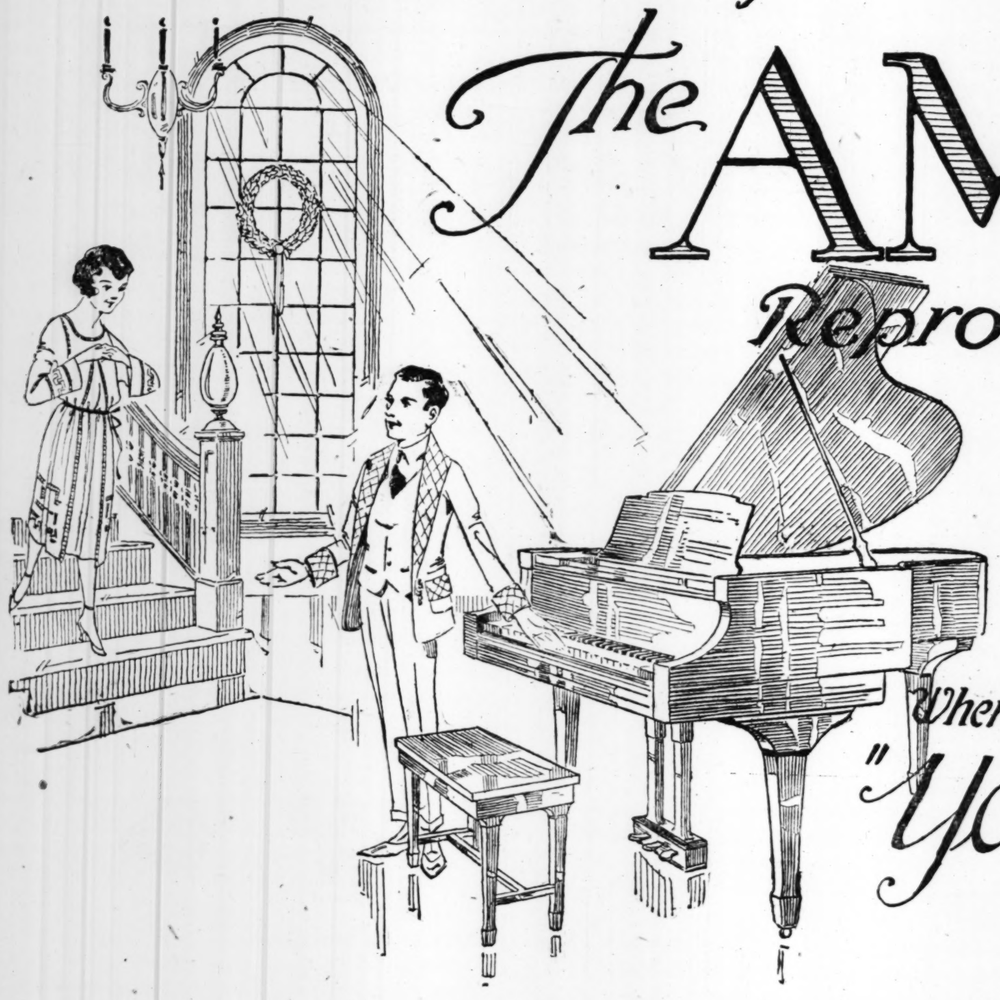
The Finest Gift in all the World!

The AMPICO

Reproducing Piano



That superlative thrill, that moment of pure conquest which is vouchsafed but seldom in a lifetime—and for which a whole lifetime of effort is not too dear a price to pay—is yours, sir,

When You Say to her Christmas Morning

"Yours, My Dear!"

GLORIOUS is the day when the AMPICO comes into your life! To human ears, to human enjoyment of the musically beautiful, nothing in the history of mankind has added so much.

And What Is The Ampico?

The ONE instrument that reproduces with absolute accuracy the recordings of world-famous artists.

Listen: The melody has started — a Chopin nocturne. Pure, serene, like a shining river it glides; shaded by exquisite measures of color; flowing on and on, until the ears seem filled with its somnolent dreaming. Your soul takes wings.

The AMPICO for yourself — the AMPICO for all the family, it means a new lease on life, a new interest in living. Joy, joy, that you never dreamed existed is yours when the AMPICO comes—music, divinest of the arts—of that art. Rachmaninoff, Godowsky, Levitski, Samaroff, Ornstein, Dr. Richard Strauss, Kreisler, Moissewitch, Arthur Rubenstein and a host of others record now for the AMPICO. And for the AMPICO Exclusively. They are all yours — your own, WHEN and as OFTEN as you want them. Did the artist refuse an encore? — Not the AMPICO. Did the artist, worn from a long tour, play indifferently? NEVER the AMPICO. All AMPICO Recordings are made when the artist is at his best.

And as for the dance music, well, only the AMPICO can produce those indescribable thrills and unique rhythms so necessary to a "Perfect Party." Old-time ballads, simple songs of everyday life, all are yours thru the medium of the AMPICO REPRODUCING PIANO.

Conroy's Are Exclusive Distributors

for the AMPICO in the world-famous KNABE, THE HAINES BROS., and the MARSHALL & WENDELL Pianos. These instruments are recognized as the leaders in their field. The extraordinary success of the AMPICO has brought on the market a host of spurious imitations that are hardly anything more or less than ordinary player pianos. The AMPICO is the ONE reproducing piano, and had the courts permitted the name reproducing to be copyrighted, no other instrument today could be sold as a genuine reproducing piano. In the AMPICO the mechanism is concealed inside the instrument, yet the strings are not shortened, the sounding board reduced, nor the case lengthened or thrown out of proportion. The piano may, of course, be played by hand when desired.

Read what these International authorities say concerning THEIR AMPICOS:

From Dr. Richard Strauss—

"It is with great interest that I record my compositions for the AMPICO, the reputation of which has already reached my ears in Europe."

From Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady

"As you listen your pipe goes out—truest test of absorption—and you forget your surroundings and are transported to the Elysian Fields of romance and harmonies divine." From Dr. Albert Einstein—"The AMPICO elicits my great admiration; reproductions are so finely nuanced and the operations seem so simple. Permit me to extend my best compliments."

Some Prominent Ampico Owners:

H. R. H. The Prince of Wales; His Excellency President Menocal; J. Ogden Armour; August A. Busch; Otto Kahn; Claus Spreckles, Clement Studebaker, George J. Whelan; Mrs. O. P. Belmont; George C. Durant; Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt; Vincent Astor; Jay Gould.

GERMAN NEWSPAPER ATTACKS POMP AT EX-KING'S FUNERAL

Declares Display Was More for Monarchists' Hopes Than for Monarch's Memory.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

COBLENZ, Nov. 21.—The funeral of the former King of Bavaria in Munich was referred to as a monarchist demonstration by the Rhenish Rundschau, a Democratic newspaper published in Coblenz. The article, headed "The Hopes of the Monarchists," says the pomp and luxury displayed at the funeral services of the King surpassed all arrangements of a similar affair even during the best days of Germany's monarchies.

Recalling pre-war, saber-rattling days in Prussia, the writer asserts that: "The pomp was less devoted to the deceased King than to the deceased idea of the kingdom. The monarchists of the German states placed common human sympathy for a dead King within the service of their party idea, which aims at the restoration of a monarchy in Germany.

"At a moment when millions of Germans have not enough to eat, a display of luxury was indulged in at Munich which can hardly be described. The entire management of the obsequies was so brilliant that the official members of the Republican Bavarian Government were the 'dummies' at this monarchist demonstration.

'RESCUE GAME' USED BY NEW YORK PICKPOCKETS

One Saves Victim From Gang, Then Strips Him of Belongings Himself.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—New York's pickpockets have a new game. They call it the "rescue game." The "rescue" a hand-picked victim from the clutches of a gang bent on cleaning out his pockets. After he has been "rescued" everything salable or pawnable that he carries is removed by the "rescuer" and the spoils are divided among the "rescuer" and the band that was apparently defeatd in its purpose.

Prohibition has reduced appreciably the profits of the industry in which Oliver Twist was trained by Fagin. The fewer the "drunks" the fewer the victims. Many of the "dips," as the pickpocket is known in police classification, have turned to bootlegging, but there remains no lack of those who stick to their old occupation. Elevated and subway trains and stations, especially in the early morning hours, are still fertile fields for their endeavors.

Traveling in pairs on local subway trains from midnight on, the pickpockets stand at side doors, one on each side, and watch for "sleepers"—men or women who have fallen asleep on a bench while waiting for a train or have been overcome by the opiate dispensed as "hootch" by bootleggers. If they spot such a "sleeper" the pickpockets get off at the nearest station and board a train which will take them to the platform where the slumberer is snoring. Then they await their chance to empty his or her pockets without detection. Having taken all there is worth taking, they board the next train and repeat the process, riding from one end of the line to the other until traffic begins to get so heavy that they can no longer operate with safety.

Pickpockets Dread Train Guards.

This method, however, is not as lucrative as in days of yore, for the train guards have learned to recognize faces, and when they observe a familiar pair riding up and down the line continuously they take steps to spoil the game. When the pickpockets get off the guard delays his train long enough to tell the ticket agent at that station, and he in turn telephones to the ticket agent at the corresponding uptown station to be on the lookout, and if he has a "sleeper" on his hands to rouse and warn him.

So, responding to the need of devising new and protective ways of pursuing their calling with profit, the pickpockets have taken to the "Rescue Game." As exemplified at a Bronx subway station at 4 o'clock in the morning a few days ago, the game is played in this wise:

Surrounded by a group, easily recognizable to the trained eye as consisting of half a dozen pickpockets or gangsters, was an intoxicated individual, who wore good clothes, a diamond ring and a conspicuous watch chain. Riding uptown, the gang had surrounded him and one had applied a vile epithet to him. When he resented the insult and wanted to fight his insulter, the latter disclaimed applying the epithet to him, saying he had meant it for one of his companions. This served the purpose of the gang, however, for it started an argument, which they took pains to keep just short of blows, that lasted until the passenger got off, they following and renewing it on the station platform.

How the Trick Is Played.

They closed around him, apparently to "beat him up." At a moment when the first blow seemed about to fall a newcomer strolled up, apparently casually, and asked what the trouble was. To the initiated eye he, too, had all the marks of the underworld. When explanations started he at once took the part of the victim. He seemed to awe the gang and when he took the inebriate by the arm to lead him away, explaining to that individual that he would take care of him, not a dissenting voice was heard. This, to one who knows New York criminal gangs, revealed the trick, for had the newcomer not been one of their number, they would have attacked him.

But the prey refused to be rescued. "I c'n take care of m'self," he announced in bellicose tones. "I'm an American 'n I can lick th' bunch."

He shook off the detaining arm and lurched toward the group of silent gangsters. There was no response to his challenge. The rescuer followed and again taking his arm told him there wasn't any doubt he could "clean up the gang," but the best thing to do was to come along with him. Finally convinced that he had sufficiently demonstrated his courage and invincibility, the rescued victim staggered away with his protector.

Later in the day he was richer in experience and poorer in pocket and the gang divided the "swag."

WOMAN IS ELECTED JAILER

By the Associated Press.

HEYDEN, Ky.—Mrs. Sylvania Duff will be jailer of Leslie County for the next four years if the courts uphold her election in a contest suit filed by Allen Muncy. Mrs. Duff's husband was defeated in the primary. She entered the race and won in the general election by 29 votes over Muncy, who succeeded Duff as jailer four years ago. Mrs. Duff is 53 years old and was born and reared in Eastern Kentucky.

"Eyeopener Specials" to Juarez.

EL PASO, Tex.—Early visitors to Juarez to get an eyeopener do not need passports. Street cars begin to run at 6 a. m., but Mexican inspectors seldom get on the job before 8 o'clock.

REPUBLICAN BUREAUS HOLD ALL OF EX-KAISERS PALACES

Even His Bedroom in the Schloss on the Linden Open to Public as Part of Museum.

Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—For a long time after the Kaiser left Germany respect for royal institutions was sufficient to keep everything as it was. If he had come back into power within a year of the revolution he would have found everything as he left it. Not so now.

He would not have a place to lay his head, though 1000 marks slipped to the porter of a hotel would, of course, get him a room. Even his bedroom in the Schloss on the Linden, is a part of the newly created museum, thrown open to the public. All the rest of that palace (and every [illegible] in Berlin) has been seized upon by various newly created bureaus in which republican Germany is reveling.

The Berlin University has crossed the Linden and installed some of its departments in the Schloss, as it will ultimately do with the whole group of imperial buildings.

The republican officials who dropped into such comfortable quarters as most of the dozen palaces in Berlin afforded are settling down for good. In the Bellevue Palace in the Tiergarten—which has always housed the headquarters of the semi-military organizations connected with Border Guard societies, such as that developed in Upper Silesia—the permanent officials have established living quarters.

The only castle into which no republican institution has not penetrated is Frederick the Great's Sans Souci Palace in Potsdam. "Der Alte Fritz" still commands all respect in Germany. Not one of his things has been touched, except an old shooting lodge in the Gruenwald, which was given to the Berlin Technical High School as a locker house for their sporting events. As the lodge has no running water or light it was spurned by the school.

Read this letter written to the Estey Company by a former supply commissioner of the Board of Education:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ST. LOUIS
Office of the Supply Commissioner
Telephone, Main 1139. St. Louis, Mo.

Gentlemen:—On June 11, 1901, a contract was awarded you by the Board of Education of the City of St. Louis for seventy-five (75) Estey Pianos for use in the Kindergartens of the St. Louis Public Schools. These Pianos have now been in use for about five years and there has never been a single complaint regarding them, nor have any repairs, whatever, been necessary. Since the fulfillment of the original contract, we have purchased thirteen (13) additional, making in all eighty-eight* (88) Estey Pianos now in the Public Schools of St. Louis.

J. A. LONG, Supply Commissioner.

*Twelve (12) additional Pianos have been purchased since this letter was written.

GREAT AIRPLANES OF FUTURE CAST SHADOWS

One of Most Practicable Machines at Paris Show Would Go in Little Room.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—The aviation show at the Grand Palais was the largest show of airplanes since the war.

The smallest machine of the show, and the nearest approach—although the ristance is yet far—to the small, manageable machine of the future, which is to supplant the road motor, was the Italian Ricci triplane. The tiny machine, at present only in the trial stage, would fit into a very small dining room. The maker is going to find a new and more practical engine.

The geratest of all was a giant Farman, with seating accommodation as large as an omnibus and wings as broad as the section of an ocean liner. This shiplike impression was borne out by other giants of the show, the French white Latecoere and the white Bleriot, in which the space between the wings left by the two twin supplementary engines is filled with massive pillars of steel or aluminum.

The Dutel a Notable Craft.

The Dutel commercial machine, the Fokker now turned into the ways of peace, was fitted with a six-cylinder British engine. It is a notable machine; it lifts 47,130 pounds, dead weight, is a monoplane and most important of all to the genearl public, has the proudest record of any machine in constant use in that it has flown 406,250 miles without the smallest accident.

A new idea for the safety of passengers on it is a manhole above the five seats provided for them, through which they could climb. Here, as in most commercial flyers, the seats are comfortable, and are, in fact, nothing more or less than the armchairs that one sees in any comfortable home.

Little advance has been marked by French makers since the war, who have rather devoted themselves to improving safety devices and other details which are minor—from the point of view of the technical expert. A small minority of the machines shown have never flown or, say the experts, ever will do so, though they have their experimental value.

British Engine Great Attraction.

Although the British makers were represented only by the Bristol engine, this was one of the great attractions. It is a nine-cylinder, air-cooled engine, the only one of its type to pass the test of the British Air Ministry. Owing to its method of cooling, it is also the lightest and strongest engine for its power in the world. It is an achievement of the after-war period, for it came too late for hostilities.

The difficulties before airplane manufacturers are all too plainly told by the price of this engine, which will be in the neighborhood of £23,000, normally about $112,000. Quite passable engines, scrapped by foreign War Ministers after hostilities ceased, are being sold at 2000 francs, or about $145 at the present moment. It is hard on manufacturers, for such engines would take at least a 1000 pounds to manufacture at the present prices of production. Until this stock becomes definitely out of date or unusable, makers of new engines must suffer a great disadvantage. Still, the Bristol engine is one of which any nation could be proud.

The vast glass roofed hall of the Grand Palais was crowded with machines that seemed ready to fly toward the towering roof. One got the impression of a scene of the dim future in a romance by H. G. Wells.

One of the centers of attraction of the show was the helicopter made for the French Government and experimented on in Spain. It is a strange construction, eight pairs of wings being fitted at right angles around a steel column ten feet high above the boxlike inclosure for the engine. It has been known to rise from the ground vertially and keep its altitude for a short time.

NEW OPERA BY AN AMERICAN TO BE PRODUCED IN PARIS

Blair Fairchild's "Lady Libellule" Will Be First American Work Presented at Opera Comique.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—"Lady Libellule," a new opera by Blair Fairchild, the first work by an American composer to be presented at the Opera Comique, will soon have its premier performance, and will be attended by a considerable part of the American colony in Paris. Fairchild has lived in Paris several years, and received the Legion of Honor for relief work during the war among French musicians and their families.

Born in Belmont, Mass., in 1877, Fairchild took up musical composition during his undergraduate period at Harvard. He followed this with long study in France, producing songs and other compositions which gave him a secure position in the musical world.

He spent some time in the American diplomatic service in Persia and wrote Persian folksongs. His cantata, "The Song of Songs," for 1000 voices has been repeatedly sung in America.

Since 1902 Fairchild has devoted himself almost exclusively to musical work here and the Paris public has become familiar with his symphonic and chamber music.

The Piano Record is a Critical Test

TO reproduce the music of a piano is one of the severest tasks you can put to a phonograph. The result is usually decidedly tinkly and weak and reminds you of the nursery and the children's one-octave toy piano. That is why we advise you to insist on hearing a piano record, as well as others, before you buy.

Teamster's Life Saved

Writes Letter That is Worth Reading Very Carefully.

Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.: I was afflicted with a very severe sore on my leg for years. I am a teamster. I tried all medicines and salves, but without success. I tried doctors, but they failed to cure me. I couldn't sleep for many nights from pain. Doctors said I could not live for more than two years. Finally Peterson's Ointment was recommended to me and by its use the sore was entirely healed. Thankfully yours, William Haase, West Park, Ohio, March 22, 1915, care P. G. Reits, Box 199.

Peterson says: "I am proud of the above letter and have hundreds of others that tell of wonderful cures of Eczema, Piles and Skin Diseases."

HOW DEAF HEAR WITH EYES TO BE SHOWN

Demonstrations Will Be Given at Reception for Institute Pupils at Faust Home Today.

The method by which men from whose brain the speech center has been shot away are re-taught to speak and children who were born deaf are taught to "hear" with their eyes will be demonstrated at a reception given in honor of the pupils of the Central Institute for the Deaf at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Faust, 1 Portland place, this afternoon.

The 64 children and a large number of adults now studying in the school will be brought into the program by the principal of the school, Miss Julia M. Connery, and the president of the board of trustees, Mrs. Samuel Plant. About 150 persons have been invited to the demonstration.

Special guests of the afternoon will be some of the graduates of the school. One of these is a girl born deaf, who because of her deafness and inability to communicate with her family was thought to be deficient and was placed in a school for the feeble-minded. She is now working in a mercantile house side by side and in constant association with hearing people and earns as much as those of normal hearing. Another is a boy also once sent to a school for feeble-minded who in the six years he has been at the Central Institute for the Deaf has completed the sixth grade in the regular manner and is scheduled to skip the eighth grade at the beginning of the year.

A former service man, who, when he came from France had lost the power of speech will tell in a talk which all will be able to hear and understand distinctly how his mutilated throat was taught to use false vocal cords, and another whose speech center was destroyed by a severe skull wound, will tell how he was taught to use another portion of his brain for the purpose of controlling his vocal muscles. A general discussion of the method employed in the school is expected to follow this demonstration.

The Central Institute for the deaf is the only school of its kind in the United States. It has pupils from 19 states and one, a little English boy, direct from China. Parents of 10 of the children have come to St. Louis to live permanently so that their children can have the benefit of the speech training. The school was started about 8 years ago and has grown from an institution of six or seven children to its present size. It was opened by Dr. Max A. Goldstein, its present director, as an experiment in purely oral instructions for the deaf, and although all its pupils are wholly or almost wholly deaf included in the department of instruction are music, dancing, calisthenics, and other courses commonly supposed to be open only to persons able to hear. In the eight years of its existence, 123 children have attended the school.

OBERAMMERGAU SCANDALIZED BY 'PASSION PLAY' FILM OFFER

MUNICH, Nov. 20.—The spiritual atmosphere of Oberammergau has been distressingly disturbed by an American film producer offering 70,000,000 marks for the exclusive rights to photograph the Passion Play next year. He first bid 50,000,000 and, mistaking the horror of surprise for silent bargaining, he raised his offer to 70,000,000.

Then the good peasants of Oberammergau enlightened him as to the cause of their silence, and realizing finally he could not tempt them, he put his resplendent person under a mountain of furs and drove out of the village in the showiest car Oberammergau has ever seen.

The village is inclined to think it has been treated impertinently, but it was so astonished at the magnificent apparition and the easy talk about tens of millions of marks that it forgot to find out who he was.

THOMAS M. OSBORNE TO SPEAK

Two public lectures by Thomas Mott Osborne, noted penologist, are announced for this week by Washington University Association. His general subject will be "Prisons: An Asset or a Liability," but the phases to be discussed are different.

The first lecture will be Tuesday and the other Thursday, both at 8:15 p. m., and both are to be delivered in the auditorium of the university school of medicine building, Euclid and Scott avenues.

BLIND MUSICIAN TO PLAY

Lester Best, 19 years old and blind, will play Kreisler's "Old Refrain" and "Liebesfreud," at a recital to be given Thursday night at the Wednesday Club Auditorium by pupils of Arno Waechtler.

The program will open with Papini's "Festival March," played by some 30 pupils, who will then appear in solo numbers.

Retiring Commissioner for Commonwealth in U. S. Points Out Menace to His Country.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The Far Eastern question is of more concern to Australia than it is to the United States, said Mark Sheldon, Commissioner in the United States for the Commonwealth of Australia, in the course of some supplementary remarks made after having issued a farewell statement to the people of the United States on the eve of his departure for his own country recently.

He pointed out that the Australian continent, one-tenth larger than the United States and having a population about the size of that of

STRALIA CONCERNED OVER FAR EAST ISSUE

...tiring Commissioner for Commonwealth in U. S. Points Out Menace to His Country.

...ial to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The Far ...stern question is of more concern ...o Australia than it is to the United ...tates, said Mark Sheldon, Commis...ioner in the United States for the Commonwealth of Australia, in the ...ourse of some supplementary re...arks made after having issued a ...arewell statement to the people of ...he United States on the eve of his ...eparture for his own country re...ently.

He pointed out that the Australian ...ontinent, one-tenth larger than the United States and having a popu...ation about the size of that of Greater New York, had north of it 750,000,000 of people of different race and color. He emphasized the need of selective immigration for Australia. In his formal statement, Sheldon among other things, said that Australia hoped to retain the friendship of the American people already so generously extended to that Commonwealth.

Sheldon sailed at Vancouver yesterday for his own country. He hopes to arrive in Australia on Jan. 3. He has been in this country two and a half years and his post will be filled temporarily at least by Senator George F. Pearce, now representing Australia at the Conference on Disarmament at Washington. The offices of the Australian Customs, 61 Broadway, will be in charge of D. B. Edward, official secretary.

The chief problem of Australia, according to Sheldon, is one of immigration. He said the Australians were not seriously concerned with a Japanese question, because there were only a few thousand Japanese on the continent, and these were engaged in pearl fishing.

Sheldon said that his departure from the United States was the occasion of much sadness to himself and members of his family, adding:

"We have been most hospitably received and have spent a very happy two and a half years. My observation in this country has led me to the conclusion that great as have been the achievements in this vast republic up to the present time, and especially in the present century, one cannot but recognize that the United States of America is only yet on the threshold of its greatness.

"The influence of the United States is such that the world looks to her to render a service to the community in rehabilitating the war-torn countries of the whole world."

Sheldon said that this was a tremendous undertaking, which he believed could be accomplished by the United States and Great Britain working in unison.

Sheldon has just returned to New York from Washington, where he had a conference with President Harding. When he returns to Australia he will go to Sydney to resume his duties as general manager of a firm of importers and exporters, and other interests.

Never Before Has Any Phonograph Offer Created Such a Sensation!!!

There is really little wonder why the demand for this magnificent phonograph has been so overwhelming! This is because NEVER BEFORE were the people of St. Louis offered a bargain in a high-class phonograph comparable to the $74.85 SYMPHONY CONSOLE PHONOGRAPH! It embodies quality of construction only to be found in far costlier phonographs and is offered at a price that does not begin to represent its real value! We were oversold a number of times on these wonderful phonographs and as our present supply is not very large, we hardly deem it necessary to emphasize the fact that selections for Xmas must be made IMMEDIATELY!!! No doubt you wonder how the extremely low price quoted is possible—QUANTITY PRODUCTION, that's the reason!!! A demonstration of this wonderful phonograph in our music parlors will bring about a full realization of its richness of tone, magnificence of cabinet design and excellence of construction. The Symphony Console Phonograph is obtainable in two magnificent designs—Queen Anne (as pictured above) and Italian Renaissance. At the rate these phonographs are selling at present, a shortage is likely, and in view of this, it is advisable to ORDER YOUR CHRISTMAS SYMPHONY CONSOLE PHONOGRAPH NOW!

"Quality Points" You Should Read:

The New Symphony Console Phonograph comes in two designs, the Queen Anne and Italian Renaissance. Measures 36 inches in height, 24 inches in length and 21 inches in depth.

Both models are constructed of very thick Prima Vari mahogany with mahogany finish, double doors, silk-lined grille, record compartment with four shelves. Cabinets are fitted with full-length piano hinges and very highest grade "throw-back" tone arm, that will play all disc records.

The motor used in both models is one found only in this and other high priced instruments, specially inclosed and self-lubricating. The gears, governors and springs are completely inclosed in a rigid cast-iron box, which eliminates the possibility of misadjustment and protects the motor from dust and other foreign matter.

The amplifier or tone chamber is made entirely of fine quality violin wood specially seasoned, and curved in the shape of a horn, starting from the tone arm and ending with the grill.

Out-of-Town Customers
Can also avail themselves of this wonderful bargain. Upon receipt of check for $15.00 we will ship you either the Queen Anne or the Italian Renaissance, F. O. B. St. Louis, to be paid in monthly installments of $10.00 each. WRITE AT ONCE.

Good Stories Gathered in Eight Years as the President's Secretary

By JOSEPH P. TUMULTY.

READERS of Joseph P. Tumulty's excellent biography of his former chief, "Woodrow Wilson As I Know Him," publication of which as a serial has just been concluded in the Daily and Sunday Post-Dispatch, will be pleased to learn that he has written a volume of anecdotes and experiences covering his eight years as private secretary to President Wilson. The Post-Dispatch has acquired the publication rights of this very interesting collection and will publish it in the Daily and Sunday Post-Dispatch prior to its being issued in book form, probably under the Title, "The White House Looking Glass." Here follows the first installment:

TO one who has spent eight years as a watcher in the President's listening post—that is just what the secretaryship is—nothing more wearisome than the twaddle of professional belittlers. Of late the public has been fed up on a number of books dealing with official life and official persons in the capital. The object of the authors, by and large, seems to be a search for whatever is bad and an effort to gloss over or omit everything that is good.

The writing of these books is like painting a picture with all shadows and no lights, or, if any light creeps in despite the artist, covering it up quickly with a half shadow. The authors view with alarm; they never point with pride. They seek out the motes and expose the blemishes, and draw a veil over whatever is wholesome or pleasing.

Consider "The Mirrors of Washington," the most talked about book on the list. The author, who conceals his name, selects a few public men who have been under the spotlight, headliners, conspicuous persons who happen to be occupying the front of the stage just now. He proceeds to pick them to pieces. Maybe some of the things he says are true. What of it? The important fact is that he either does not know what is good in them, or suppresses it, or, when he does say something complimentary, qualifies the praise so as to make it appear an insult.

I wonder if the country, or any large proportion of it, looks on its public men with such criticism? Does anybody seriously think that Mr. Harding will not make a good President for the reason that he reflects aspects of "Main Street?" Or that a successful President needs must be a genius, or a superman? Do any large number of Americans believe that the late Senator Knox was so wrapped up in his own vanity that he could not appreciate the achievements of other leaders in his own party: I don't think so, and I saw enough of Mr. Knox, though not closely acquainted with him, to get a very positive impression of his modesty, amiability and sound sense, not to mention his keen humor.

In reading these books—knowing the men who are lampooned, I read each of them as it is issued—I have the feeling that the authors commit two grievous faults. First, they do not even do justice to the headliners selected for their shafts. Second, they carefully refrain from mentioning the many tremendous personalities who do the hard work and accomplish the big results in the Senate and House; in short, they don't even see the foundations in the organization which conducts our public business, but lift their eyes and see only the conspicuous pillars standing upon those foundations.

As an instance of the first defect in such literature, take the chapter on Senator Borah in "The Mirrors of Washington." He is a Republican, and I cannot be accused of a partisan attitude in his favor. Now the book does pay a few compliments to Mr. Borah, but the net impression of the chapter is a sneer. The main fact about the Senator from Idaho is that his one outstanding quality is his sincerity. It is the most interesting thing about him. It is recognized by friends and foe alike. A picture which fails to emphasize that quality is not a good picture of Borah.

The list of omissions from the books which undertake to "mirror" the big influences of the capital city would be interminable. One would think from reading them that real work was a thing unknown in our Government; that playing for effect was the aim and object of its chief figures. I want to cite a few names to make my point clear.

There is Congressman Madden of Illinois, Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, guardian of the Treasury. Does anybody write books about his days and nights of work? Those who are on the inside at the Capitol and in the White House know about it. Everybody in the House knows. Many a headliner knows that he has shone through achievements for which Madden, and others like Madden, laid the foundations.

Or take the case of Julius Kahn, Congressman from California, who works for the country all the time and doesn't "play politics." Or Dan Reardon of New York, who happens to be a member of Tammany Hall, one of the Congressmen famous among his associates for continued industry. Or Finis Garrett of Tennessee, a brilliant lawyer, leader of the Democratic minority in the House. Or James Byrnes of South Carolina, the right hand man of the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee. Are there any authors who take the trouble to chronicle the labors of these men—even to devote a few lines to cynicism at their expense?

No, the headliner is the fellow who gets all the advertising. Yet Congress could not get along with the headliners alone. It could not get along even half way without the workers. Perhaps some day a "best selling" writer will give the public a real picture of the men who do the work in Washington. If his story is as good as the work they do, it will be read by everybody of high school age between the Penobscot and Santa Barbara.

Wilson Good Storyteller.

Woodrow Wilson is a teller of good stories. He has a stock of them. To interest him, a story must have a real point; it must mean something. Merely foolishness, plays on words, slapstick humor, have not much appeal for him. When he relates an anecdote or recalls an amusing incident, it is for the purpose of emphasizing some theory or illustrating a historical reference.

He told me once, at the White House, a story of his predecessor, William McKinley, as illustrative of the democracy of our nation.

Mr. McKinley, while spending a vacation at his old home in Canton, O., was seated at his desk beside a window. Underneath, in the yard, was a workman of Irish lineage. Pat was digging with a pick, and every now and then he would stop work, light his short pipe and blow out great whiffs of smoke that floated up into the presidential sanctum. Mr. McKinley, if he noticed the smoke, gave no sign. He and Pat continued their respective occupations, each apparently unmindful of the other's proximity.

The telephone bell beside the President's chair rang out. Mr. McKinley was soon talking to John Hay, Secretary of State. It was at the time of the Boxer troubles in China, and Mr. Hay was giving his chief the late news. As the conversation proceeded, Pat knocked off his work below the window, lit his pipe afresh and devoted himself to overhearing affairs of State.

For some minutes the President listened to Hay, asking occasional questions which gave a line on the topic under discussion. At last he bade the Secretary of State say to the Secretary of War that American troops in China must protect our citizens there. In the midst of these instructions Pat edged close to the window.

"Misther President!" he exclaimed.

The President stopped short and said into the telephone, "Wait a minute, Hay." Turning to Pat, he inquired, without any surprise in his voice and with not the least annoyance over the interruption:

"Well, what is it, Pat?"

The Irishman, balancing his pipe in one hand and shaking a warning finger of the other, said solemnly:

"Misther President, don't be too easy with them damned heathens."

The Office Hunters.

Senator Ollie James, though he never knew what it was to experience failure, was an interested onlooker as the army of the shattered hopes passed through Washington in his day, just as it still passes today. He was one of my close friends, and I used to find him always sympathetic when I related stories of political tragedies that came under my observation. I had the opportunity—perhaps I should say the misfortune—to witness many of them.

Into the office of the secretary to the President came countless men glowing with high hope. A great percentage of them had only hope to qualify them for responsibility. Sometimes I would recognize at first sight the expectancy that was doomed to disappointment. One learns to sense futility among political office hunters. There were not then, and there are not now, nor ever will be, places enough for any considerable proportion of them.

They would arrive in Washington with their new clothes, their pockets well filled with cash, mostly borrowed, a little saved. If they had promises from district politicians whose word was worth nothing, they relied on those promises as implicitly as upon a biblical injunction. If they had no promises they just hoped.

There were all sorts of them. Applicants for ambassadorships and ministries, for consulships and seats on the bench, for collectorships and inspectorships and postmasterships, for everything under the official sun. At first they established themselves in the hotels, went to the theater, spent their money broadcast—confident in their hopes. Then they moved, like "The Minister to Dahomey," to less showy quarters. Steadily they went down, down, down. They stayed on in Washington, even after hopes faded. The reason was the same with them all—they were ashamed to go back home. Finally they had to get work. They would take anything. The stage comedy portraying a would-be diplomat working as a janitor was not far wrong. I have known cases quite as striking—men who came to Washington to be high function-

The Joy and Serenity of Life at 60 and After

—By—

ISAAC H. LIONBERGER, ST. LOUIS LAWYER

Far From Being a Period of Regret, It Is Depicted as the Ideal Time of Life When Prejudice and Passion Have Been Supplanted by Tolerance and Cold Logic and All Human Affairs Assume Their Proper Proportions and True Values Under the Searching Light of Experience.

A WISE woman of more than 80 years said to me on my sixtieth birthday. "I congratulate you; you have begun to live, after 60 years of preparation, and are now wise enough to govern yourself and help others. The best part of life is between 60 and 80."

I pondered her saying, testing its truth by my own experience. I think so because my opinions of friends and enemies of life and the meaning of life have undergone a marked and significant change, in which I find a distinct and abiding happiness. I have at last learned to look about me. I expect less of friends. I value them according to their merits and not my needs. I observe their fine qualities with greater pleasure, and am less offended by their weaknesses.

Knowing them to be human and that God never made anything equal to Himself, I find it easy to pardon the necessary consequences of imperfection. I derive pleasure from those peculiarities which I share with them, and do not dislike those in which I do not share. When I approach my friends I do so gladly, not only because I expect good from their companionship and the gratification of that craving for sympathy which is instinctive in every being, but because I like to be near what I admire. Some I seek because they are wise and can help me to understand; some because they are agreeable and have that charming faculty of gayety which is so delightful to serious men. Those who laugh together are very fortunate.

I think them also fortunate who can share each other's miseries. Women are best for sorrow; men for trial. To share a friend's trouble is to serve him and to serve one's self. A disinterested, unselfish desire to help another is distinctly pleasant, and no reward of industry is comparable with the happiness which results from its gratification. At 60 one can help, he knows how. Men in trouble need an opportunity to lay out their difficulties for inspection and examination. None escapes chagrin. At no period of life has one fortitude enough to always endure without repining. Troubles become heavier the longer they are borne. They must be cast upon another for a moment from time to time, in order that a brief rest may be had. It requires little fortitude to bear another's afflictions; and at 60 we live to have them shifted for a moment to our shoulders. Some day we will ask a little service of another, and as both of us understand that one may still be manly when he seems frail, no loss of mutual respect can follow.

Learn How to Use Our Friends Intelligently

So it is that we make a more intelligent use of our friends, and they of us, at 60 than theretofore. We have experience enough, wisdom enough and sympathy enough to be of mutual service when service is most needed.

To be merry with a friend is to become saner, more just and more discriminating; for a gently humorous mood dissolves all vapors, and enables us to see clearly. It softens asperities and disarms prejudice. Its basis is sympathy and by sympathy alone can we understand another's point of view. Where two are merry, the vision of each is enlarged; each sees what the other sees, and so both are made wiser. If one be moody, irrational, perverse, the other may allow for the mood, and try to win back to kindliness by pleasant suggestions or friendly raillery, and in this manner we restore each other to sanity.

At 60 one is competent to perform and allow these mutual services, because the blood has begun to cool, vanity has lost its power and reason has begun to hold undisputed sway. What we are and have we have learned to appreciate, not by common and vulgar standards, but by those principles which time and sorrow have extracted from life; and if these principles have been confirmed by another's life, and another's point of view, they afford a sure and pleasant basis for friendly conference. A common prejudice is a bond of union.

With respect to enemies, we regard them less, and are less offended by them. Their wrongs seem no longer deliberately offensive, but rather the result of impulses which to them seemed highly honorable—however, they may appear to us. Understanding the difference between men better, knowing that no two men can be alike, we begin to allow for the consequences of such differences, and do not expect an identity either of standards, or principles, or motives. So we become reconciled to all who are not positively disagreeable, either by reason of unfortunate idiosyncrasies or the hard usage of the world. If another be rude, we search our own conduct; if envious, we regret his poverty; if openly and violently hostile, we withdraw or punish, as the case requires; but without the intemperate heat of more impulsive manhood. One finds it possible even to serve an enemy, since such service is proof of a certain magnanimity in one's self which it is pleasant to realize.

Incomparable Nights Spent in Our Children's Society

Besides friends and enemies, we have for our diversion children nearly grown, young men and women whom we love naturally and now may make companions of. We have ceased to rebuke, or even advise them, save in rare instances when advice is sought, and we please ourselves and them by service, winning gratitude and showing consideration.

No nights are comparable with those spent in their society; they, grown old enough to understand the things, and we wise enough to say the things they will understand. If one is fortunate, and a wife sits near, there is a sweeter communion — quieter, perhaps, but more eloquent and infinitely comforting. We are conscious of the good she has done by her patience, fortitude, constancy and helpfulness, and offer the incense which her gentle nature craves. A bride may move one to ecstasy, but a wife moves him to a higher felicity, a peculiar delight, a fixed admiration, a gentle reverence, a sure confidence, a quiet commendation, more rich in pleasant emotion and more abiding than any youth can know. They who have tried each other and know each other may sit in quietness without ennui.

If children go to make nests of their own we wish them joy, and furnish them handsomely. For what else have we toiled the years through! Their need is our time of fruition. Gone, we console ourselves by reflecting upon their happiness, not needing to share in it, content with observing it. When trial comes to them we may console them. We also have suffered and know that sorrow cannot endure. They may believe us and be comforted.

If destiny has taken the wife whom we adored, we have fortitude and wisdom enough to understand that one must lead the way; that sorrow is the common lot; that to repine is selfish (since she at least is beyond affliction), and that others require our care.

After a while we are reconciled to grief and enter upon that long period of recollection which is the refuge and consolation of old and bereaved men. Nothing can rob us of our memories. We go over again in quiet abstraction the significant facts of a life of striving, recalling our failures and successes with moderated emotion; and if we do not grow used to loneliness we make a companion of it and seek its savage aspects. I will not say that grief never bites or worries, but I do say that we submit to its torturing without violent resentment and have reason enough to endure what cannot be helped as men should endure who have been blessed.

Grandchildren Bring Back Fascinations of Childhood

Maybe grandchildren have come to call back to us the fascinations of childhood. We know how to enjoy them without those pestering interferences which children resent. We fear less for them, and exact less of them. We are content to listen and amuse. If fatigue comes to little feet, we know how to cuddle up the small bodies, and lull them to sleep by silly stories which little minds can understand. We watch their growth and development without undue anxiety, knowing that heredity is strong, and remembering the line of ancestors from whom they are sprung. In time of illness we remember the power of nature and its amazing resources, and our former anxieties, and can console the young mother. By tact and art and patience we can teach a little, and sow fruitful seeds and inculcate wholesome hates and aspirations.

When all these things are lacking—friends, wife, children and grandchildren—we have still a sure refuge in books, the precious heritage of old men. They at least are always with us, ready to communicate; and there is infinite variety in them. We may read for diversion, for distraction, for consolation, for instruction, for every need, and impulse, and mood, turning which way pleases us, lingering by the way, stopping when we are fatigued. None but an old man can understand a book. It is neither good nor bad, true nor false to the young. To us who have lived it conveys a message. We judge it by what we carry into it. We approve or disapprove. If we cannot admire, we have courage to think our own thoughts. We reject without fear what seems false and spurious, even though all the critics are of another opinion. What we think good we enjoy heartily, not because another tells us it is good, but because we know it is. We have within us the proof.

In judging of books we do not expect perfection. We concede the right of Homer to nod. We pardon the anachronisms, the absurdities, the extravagances of Shakespeare, and blame him not at all; for we remember the audience whom he addressed, his opportunities, his needs, and the thousands of lines of exquisite beauty which his genius has given us. If we find fault with his plots and abrupt transitions and absurd irrelevances and magniloquent platitudes and preposterous fools, we understand that his auditors were less critical, that he was very busy, that he wrote for a night, and that had to please.

When he shows us some majestic flight, some brilliant feat of fancy, some soft and tender image, some piercing criticism, some sentiment which stirs the heart, some fine example of honor or courage or fidelity, some sweet instance of woman's excellence, we thank God for him, and forget his little deformities. If he was not always great, he was always great where occasion for greatness offered, and we who read and read again, and have been enriched by his power, and love best his fine instruction.

Fatigued by Emotion, We Seek Rest in Naked Truth

And so it is with lesser men. Who can understand Milton who has not known disappointment and affliction? He wrote his tract upon divorce while on his wedding journey; yet who can blame who knows his provocation? Must a generous and lofty mind, an exquisitely sensitive soul, suffer so near an affront as was put upon him without resentment? Must a poet be still in his agony? Is there not that in him which demands expression? Is he not, therefore, a poet? Must we exact fortitude from such a one and give it supremacy among the virtues even when it tends to stifle eloquence, suppress truth and smother an actual human experience? We pardon because we find a recompense for his fault in his instruction.

We know how to interpret the Doric rudeness of Wordworth's lesser lays, for we perceive the sincerity which moved him and the truth of what he says. His greater work fills us with a generous admiration; he puts a god in us, and we are thrilled by the enthusiasm he inspires. He lifts us by his power. We love the simple madrigals of other poets, and may renew our youth with delicious songs, fine ballads and pathetic narratives, so done in rhyme and rhythm that the heart is entrained by their melody. Nothing that is true, or beautiful, or melodious, comes amiss to him who knows how to perceive.

If fatigued by emotion, we seek rest in naked truth, we find it among the writers of antiquity and all the train that have followed them. History and philosophy are inexhaustible. And none quite deceive us. We have knowledge enough to be cautious, and can weigh one against another, and select the credible from the incredible, the likely from the unlikely. Style no longer betrays us. We know how to value it, and delight in it, but we have ceased to be its slaves. What we lost in the way of illusions we find in the way of enlightenment. I thank God for that which they call the critical faculty; it is a shield against the deceptions of impostures. It is also, as has been finely said, the door to appreciation. There is truth enough to approve, even after one has discovered much that is false.

Moreover, the critical faculty is infinitely alert, nothing escapes its scrutiny. While it detects weakness, it also discovers excellence. We know. We know how to approve at once the clarity of Cowley and Dryden, and the turgid fullness of Milton, for all are admirable. It teaches us to know when merely to enjoy and when to find instruction. It verifies for us the lesson taught. We may read "Don Quixote" and "Pilgrim's Progress," "The Ass's Skin," and "Faust," "Pere Goriot," and "Lear" with equal appreciation, never thinking that truth may not be variously clothed.

We Pass in Review the Literature of the World

So we may pass in review calmly, judiciously, appreciatively, the literature of the world. And to such there is no end. We never languish. There is variety enough. We may catch a vagrant thought from the Timber of Ben Jonson, or a clever discernment from the Talk of John Selden, or the aphorisms of the French, or an exquisite metapho from the Sermons of Jeremy Taylor, or a resonant, inspiring reflection from the fragments of Pascal. Nothing comes amiss. Calvin is agreeable, and so is Renan. We enjoy "Pride and Prejudice" and "Westward Ho!" We appreciate the gentlemen of Walter Scott and the common folk of Dickens; the Greek plays and "Lady Windermere's Fan;" the Book of Job and "Canford." In various moods we select what each is fed upon, and have knowledge enough to do our choosing.

We are familiar with politics, having mingled with politicians and undertaken the task of government, and can approve or disapprove men who have been great. Biographies afford an inexhaustible store of human experience by which we can rectify our own opinions. We understand what can and what cannot be accomplished by law. We watch without anxiety the restless and incoherent progress of society from blunder and experiment in betterment. We never despair and are never foolishly hopeful. Realizing the imperfections of human nature, we expect no Utopia and do not shrink from crises which ignorance fears. Wars cannot terrify us. Having lived, we do not deplore death. We see the need for patriotism, the splendid fruits of sacrifice, the refining influence of sorrow. We prefer dead heroes to live cowards, and are better content with a precious memory than a living shame.

Our daily lives are contained and independent. We may read the newspapers without being deceived. We follow after no foolish fashions, quacks cannot betray us with imbecile credulity. Good sermons uplift and bad sermons do not depress us. We care not at all for doctrine and mightily rejoice at religion. If we hope less we fear less.

Disease does not appall us, for we have lived long enough to know that death cannot be evil. We set about disposition and division of our property among those who have a natural right to it with positive pleasure, rejoicing in the good we can confer and glad to be relieved from our trust.

We are not yet decrepit. We may still labor, think, feel, watch, penetrate, master; and all the fruits of our experience are at the service of those we love. Less active in affairs, we have greater influence over them; and since ambition has fled, we feel no temptation which can impair usefulness.

Even Business No Longer Depresses us at 60 Years

In more vulgar matters there is also an advantage in being old. Business no longer perplexes us. We perceive what is practicable and what depends on chance. Those who would betray us are readily discovered, since we have been deceived many times and can tell a rogue by his plausibility, an honest man by his simplicity, and an able man by his sufficiency. If disaster comes, we do not despair, nor fret, nor make it worse by meddling; but set ourselves to the correction of what is wrong; or if it be past mending, then to other affairs which promise more.

Where the social order is disturbed, and other men become frightened, we stand apart and wait confidently, or do what is requisite without nervousness; remembering similar trials, how they were met, and what followed. We do not despair when fools have their way; nor repine because wise men must bestir themselves. Understanding that liberty must be paid for, that democracies cannot be well governed, that people mean to do what they think right, that some room must be allowed to discontent, and that all folly is best corrected by its consequences, we are calm where youth might be tempted to violence and old age to misanthropy.

The pleasures which lie outside ourselves and do not depend upon men have become evident to us by reason of the leisure we enjoy and the greater serenity of our lives. We have come gradually to regard the opportunities for happiness which lie about us; the changing seasons of the year, each affording its peculiar beauties; the enchantment of spring, and the unfolding mystery of the annual recreation of the world; the birds and their notes; the ways of nature; the glories of the evening sky; and all those marvels which youth passes unheeding and age cannot use.

These are the compensation offered for 40 years of striving and many, many sorrows and disappointments. I do not mean to say that all of them are availed of constantly, but I do say that each of them is sometimes; and that in the sum of them we have a treasury to which we may and do resort from time to time, drawing out that which serves the moment and the mood. Surely there is enough for contentment, if we will but make a right use of it. The time for resignation has not yet come.

I will not pretend that men of 60 live always in any such smug and smirking state as I have described; content with the platitudes of experience and smiling somewhat condescendingly. I know their lives are still perturbed and uneasy. Do the best they can, ancient grief and chagrins and new causes of uneasiness will come upon them and rob them of serenity for a time. To see clearly is not always to see that which is admirable, either in one's self or another. A sense of humor is not always with us. The gods alone can smile when cunning men prevail over good. We cannot always perceive the gentleman's humiliations without emotion, nor ingratitude without resentment, nor waste of power and opportunity and faculty without regret. The irony of destiny still troubles us.

We have become somewhat tired of words. There have been moods in which we have regarded our shelves of books with a certain loathing. There resides the clever phrasemaker who betrayed youth into credulous self-complacency—persuading it that it understood truth and might contain it; the whining egotist who displays his misfortunes and unregarded virtues; the ponderous learned man who prefers to understand the ways of God; poets who were vile livers, martyrs who were pretenders, saints who sinned and yet justified themselves. It is now and then hard to be content with such a company.

Passions Have Quieted, Dreams Lost Their Craving

Philosophy may calm exasperation, but it cannot extinguish discontent. Even at 60 the mood of the moment is sometimes stronger than any intellectual check within reach. It is not always good to be alone, and man is much alone at 60, and ponders much. To search the ashes of the past is to discover many a forgotten chagrin. Some undeserved humiliation will then renew its biting, and a wrong suffered 40 years ago may obliterate gratitude for many undeserved benefits. So good and evil are still mixed; quiet and agitation, content and discontent, sweet and bitter, living and hating; but we have learned how foolish is repining, and turn to other things; looking about for happiness where we cannot find it within. This is the sum and excellence of experience, that it may teach us what to forget and what to remember, and how to endure in time of trial.

At 60 I know the sun is setting, for I feel a strange serenity. Passions have quieted, ambition is still, desires have lost their craving. I no longer think it possible I may understand either myself or another. As seeds planted are not alike and each has its propensity and becomes by use of life what nature intended—or oak, or maple, or willow, and they together constitute that various forest which we find so interesting, so we who constitute society. In variety there is charm and opposition, and in these we find all our joys and sorrow.

The affinity which brings two together, called love or friendship, is but the likeness of one another; the animosities we feel proceed from differences which we do not allow for. To each anthill or hive the stranger is an enemy. We are like elementary atoms, liking or disliking, for nature has made us so. Being like, we understand each other; being unlike, we cannot.

We talk incessantly, read and listen, yet after it is over we have what we started with—opinions confirmed or shaken, magnified or belittled. What we call sympathy is but affinity. As when a wild goose whose clipped wing confines it to the barnyard, seeing its fellows flying, strives to mount and follow, so do we strain after those whose voices we hear and understand; like dogs who touch noses and wag tails or snarl and fight, so do we meet in friendship or contend together.

Age Demands Less and Is Not Easily Exasperated

I, who have been studious and know something of the world's history, meet another like me, and we rush together joyously to engage in talk eager, protracted, delightful, and at the end part reluctantly. If another who scorns these things comes in my way, I avoid him or listen to him with contempt, because we are unlike. To know the same things, or think the same things, or believe them, is intimacy. I meet a stranger; almost instantly we are friends or acquaintances. Because they rest upon a firm foundation, friendships endure. Marriages are happy or otherwise, as they are founded on affinity or likeness or upon passion alone. In time intimacy becomes impossible to those who are not congenial, however they may strive for harmony. National antipathies proceed from differences in temperament, whether climatic or racial. A shared emotion brings nations together and for a time animosities are forgotten; but when a crisis is over, the old separating unlikeness asserts its sway.

"Felicities of 60 Years" Hailed as Classic by Many Critics

A GREAT deal of merited attention has been stirred by an article in The New York Times Book Review and Magazine of Sept. 25. It came to The Times through the courtesy of W. K. Bixby of this city and appeared under the title "Felicities of Sixty Years," the author's name remaining under cover. It is probable that but for a fortunate accident this noteworthy composition would never have been preserved in type. Here are the facts of its history:

One day last summer Mr. Bixby while at his place at Lake George was visited by his neighbor, Adolph Ochs, owner of the Times, together with another gentleman who, being over 60 years old, talked about old age and its pleasures. In course of the conversation, Mr. Ochs made this comment, having reference to his own age: "I should be more interested were it a question of the pleasures of 60." This remark reminded Mr. Bixby of an unpublished essay on that very subject written some time before by Isaac H. Lionberger, of St. Louis, a typewritten copy of which he had at hand. So greatly impressed was Mr. Ochs with the chaste beauty and restrained forcefulness of its style as well as with its soothing and consoling philosophy, that he persuaded Mr. Bixby to consent to its immediate publication without awaiting explicit permission from the author. As a result there came at least 100 letters from all over the country, from men in eminent positions and competent critics, declaring the composition a classic and masterpiece, and inquiring about the person of the author. Three of these admirers are now preparing reprints de luxe of this splendid piece of work for private circulation.

Mr. Lionberger's superior literary endowment has long been recognized by the many who have heard him speak in public and still more by the few whom from time to time he would favor with admittance to his literary workshop, carefully guarded as a rule from the intrusions of vulgar curiosity. His brief treatise on the delights that open up to people of mentality (and means?) with the advent of their period of fullest maturity is replete with the observations and counselings of mellow wisdom, articulated with a truly classic simplicity and elegance. Mr. Lionberger is a lawyer, with an office in the Security building. His home is at 3761 Westmoreland place.

GOOD STORIES GATHERED AS THE PRESIDENT'S AID

aries and ended by being menials, or even by seeking the Potomac.

But enough of the tragedies! I was speaking a moment ago of Ollie James, Senator from Kentucky.

Political Arguments.

I like to think of Ollie's sympathy and humanity, but I would rather tell of the other side of him. He had more humor, more of the joy of life, than anybody in the Washington procession.

One of my earliest experiences with him was a lesson in politics. The country was in a period of financial depression, or, rather, threatened depression, for the situation was not yet acute. Everywhere one heard talk of the approaching panic. In a luncheon group, while he consumed large quantities of food, Ollie was dilating upon the Republican party's responsibility for all the ills past, present and to come. Republican ideas were responsible, said he, for the troubles in American business. That was all there was to it.

Earlier in the day a merchant friend of mine had been telling me about the panicky conditions. He cited evidence that the depression was by no means confined to the United States, but was general throughout the world. So I said to Ollie:

"But this panic is not ours alone; it's worldwide."

"My boy," he replied, "don't you ever say that; don't you ever dare say that in public. Why, if you were making a campaign speech against me and got off such a thing as that I would annihilate you; I would simply eradicate you; I would put you out of the running; I would stampede the audience."

"And how?"

"All I would have to say to them would be this: 'You have heard my honorable opponent declare that this Republican panic not only paralyzes the business of our own land, but destroys the trade of the whole world. Ladies and gentlemen, do you understand what that means? It means, fellow-citizens, that the devastating hand of the Republican party lays its deadly touch upon the universe. Its malignity is not content with the ruin of its own country. It spreads ruin to the ends of the earth.'"

A group of us were wont to meet regularly for luncheon and often for dinner in Washington. Always present were Ollie James, Billy Hughes and myself. We were given to practical jokes, and I am afraid we acted, at times, more like small boys than grown men. One evening I happened to be in frivolous mood when somebody mentioned the name of a man whom all of us particularly disliked. He was a harmless enough fellow, this object of our antipathy—a little, dried-up, cackling chap, who hung around the capital and was known as a chronic celebrity hunter.

"He is down at the Willard now," someone said. "Probably he's hanging on the coattails of a Senator or Cabinet officer, if there's one handy."

Ensued various remarks uncomplimentary to the gentleman. We decided he needed chastening. I went to the telephone, got him on the wire, and told him Senator So-and-So was giving a dinner at the hotel that evening, and wanted him to attend as an honored guest. He was delighted. Certainly he would come to the Senator's dinner.

The incident had almost escaped my memory by the time I reached home in the evening, and I was sitting in my study reading a newspaper when the bell on the direct wire from the White House began to ring. I answered quickly. Those were days when a call from the White House might be uncommonly interesting.

"Do you know a man named B——?" inquired the switchboard operator.

"Yes," I said, remembering that B——ought to be searching for senatorial delicacies at that moment.

"He just dropped dead in the Hotel Willard," announced the operator. "Somebody phoned in the message—said he was a friend of yours."

The perspiration popped out on my forehead. I never had such a "gone" feeling. I had killed the poor man with a practical joke! To the White House employe I said, my voice all trembling: "Call up the best undertaker and tell him I'll pay all the bills." That was the only atonement I could think of at the moment. Hanging up the receiver, I sat down and cursed myself. Then the telephone rang again.

"I am down here at the Willard," said the voice of Ollie James, very solemnly. "At my feet lies the body of poor old B——"

"It's terrible, Ollie," I groaned.

"Terrible indeed! Worse than terrible! You have murdered him. Poor old B——! He has a sweet old face, too. As I look down upon him he seems so calm, so peaceful. Joe, practical jokes should be stopped by law. I am sorry for you, my boy, but I shall go on the floor of the Senate and speak for a resolution against practical jokes. Poor old ——!"

He suddenly burst forth in a deep guffaw, unable to keep up the farce any longer. I had not suspected his joke for an instant, so distraught was I over the tragic end of B——. I am glad to say I have never seen B—— from that day to this.

To a small degree I evened up scores with Ollie when he showed me a speech he was about to make in presenting Woodrow Wilson's name for renomination at the St. Louis convention in 1916. In the speech he had this sentence: "The name of Woodrow Wilson is embalmed in the hearts of his countrymen."

"That's bad, Ollie," I said.

"What's the matter with it?"

"Oh, it is all right grammatically, and there's nothing criminal about it, but it has an unpleasant sound. I don't like the word 'embalmed.' It refers to something that's dead and gone."

"Not necessarily," Ollie insisted. "Daniel Webster used it in summing up in a famous murder case." He apparently liked that sentence and didn't want to lose it. "Let's look in the dictionary."

We chased down the word and found the definition, "Embalm, to preserve a dead thing by using herbs." Ollie looked hurt. "I suppose I must cut it out," he sighed. "You've subsidized the dictionary."

DANDRUFF SOON RUINS THE HAIR

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

A Gift That Grows in Value

Christmas and New Year's gift lists are now being prepared. Each year the increasing popularity of electric service makes electric appliances a larger factor in these lists. Deservedly so, since nothing made for use in the home brings more pleasure than time, labor and money-saving electric appliances. Union Electric's handsome and fully stocked appliance shop on 12th street extending from Locust street to the Star office, will afford you the widest range of choice in electrical appliances of the best types.

We recommend also, as a gift that grows in value year after year, one or more of the 7% shares of Union Electric Light & Power Company's preferred stock. These shares cost $100 each, and they are always worth $100 each—always readily salable at $100 each. Each share pays its owner $7 a year in cash dividends—$1.75 January 1, $1.75 April 1, $1.75 July 1, and $1.75 October 1. Dividends are paid by check, cashable at any bank.

Many of our friends here at home are buying these shares on monthly payments—a first payment of $11 and nine additional payments of $10 each, with their electric service bills. The Company allows them 7% interest on their monthly payments, when the last payment is made. Thereafter they become voting shareholders in the Company and draw regular quarterly cash dividends.

Many of these shares have been bought by parents for children, as a means of accumulating a college fund, or a fund with which to start business when they are grown. The permanency, solidity, steady growth and prosperity of St. Louis' great central station electric service institution makes its preferred shares an ideally safe investment for these purposes.

RESULTS IN MISSOURI OF TUBERCULOSIS FIGHT

Death Rate in State Said to Have Been Reduced One-Third in Ten Years.

The tuberculosis death rate in Missouri has been reduced one-third in the last 10 years, says Dr. Walter McNab Miller, executive secretary of the Missouri Tuberculosis Association, making an annual economic saving to the State of approximately $15,000,000. This estimate is based on the wage scale and prices of the year 1920, Dr. Miller says, and represents a continuous fight against tuberculosis in the entire State by local and State health agencies and individuals.

In 1920 about 3600 persons in Missouri died of tuberculosis, or about 106 persons to every 100,000 population, thus making an actual money loss of nearly $25,000,000. This shows, Dr. Miller says, that the fight against tuberculosis is not merely a humanitarian project. It is a question of business and industrial importance to the State and one which affects every individual directly or indirectly.

The fight against tuberculosis in Missouri, Dr. Miller says, has been conducted entirely along educational lines. Almost no relief or preventive work has been done by the State organizations and the results have been largely a matter of the effect of the educational work on the mind and practices of the people toward whom this education has been directed. Legislative work looking to the reorganization of the administration of the State Health Department and county health service, the organization of a child hygiene department in the State Board of Health, enactment of physical education bills for medical supervision of school children, and similar efforts have constituted a large part of the ten years' fight which, it is believed, has brought about the reduction of the death rate.

The Missouri Tuberculosis Association is one of the 3000 organizations affiliated with the National Tuberculosis Association. A. A. Speer of Jefferson City is the president, and the members of the Board of Directors are from all parts of the State. Headquarters of the organization are in St. Louis. The Missouri Tuberculosis Association is conducting a State-wide sale of Christmas seals through the schools of Missouri, particularly in small towns and rural communities, for the two-fold purpose of educational work and at the same time raising funds to finance next year's program. In this campaign it is assisted by the State Department of Education, the Americanization Committee of the American Legion of Missouri, and the Federated Women's Clubs of Missouri.

Play for Benefit of Lutheran Home.

Members of the choir of the Grace Lutheran Church, Garrison and St. Louis avenues, will present a play entitled "What's Next," at Holy Cross Hall, Miami and Ohio avenues, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, for the benefit of the Lutheran Convalescent Home.

DANDERINE GROWS LONG, THICK HAIR

35-cent Bottle Stops Hair Falling Out—Ends Dandruff

Ten minutes after using Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous and just twice as abundant.

NEW RESERVE CORPS RULE FOR CHAPLAINS

Members of Profession, Without Military Training, Now May Get Commissions.

Members of the clerical profession, who have had neither previous military training or service, are now eligible for the first time for commission as chaplains in the Officers' Reserve Corps of the United States Army.

Previously a clergyman to be eligible for commission in the Officers' Reserve Corps must have served as a chaplain during the world war.

The requirements for appointments as chaplains now are citizenship in the United States or the Philippine Islands, between 21 and 60 years of age, duly accredited by some religious organization and with two years' practical experience in ministerial work. An examination comprising a general knowledge of the principles of education, economics, sociology and a thesis on some phase of psychology relating to the work of the ministry is required of those without military service in the world war. The authorized grades in which appointments may be made in the chaplains' section of the Officers' Reserve Corps are First Lieutenant to Lieutenant-Colonel; and promotions may be made after a commission has been held for one year in the lower grade.

So far as practicable, chaplains will be assigned to units of the reserve corps in the locality of their places of residence. And a chaplain in the reserve corps also may hold a commision in the National Guard without vacating his reserve corps commission. No reserve chaplain may be employed on active duty for more than 15 days without his own consent except in time of national emergency expressedly declared by Congress.

When on active duty status a chaplain of the Officers' Reserve Corps will receive the same pay and allowances as officers of the regular army of the same grade and length of service, also mileage from home to first station and from last station to his home; but shall not be entitled to retirement and retired pay.

The purpose of the Officers' Reserve Corps is to provide a reserve of officers of all branches and departments of the military service, including chaplains for its various organizations, that will permit a complete and immediate mobilization in event of a national emergency.

The prescribed duties of army chaplains are closely analagous to those performed by clergymen in civil communities, modified only by the conditions of military service. Vacancies exist at this time for chaplains in the Officers' Reserve Corps in many parts of the United States and those interested may apply to the Adjutant-General of the army or to the Chief of Chaplains for blank forms of application or information desired.

PARIS HAS ANOTHER ARGUMENT OVER MUSIC OF MARSEILLAISE

Icelandic Scholar Says Melody Was Plagiarized From a German Cantata.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—A new discussion is on as to who composed the music of the French national anthem, "La Marseillaise." The general supposition is that Rouget de Lisle, a Captain of engineers in the French army, wrote both words and music in a fit of enthusiasm during the night of April 24, 1792.

An Icelandic scholar, Gudbrand Vigfusson, declares that neither tune nor text were original with De Lisle. The melody, he says, was in the main contained in a German Christmas cantata, which in turn had plagiarized from an oratorio, "Esther," by Grison. Corresponding words, it is claimed, are to be found in Racine's "Athalie."

The first Strasbourg edition of "La Marseillaise," it is pointed out, does not bear De Lisle's name, as if he were unwilling to claim an honor that was not his. One of the earliest articles on the anthem, in the Chronique de Paris of 1792, credits only the words to De Lisle.

32,000 DAFFODIL BULBS GIVEN TO NEW YORK CITY SCHOOLS

New Resident Duplicates Order Already Placed for Narcissus Sets; Medals for Pupils.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Over 200 public schools in New York City received last week a gift of 32,000 Von Sion daffodil bulbs. This gift to the schools, which had ordered narcissus bulbs earlier in the season through the School Garden Association, was made by J. Keur of Hillegom, Holland, who has recently become a resident of this city.

Keur was impressed by a published account describing the large response of the schools to a call for bulb culture by Dr. Gustave Straubenmuller, president of the School Garden Association. Keur immediately offered to duplicate free the narcissus order with daffodils.

The Children's Narcissus Show, announced for Dec. 8, was withdrawn. A school narcissus show will be held by each school whenever the principal finds the plants in his school in the best condition for exhibit. The School Garden Association will give to each school holding a narcissus show three of its new medals, one silver and two bronze.

What Is Christmas Without the Sarola THE MASTER PHONOGRAPH

$5 DOWN — $1 WEEKLY

Surely you are going to have a Sarola in your home this Christmas. The unlimited joy—the cheer—the entertainment to be derived from this wonderful Phonograph makes it indeed an ideal Christmas gift! ! ! The Sarola, from a point of construction, tone quality, appearance and value, is absolutely in a class by itself. With the Sarola in your home, the world's best entertainment is at your command, and the manner in which the Sarola reproduces the renditions of the master artists is so true, so natural, that if you would for the time being forget that the Sarola is playing for you, you would imagine the artist is there performing in person! The Sarola's silvery bell-like tone that is made possible by the Sarola's oval tone chamber or amplifier that is shaped like the human throat—this accounts for the naturalness of reproduction. The cabinet design of the Sarola is indeed a tribute to the furniture craftsman—the finish exquisite! A few moments' demonstration will convey to you a better conception of the Sarola's superiority than pages of descriptive matter. In view of an unprecedented demand this Christmas it is indeed advisable to PLACE YOUR CHRISTMAS SAROLA ORDER NOW.

ILLUSTRATING THE NEW MODEL "R" $75 Sarola

As we have anticipated, the new $75.00 Sarola has created a real sensation. It has met the approval of all those interested in a high-quality Phonograph at a low price. Remember—it is a genuine Sarola and a Sarola's excellence, as you know, is indisputable! Among the many superior features of the master $75 Sarola is the velour turntable, tapering tone arm that is adjustable to playing all makes of records without any extra attachments, divided record compartment, and Louis XV front and back legs, durably constructed of five-ply genuine walnut, mahogany or golden oak, measures 48 inches in height, 20 inches in width and 24 inches in depth. To appreciate the beauty of the cabinet design, the richness of tone, and the extreme lowness of the price, it is essential that you come in and hear this new $75 Sarola Phonograph marvel.

"NOBLE LORDS ARE POOR, BUT HONEST"

"Coats Worn by Some Prehistoric," Says Dean of St. Paul's of London.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Nov. 30. — The Very Rev. William Ralph Inge, Dean of St. Paul's for ten years, holds a not too reverent opinion of the Lords and Commons, which he expressed very frankly and very amusingly at the annual banquet of the Society of Yorkshiremen in London. His speech in response to the toast, "The Houses of Parliament," was punctuated with shouts of laughter.

"I am not sure we should not drink this toast in solemn silence," said the dean. "Still the Houses of Parliament are in existence. We have not yet got a Soviet Government and I do not think we ever will.

"Prehistoric Coats."

"The Lords are a thoroughly representative body. They contain a large sprinkling of fine old gentlemen with ancient coats of arms. I have lately seen one or two with coats that looked almost prehistoric. The noble Lords as a class are poor, but honest. They live in remote corners of very large houses and they wonder how they are going to pay their super-tax.

"The House of Lords also contains Generals, Admirals, lawyers of course, politicians and—as in duty bound I must not forget—Bishops. It also contains a large number of architects of their own fortunes—self made men—and perhaps one or two of these, as the American said, thereby relieve the Almighty of a great responsibility.

"The House of Commons."

"As to the House of Commons that consists of a body of underpaid members who habitually break the eight-hour day rule. I hardly ever read their speeches because, in the first place, I hardly ever read the newspapers, and in the second place, if I did, I would not find their speeches there. In the newspapers the wisdom of our Senators is crowded out by prize fights, murders and wholly untrustworthy reports of utterances by deans and such like.

"We are in the habit of grumbling at the Government, but when the question arises of turning the Cabinet Ministers out we decide, as we saw recently, by a majority of ten to one, that it is better to bear the ills we have rather than to fly to those we know not of.

"But seriously," the dean concluded, "we must all sympathize with our rulers in times full of the anxiety and strain they have had to go through lately. If we know all the difficulties our statesmen have to encounter we would feel more grateful to them than we always do."

138TH REUNION AND DANCE

The officers and men of the 138th United States Infantry will hold a reunion Friday night when the annual 138th regimental dance will be given at the Arcadia, Olive street near Grand avenue. The 138th Infantry Post, No. 357, American Legion is giving the dance and has invited every former member of the regiment and former members of the First and Fifth Missouri Infantry regiments. An entertainment committee, of which Arthur Portmann is chairman, has been formed to plan the program, which will include some typical 138th features.

Among these will be the playing twice during the evening of "Garry Owen," the marching song of the old First regiment, and afterward of the 138th regiment. This march will be played for the grand march, and when 12 o'clock strikes.

An attendance prize of $25 has been offered to the Post for the dance, it is announced. Members of the committee are Col. E. J. McMahon, William Zager, Joseph Dutton, Edward Hoener, Martin Pfeiffer, Capt. W. S. Fitzroy, Capt. James J. McMahon, R. K. Condon, Alfred Haley, Harry Dierker, Louis Hoffman, Ralph Kiely and Albert Haemerle.

513 OLIVE ST. Aloe's GIFT NOVELTIES

HUBERMANN, NOTABLE VIOLINIST, THIS WEEK

Polish Prodigy to Be Symphony Soloist—Ganz Pleads for Moritz Moszkowski.

Bronislaw Hubermann, celebrated Polish violinist, will be introduced to the St. Louis public at the Symphony Orchestra concerts of Friday afternoon and Saturday evening of this week, and will utilize as his medium the familiar Tschaikowsky concerto. Miss Cyrena Van Gordon, mezzo-soprano of the Chicago Opera Association, who sang the role of Amneris in a municipal theater production of "Aida" some years ago in Forest Park, will be soloist at a concert to be given at the Odeon Tuesday night by the Liederkranz Club mixed chorus of 120 voices, under the direction of William Theodore Diebels.

Hubermann was born in Russian Poland in 1882, and when 7 years old entered the Warsaw Conservatory. At the age of 12, he appeared in a concert at Vienna with Adelina Patti, then making one of her frequent farewell tours. So great was his success that he obtained 12 engagements in Vienna during one season.

When he was 14, he announced that he would play the violin concerto of Brahms in Vienna, and it is related that the composer went to the hall on purpose to rebuke the audacious lad for daring to undertake a work so profound and difficult. But after hearing Hubermann play it, the story continues, Brahms embraced him in public and proclaimed him a great violinist. The program in detail follows:

Overture—"Fingal's Cave," Op. 26, Mendelssohn

Symphony in F major, No. 3, Op. 30, Brahms

1. Allegro con brio.
2. Andante espressivo.
3. Poco allegretto.
4. Finale: Allegro.

Intermission.

Concerto for violin and orchestra, in D major, Op. 35— Tschaikowsky

1. Allegro moderato.
2. Andante: Canzonetta.
3. Finale: Allegro vivacissimo.

Prelude and Libestod, from "Tristan und Isolde" .....Wagner

Moszkowski's Plight.

An appeal on behalf of Moritz Moszkowski, who is ill and in desperate straits in Paris, will be a feature of this afternoon's popular concert, at the Odeon, when four of the five movements of the Polish composer's Orchestral Suite No. 1, in F, will be played.

Director Ganz initiated last fall what is called the Moszkowski relief fund, of which he is honorary treasurer. Ignace Paderewski is honorary chairman, and others associated with the movement are Serge Rachmaninoff, Josef Hofmann, Leopold Godowsky, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Josef Lhevinne, Yolanda Mero, Olga Samgaroff, Germaine Schnitzer, Sigismund Stojowski, Harold Bauer, Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler, Ernest Schgelling, Percy Grainger and Ernest Hutcheson. Up to this time a sum of $3600 has been realized.

"I saw Moszkowski again on my last trip to Paris," says Director Ganz. "His plight is really terrible. He lost his fortune entirely in the war. He must have a day nurse and a night nurse. It is disastrous that such a thing could ever happen.

"The fund has not been so successful financially as I had hoped. I wanted every music lover, every music student who had ever listened to or played a Moszkowski composition, to give $1. Subscriptions may be sent to me in care of the Symphony Society, 210 University Club Building. Each donation will be publicly acknowledged."

Doris Kesner Is Soloist.

Today's soloist will be Doris Kesner, a soprano, who had all her training in this city, and who is a pupil of Eugenia Getner.

The program will be as follows:

Overture to "Hansel und Gretel"— Humperdinck

Aria—"Roberto, O tu che adoro," from "Robert the Devil"...Meyerbeer

Orchestral Suite No. 1, in F, Op. 39— Moszkowski

2. Allegretto giojoso.
3. Andante: Theme with Variations.
4. Allegretto con moto: Intermezzo.
5. Vivace: Perpetuum mobile.

"Traumerei" .....Robert Schumann

"Dance of the Nymphs and Satyrs"— George Schumann

Songs with Piano—

(a) "Le Papillon".....—Fourdrain

(b) "The Crying of Water"— Campbell-Tipton

(c) "Robin, Robin, Sing Me a Song" .....Spross

(Mrs. Frank A. Habig, accompanist.)

"Invitation to the Dance," Op. 65— Weber-Berlioz

Miss Van Gordon will have three appearances on the Liederkranz Club program, but her numbers have not been announced. The mixed chorus will sing Schubert's "Allmacht" and ::Who Is Sylvia?" besides the "Koenigin Waldlieb" of Meyer-Alberslebeu. The male chorus will offer "Mutter," by Von der Stucken; "Hoffnung," by Boehme; "Mein Herz, thu' Dich Auf," Lange, and "O Heart of Mine," Clough-Leiter. The women's chorus will sing Gretschen's "Am Heiligenbild," Grieg's "Elfin Dance" and Thomas' "Japanese Love Song."

FORMER PUPIL'S LYRICS ON LIST

Lyrics written by Margaret de Laughter, a former pupil at Cleveland High School, and recently set to music by Mrs. Lillian Craig Coffman, will be part of a program to be given tomorrow afternoon at 3:15 o'clock, at the high school, by the Girls' Clubs of Cleveland High School.

The names of the songs are "From Sea to Sea," "A Caprice" and "Day Dreams." The singers will be Mrs. Harry Hart and Miss Lenore Rieman.

¶ This is one of the most unusual Shoe sales that we have ever attempted. It involves Shoes all of highest quality; Shoes of a make regularly associated with this institution; Shoes of excellent style and fit. A surplus stock which we have been able to secure and are now offering at far less than the actual cost of manufacture.

¶ Every woman should have a pair of High Shoes to wear in bad weather, and many women prefer High Shoes for all Winter wear. This opportunity presents such tremendous savings that you cannot afford to overlook it. This would be an excellent opportunity to buy Shoes for someone you know as a Christmas present.

¶ There are styles and sizes for misses, growing girls and women. Shoes with French heels or military heels; Shoes of patent leather with kid tops;; all-kid Shoes, patent leather Shoes with cloth tops; gray kid Shoes and field mouse kid Shoes.

¶ In order to give the usual Vandervoort service, with such a tremendous response as this sale will bring, we have planned to occupy almost an entire quarter block for the selling of this lot of Shoes. The entire space recently occupied by the School of Sewing and Dressmaking will be used, as well as a great part of the regular Shoe Shop. Many extra salespeople will be present, ready to give you prompt and courteous attention.

¶ In order to be sure you get your size, come early tomorrow morning; for although there are all sizes in several of the styles, some styles do not afford a complete range of sizes.

Sale Starts Promptly at 9:00 O'Clock Tomorrow Morning

Husband Loses "Grouchy" Feeling

Stomach Trouble Made Him Grouchy—Wife and Friends Notice Change

"There is nothing under the sun I have not tried for stomach trouble. Until I heard of Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) nothing would help. NOW I can eat, sleep and have not that "grouchy" feeling I used to have. Have recommended Adlerika to friends who are all pleased with it." (Signed) Jack Ryder.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal —matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langdon.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika I feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. S. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co. and other leading druggists.

KANSAS PASTOR FOR BOXING AND DANCING

The Rev. Earl A. Blackman, Legion Chaplain, Would Provide Entertainment Near Church.

By the Associated Press.

CHANUTE, Kan., Dec. 10.—The fighting instinct which wor for the Rev. Earl A. Blackman, the newly elected national chaplain of the American Legion, the title of the "Fighting Parson of the Thirty-fifth" during the world war, has stood him well in hand since he came back to his peace-time vocation as pastor of the First Christian Church here. Enlightenment gained in his war service created new ideas as to the scope of religious activities. The new planks he inserted in the church's platform created considerable opposition. But thus far the "fighting parson" has won.

"We have never had dancing in the church," he said. "The main reason being that we have no suitable room for it. I do not favor the use of the sanctuary in the church for any purpose other than worship, but believe the church could well have a dancing floor in a building adjacent to the church, or in the same building; also billiard tables, social and card rooms if they seemed to be required to meet the social needs."

Has Motion Picture Machine.

Blackman's church has a motion picture machine for use in connection with services. Indications are that his policy is popular. On this point Blackman said:

"Our church has outgrown its present plant. A lot has been purchased and a new building is contemplated. The church usually is crowded Sunday evenings, about three-fourths of the audience being young people. Frequently many are turned away before the service starts, so crowded is the auditorium."

The career of the Rev. Mr. Blackman has been diversified. He was born in Kendallville, Ind., Oct. 2, 1882, on a farm and received a common school education. He studied steam and machine designing in Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y.; following engineering and electrical work, including firing a locomotive; assistant engineer on a steam yacht in New York harbor; chief engineer of an interurban power house in Northern Indiana, and worked in an automobile factory at Kokomo, Ind. These activities overlapped some with farming and going to college where he earned his own way.

While attending the University of Kansas he helped pay expenses by evangelistic singing, preaching, running a traction engine in the wheat fields, private boxing lessons and selling automobiles.

Became Pastor in 1914.

In 1914 he became pastor of the Chanute Church and has held this position since, with exception of two years spent in military service.

Blackman was commissioned First Lieutenant and chaplain, and was mustered into Federal service Aug. 5, 1917. He saw a year's service overseas.

After the armistice Blackman challenged any chaplain in the A. E. F. to a boxing bout under auspices of the Y. M. C. A. The challenge was accepted by Chaplain Rexroed of the 91st Division. All arrangements were made but the bout was stopped by the "G. H. Q." It was overseas that he gained the title of "The Fighting Parson" because of his activities as boxer and boxing referee.

"I have refereed perhaps 200 bouts since I returned from France," he said. "I have a class in boxing for high school boys, meeting once a week."

Due to the opposition within his church to his policy on amusements, Blackman once each year has submitted his resignation. Last spring it was rejected for the third time and an increase in salary was voted him. This he declined to accept, however, stating that he made money in addition to his salary by refereeing boxing bouts. His new duties as national chaplain will not interfere with his pastorate.

Prominent, repulsive fat that comes and stays where it is not needed is a burden, a hindrance to activity, a curb upon pleasure, a thief of all that is pretty and graceful and sweet in womankind. Why don't you take off the fat where it shows? You can do so easily, safely and without the slightest fear of harm or bad after effects, by just taking after each meal and at bedtime a pleasant little Marmola Prescription Tablet. These little tablets are as effective and harmless as the famous prescription from which they take their name. Buy and try a case today. You can thus say goodbye to dieting, exercise and fat and get back the graceful figure and poise you desire. One dollar for a case is the price the world over. Gifts for the Home

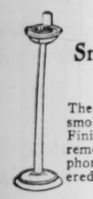
Christmas is in a most particular way associated with the home. For then is when family ties are renewed and knit the closer. So it is indeed fitting to let your regard for your loved ones find expression in gifts that will add to the comforts and pleasures of home—not only during the Christmas season, but throughout the year. And gifts of that nature you will find at our two stores—a profusion of them.

Gifts for every part of the home

Special!

Smoker's Stand $1.49



The handy kind that any smoker will appreciate. Finished in mahogany; has removable tray. No mail or phone orders—none delivered.

A reclining chair is just the thing for dad—he'll appreciate the restful comfort it will bring. See our complete selection of Royal push-button Rest-Easy Chairs.

End Table, $5.75

Sturdily built and finished in mahogany. Placed at either end of davenport or davenette it will add the completing touch of charm to the living room.

What kind of a Sewing Machine does mother use? The foot-power kind that is so tiring to run. Why not surprise her Christmas morning with a new Electric Machine? You can get her one in rotary or vibrating shuttle type, as she prefers.

Spinet Desk, $24.75

Thirty-two inches wide and made of built-up mahogany. A beauty—and with "Merry Christmas" written all over it.

A gate-leg Table is an unusual piece of furniture—unusually handsome in design and unusually convenient—and because it is unique it will serve very desirably as a Christmas gift. We have them in mahogany or walnut finish.

Child's Crib, $6.95

Built of wood; ivory, white or blue enamel finish. Two and a half feet wide, four and a half feet long. Has fabric spring. One side drops.

Had you thought of giving a Card Table? The convenient kind with legs that fold out of the way. When not in use it can be stored in a closet or behind a door.

A stately Floor Lamp, a Table Lamp or a cheery little Boudoir Lamp—we have hundreds of them—a veritable fairyland of color. And what splendid gifts they make.

A Tea Wagon finished in mahogany and equipped with rubber tires on which it rolls silently along—a gift like that would make any woman's Christmas glad.

Priscilla Sewing Cabinet, $6.75

A neat and compact Cabinet that opens up into a very useful sewing table. Made of mahogany, highly polished.

An unfailing way to gladden the heart of any woman who does her own housework—just get her an electric Vacuum Sweeper. Let us show you what work-savers these Sweepers are.

Martha Washington Sewing Table, $16.75

Appealingly quaint and decorative — useful, too. A gift that any woman will cherish. Beautifully finished in mahogany.

And you'll find a lot of things here that the youngsters will hail with cries of happiness—Go-Carts and Carriages for little sister's dollies—Chairs and Rockers for children's use—Doll Furniture, too—and a hundred other things.

Sewing Cabinet $6.50

Perhaps mother has been wishing for just such a handy Cabinet. It's twenty-five inches high and finished in mahogany.

Public Library Building, Better Sewers and Garbage Disposal System Three Most Urgent.

PEOPLE'S VIEWS FROM QUESTIONS

Recommendations of Committee Include One for Community Council to Work for Public Welfare.

The findings of a civic and social survey of Webster Groves, made recently by a committee representing various organizations, were reported at a mass meeting held last night in the Webster Groves High School auditorium. The survey was in charge of Bessie A. McClenahan, assistant director of the Missouri School of Social Economy, and representative of the Southwestern Division, American Red Cross.

Probate Judge Sam D. Hodgdon was chairman of the Survey Committee, and of the Subcommitte on Community. Other subcommittee chairmen were: Family and Child Welfare, Mrs. G. W. Adams; Health, Dr. Irene Blanchard; Education, Frank Hamsher; Industries, A. K. Evans; Recretation, Roger P. Annan; Finance, C. E. King; Publicity, ANan Clark; Canvassing, the Rev. Dwight Bradley.

Community Council Urged.

The principal needs of Webster Groves, as set forth by Miss McClenahan in a summary of the survey, are a public library building, or a municipal building of which the library shall be a part; a better sewer system, and a practical plan for garbage disposal. The report recommends, for the accomplishment of these and other civic objects, the formation of a Community Council, which shall represent all organizations and interests in the community, and which shall superintend the welfare, health, recreation and civic interests of the city, without affecting the autonomy of any organization.

What the people of Webster Groves think the community needs, is shown by a tabulation of answers received to the question, "What are the greatest needs in Webster?" Of the answers, 253 mentioned a public library, 182 good streets, 156 better sewers, 156 a swimming pool, 137 kindergartens, 125 better street car service, 115 a garbage collection system, 97 a community house, 84 a Y. M. C. A building, 78 parks and playgrounds, and 8 a boulevard parkway on Shady avenue.

The summary of the survey is as follows:

THE CITY.

Incorporated April 2, 1896; commission form of Government; 1920 census shows population as 9474, estimate from recent house-to-house canvass, 10,123.

Municipal income last year, $108,829.96; expenditures, $112,404.15; deficit met from preceding year's surplus. Assessed valuation of real estate, $6,383,360, personal property, $1,322,410; total, $7,705,770. Net bonded indebtedness, $100,000; property owned by city valued at more than $250,000; possible bonded indebtedness under constitutional limitations, 5 per cent of assessed valuation, or $375,288.50.

City owns its water mains, buys water supply from the West St. Louis Water and Light Co.; cost last year, $32,272.17; collected for water charges, $44,452.35, surplus going to maintenance of Fire Department, for which general revenue does not suffice. No money for maintenance of a public library; city contributes $240 a year to library conducted by the Monday Club.

ORGANIZATIONS.

Churches: Protestant (white), 12; Roman Catholic, 1; negro congregations, 4. Membership of Protestant white churches, 4478; capacity of church auditoriums, 3575; average Sunday morning attendance, 2104, or 47 per cent of membership. Figures for Catholic and negro churches not obtained.

Adult organizations, including churches and church auxiliary bodies, 150; membership, 12,797; children's organizations, 71; membership, 4332; total, 221 organizations, 17,219 members; many duplications in this membership total.

HEALTH.

Death rate, 10.7 per 1000 population; average for the United States is about 15. Birth rate, 15.83 per 1000; average for the United States is 22. Low death rate partly due to large ratio of young people in population, but this should also have meant a higher birth rate than the one shown.

LIQUOR RETURNED BECAUSE RAID WAS MADE AT NIGHT

Michigan Law Prohibits Raids at Night Unless Warrants Call for Them, Judge Holds.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 10.—If any good Detroiter wants to make himself a batch of home brew or run a few quarts of old-fashioned hooch into the United States from Canada it is all right and he isn't violating the law—if he does it at night.

In substance, that is the ruling of Judge Arthur J. Tuttle in the case of John Sarvis, who was arrested on a charge of violating the prohibition law. Judge Tuttle ruled that the search of Sarvis' home was illegal because it was made at night.

Sarvis was arrested by prohibition officers who found a quantity of whisky in his home. Judge Tuttle ruled that the officers must be governed by the general laws of the State, which apply to search and seizure. Under this provision the Judge says it has been held time and again that seizure must be made in the daytime unless a warrant states that such a search and seizure may be made at night.

This ruling has called forth a storm of protest from the police and Federal liquor agents.

The Judge ruled that all searches for contraband liquor must be made in the daytime unless the warrant specifically states that search may be made at night.

Asked to explain his ruling, Judge Faust said that Michigan statutes on prohibition are silent as to the time a search and seizure may be made and in the absence of such a provision the officers must be governed by the general laws of the State, which apply to search and seizure. Under this provision the Judge says it has been held time and again that seizure must be made in the daytime unless a warrant states that such a search and seizure may be made at night.

This ruling has called forth a storm of protest from the police and Federal liquor agents.

Unequalled in Value!

Compare Lyon & Healy Reproducing Piano With Others at Double, or More!

The piano trade is amazed at this instrument! It admires its supreme quality. It marvels at its low price!

"How can you do it?" is the question on every hand. A natural one, to be sure. The answer lies in Lyon & Healy's vast resources. In their long experience in the development of fine musical instruments. In their earnest desire, now that they have perfected this magnificent Reproducing Piano, to bring it at once within the reach of as many music lovers as possible.

The Piano Incomparable

While the trade marvels at the value, you will marvel at the instrument itself! You will hardly believe that such artistic playing can be automatic. That it is impossible to tell when the great artist plays and when the piano alone reproduces his art!

The beautiful grand model of the Lyon & Healy Reproducing Piano is proportioned to the moderate-sized home. It takes but little more space than an upright.

This Reproducing Piano is first an instrument of superb tone and exquisite beauty—the famous Lyon & Healy Piano. All that you could desire in a piano is here!

In this distinguished instrument has been incorporated a new perfected reproducer. There is no change in the piano's action when you wish to play it yourself. But a new delight has been added. For now you can enjoy, at will, the playing of the greatest pianists!

A New Home Entertainment

Hear the world's foremost pianists in your own home! Paderewski, Hofmann, Bauer, and many more—or, when you choose, the best players of popular music—always ready to entertain you and your guests. Not a mere "mechanical" imitation of their playing. Their own actual touch on the keys, reproduced with perfect fidelity! Every shade of expression brought out, just as if the artists themselves sat before you! You can feel their personality at the piano.

The great Paderewski is but one of many famous piano virtuosi whose art you may enjoy through the Lyon & Healy Reproducing Piano. Or, when you prefer, the cleverest players and composers of popular music will entertain you.

More truly, more perfectly even than the finest phonograph reproduces the human voice, is the pianist's playing duplicated by the Lyon & Healy Reproducing Piano.

This Test Is Convincing

A skilled pianist plays part of a selection. The Lyon & Healy Reproducing Piano takes it up. Artist and Piano alternate. You cannot tell which is playing! So perfect, so artistic, is the reproduction.

Ask us for a demonstration of this superb instrument. Learn for yourself what unique pleasure it can give. No obligation. It may be had in beautiful Apartment Grand and attractive upright models at prices that make it the greatest value in the piano world. A strong statement—but easy to prove! Just compare this Lyon & Healy Reproducing Piano, in upright models at $1,100 and $1,140, in grands at $1,950 and $2,000, with the most costly instruments selling at $4,000 and upwards, and judge for yourself!

Come in tomorrow to hear it.

100 NEW BIG BROTHERS OBTAINED LAST WEEK

Appeal for $25,000 to Give Boys Chance in Life Is Sent Out.

About 100 new Big Brothers have been obtained in the last week through the appeals of a number of speakers at various meetings and luncheons of civic organizations, when the work of the Big Brother Organization of St. Louis was presented. Rowland C. Sheldon of New York City, who is executive secretary of the Big Brother and Big Sister International Federation, was one of the speakers.

The St. Louis organization is conducting its annual budget campaign, and it is hoped to raise $25,000 to carry on and enlarge the work next year. Letters have been sent to former contributors and appeals made to the general public for subscriptions. S. G. Sutherland is chairman of the committee in charge of the budget week, Thomas C. Hennings, vice president of the Mercantile Trust Company, is president of the Big Brother Organization, Martin J. Collins, vice president, Pierce D. Killilan, treasurer, and Milton L. Daugherty, general secretary. David Berger, Richard Murphy, W. C. Ayer, Karl Vetsburg also are on the board of directors. The headquarters are in the Rialto Building.

The one aim of the Big Brother Organization is to see that boys get a chance in life, and that no boy, for the lack of a friend, is allowed to slip in delinquency and crime. Boys who are on the way to become gangsters are directed into wholesome channels of life. Boys who come before the Juvenile Courts are paroled to the Big Brothers, helped to find jobs and aided in their efforts to go straight, and boys dismissed from the Bellefontaine Farms are given a new start. No Big Brother spends money for his little brother, unless in case of emergency. He is an advisor and a "pal."

In the last six years, the Big Brother Organization of St. Louis has aided 3821 boys who have been started on the way to useful citizenship and happiness. It is estimated the average cost of salvaging a youth is $14.75.

BOXING TEACHES LIFE'S LESSONS, SAYS DEAN OF MANCHESTER

"Sport Makes Man Keep His Temper, Take Hard Knocks and Exercise Self-Control."

MANCHESTER, Eng., Nov. 30.—The Very Rev. Joseph Gough McCormick, Dean of Manchester, may not be a militant churchman, but he is a keen enthusiast on boxing. He attended a sparring contest at the Stockport Armory recently and made a little speech between bouts.

"I am greatly interested in all healthy sport," said the Dean. "I am proud of the name McCormick, and I have soon to meet 'Boy' McCormick, who is a fine fighter and a good boxer, full of pluck.

"I consider boxing one of the finest sports in existence. In the ring men learn that they can do no good unless they keep their tempers, take hard knocks and exercise self-control as well as skill. These are the lessons which play a great part in the affairs of life."

Dean McCormick presented the cup to the winner of the 117-pound contest, in the 117-pound class. This reverend admirer of sport is a son of a clergyman, married the daughter of a clergyman, he has much aristocratic blood in his veins, and was chaplain to the King in 1918. He is in the prime of life, 47, and he played cricket on the Norfolk County eleven for years.

EDUCATION.

Modern high school building, five grade schools, including one for negro children. High school has gymnasium and athletic field; two grade schools have gymnasium-assembly rooms. Domestic Science and Manual Training classes. Three kindergartens, financed by Parent-Teachers' Association and by tuitions, under school supervision. One eighth-grade, fully accredited Catholic Parochial School; one Catholic academy for girls; three private schools for young children.

Public library, housed by Monday Club, open only 10 hours a week.

RECREATION.

All the churches supply some social activities. Schools are used as social centers. Armory, on high school grounds, has capacity of 1500. Four assembly rooms, privately owned, besides Masonic Temple and Knights of Columbus clubhouse. A moving picture theater, open every weekday night. A. Y. W. C. A., with a girls' worker; a local Boy Scouts' Council, with paid scout executive and training school for scout masters. Many social affairs, but a lack of community recreation events.

FAMILY AND CHILD WELFARE.

American Red Cross local budget last year $7200, this year $8400; it is the community agency for all family work. Last year it aided 456 individuals, including 164 children under 16. Family problems dealt with include sickness, unemployment, widowhood, desertion, nonsupport, old age and shiftlessness. This work supplemented by local truant officer, and county juvenile court at Clayton. Report recommends that the Red Cross nurse be made truant officer, with authority of a probation officer of the Juvenile Court.

ST. LOUIS WAS SIXTH AMONG CITIES IN 1880

Has Been Fourth Three Times, Fifth Once and Eighth in 1850 and 1860.

In the last eight censuses, St. Louis once before has had its present rank, sixth place among the cities of the United States, and has been fourth three times, fifth once and eighth twice.

This is shown in a comparative table of the largest 50 cities, covering the censuses of 1850 to 1920 inclusive, which appears in the United States Census Bureau's report on population, lately issued by the Government Printing Office.

In 1850, St. Louis was eighth with a population of 77,860. Three cities ahead of St. Louis were New York, with 515,547, and Baltimore, Boston, Philadelphia, New Orleans, Cincinnati and Brooklyn. In ninth place was Spring Garden, Pa., which in the eleventh and twelfth positions were held by Northern Liberties, Pa., and Kensington, Pa. These three communities were annexed before the 1860 census, to the city of Philadelphia, which with this accession, jumped from fourth to second place. Chicago, in 1850, was twenty-fifth city, with 29,963 inhabitants; Detroit was in thirty-first place, with 21,019, and Cleveland was forty-third, with 17,034.

In 1860, St. Louis was again eighth, with 160,773, but Chicago was in ninth place, with 109,260. Baltimore, New Orleans and Cincinnati were still ahead of both St. Louis and Chicago.

In 1870, St. Louis was fourth, being led only by New York, Phi

The 1880 census brought the drop of St. Louis to sixth place, with Chicago in fourth place, led by New York, Philadelphia and Brooklyn. Boston was fifth. In 1890, St. Louis passed ahead of Boston into fifth place, but Chicago was second, having passed the million mark. In 1900, because of the absorption of Brooklyn into Greater New York, St. Louis moved up into fourth place. In that year and in 1910, the first five were New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis and Boston.

Last year, as is readily remembered, Detroit and Cleveland passed ahead of St. Louis and Boston, leaving St. Louis in sixth and Boston in seventh place.

HOW WILL THEY CROSS THE BIG CHASM?

Come, let us build them a bridge!

Is your life insurance all payable in a "lump sum?" If so, when that ready cash is gone, and your family has reached the end of immediate resources, will they have to face that yawning unbridged chasm?

Your helpmate who has come all the way with you thus far through life, and has helped you fight your way through the dark places—the little tots that have brought so much joy and gladness in your home—are today depending implicitly upon you. Will you let them suffer bitter disappointment in the tomorrow, when they have reached the end of their immediate resources?

Come, let us together build them a bridge, strong and dependable, that will certainly carry them across to a Permanent Income. It means comfort, care and protection for the mother—education and future opportunities for the little ones.

Our Special Monthly Income Policy provides a monthly check each month "as long as they may live." Our Income Check begins when your salary check stops.

"—and they have got to have an income to live."

You will be surprised how a comparatively small outlay will provide an income lasting through the critical educational period of the children. Is not the guarantee of the education and future of your children one of the biggest things in your life?

Our monthly income policy makes secure the future of your family. It provides "that income which they must have to live."

PRINCETON CLUB TO PRESENT MUSICAL COMEDY HERE DEC. 22

The Triangle Club of Princeton University will present a musical comedy, "Espagnola," which is entirely the work of Princeton undergraduates, at the Odeon, Dec. 22, under the auspices of the Princeton Alumni of St. Louis.

The libretto is by J. Russell Forgan and the music by Louis E. Tilden, both seniors, and the orchestra director is F. T. Corbett, another senior. About 100 students comprise cast, orchestra, chorus and ballet, and the entire production is under the direction of Dr. Donald Clyde Stuart, head of the department of music and dramatic art.

The scenery and costumes were designed by students, and the actual building of the settings is being done by men in the university's technological department.

for soap and water when you wash your face. They invariably cause chapped skin, chapped lips and give your complexion a rough appearance. To avoid this, use a good cleansing cream instead of soap and water.

Night and morning cleanse your face, neck, hands and arms with Liska cold cream for a few minutes, then wipe off the superfluous cream with a soft cloth. Note how thoroughly it cleanses the skin. If you will follow this advice you won't have a chapped skin all winter, and your complexion and skin will be soft and velvety, and as beautiful as a rose.

There is no better cleansing cream than Liska cold cream, which can be purchased at toilet counters everywhere. If your druggist does not carry it ask him to get it for you. It's wonderful for cleansing the skin and protecting the skin from exposure to sun and wind.

It is put up in large tubes, the only sanitary way. You will never know what real skin comfort is until you have tried Liska cold cream, and if you don't like it better than any cream you have ever used, insist on the refund of your money. Then you practically get a free trial, Liska costing you a penny if you are not pleased.

It is only under the above guarantee of the toilet counters of all department stores and druggists and in this city by Scott-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Stix, Baer & Fuller, and the Enderle Drug Co.

DR. BUTLER ASSAILS "CLASS GOVERNMENT"

Head of Columbia University Says Established Knowledge "Has Vanished Completely."

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—The diseases and growing pains of democracy must be dealt with as such and the American people are called upon to lead the way in carrying forward democracy to a condition of permanent and sturdy health, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, told the members of the Illinois Bar Association here tonight.

"This cannot be done," Dr. Butler continued, "unless the American people are prepared to rise above the smallness, the selfishness that are now so much in evidence. To return to autocracies or to conscious oligarchies would be quite impossible.

"Ignorance of economic history and economic laws is particularly widespread. One wonders what the schools and colleges have been doing for the last half century that men and women are left in such ignorance of the fact and the laws. Senators and Representatives in Congress vote with fierce joy to impose, in time of peace, very high taxes on wealth without appearing to realize by this diminishing the amount of productive capital they are depriving the farmer of his market, the wage-worker of his employment, the transportation system of its freight and the businessman of his trade. Ignorance, the old enemy of human well-being, is still powerful and active.

"Ominous Signs Evident."

"There are ominous signs all round about us. The American form of Government is in danger whenever a group of men endeavor to operate it in the interest of a section or a class.

"A labor party or a farmers' party is as undemocratic and as un-American as a millionaires' party, or a shipowners' party would be. The American farmer, the American wage worker, the American manufacturer, the American business man is paying heavily today, five years afterwards, for the un-American and unpatriotic act that was forced by threat upon the statute book of the United States, known as the Adamson law. This law established a privileged class among us and thereby increased the cost of living for every man, woman and child, including members of the privileged class itself.

"The use of the power of the State to enforce some particular rule of conduct, which those to whom it appeals describe as moral, may easily differ only in form and not in fact from the long-since abandoned use of the power of the State to enforce conformity in religious belief and worship.

"Private morals and private conduct are matters for the conscience of the individual and not for regulation by some majority which, at best, can only be temporary.

"We need quickly to strengthen the foundations of representative government and thereby rebuild public confidence in it. This can only be done by attracting to the political service of the State men and women of the highest type of intelligence and character, who have no personal or group ends to serve.

"Public Speaker Handicapped."

"So completely has established knowledge vanished that today a public speaker may not cite even the Bible or Shakspeare with any assurance that his allusion will be understood, to say nothing of the great orations and dramas and poems and historic events of Greece and Rome. So long as this knowledge was general among persons called educated, it served as a binding and unifying force, both intellectual and moral.

"Popular teachers are now laying down as a principle that there are no principles, but that each individual, each group, each generation must follow its own instincts. Such teaching reduces man with all his history to the level of an animal."

FIRST WOMAN LEGISLATOR IN KENTUCKY DIDN'T WANT TO RUN

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 10.—Kentucky's first woman legislator did not want the office. She said so today. But when Mrs. Mary Elliott Flanery found that the Democrats of Boyd County had nominated her, over her protests, she desired to win.

She did win, and in polling a majority of 250 votes, overturned a normal Republican majority of 1500 in her county.

Mrs. Flanery attributes her success at the polls on her first political venture to the fact that she "knew everybody" in her county.

Born and reared in Eastern Kentucky, in the county that bears her paternal grandfather's name, she has the interests of that district very much at heart, she says. Improved highways, better schools, including free text books in public schools, and a normal school in her district for training teachers, are the improvements most favored by her.

The woman representative-elect is the daughter of the youngest son of the late Capt. John Lisle Elliott, a pioneer Kentuckian. Until 10 years ago, when she moved with her family to Catlettsburg, she lived in Elliott and Carter counties.

She is the wife of William Harvey Flanery, a practicing attorney, and the mother of four children, three daughters and a son. One of the daughters is Mrs. Davis M. Howerton of Ashland, Ky. Another is Mrs. H. Lisel Parker of Denver, Colo., and the other is Miss Dew Flanery. The son, John Elliott Flanery, is 13 years old. He aspires to a partnership in the House of Representatives.

LEAGUE FOR HARD OF HEARING TO SEEK MORE MEMBERS

Organization Has As Its Object the Encouragement of Study of Lip-Reading.

A membership campaign will be launched by the local branch of the League for the Hard of Hearing at a meeting to be held Friday night at the Central Institute for the Deaf, 818 South King's highway. Any person whose hearing is below normal is eligible to join.

The League, through the Board of Education, provides free instruction in lip-reading, and classes are held at Central High School Tuesday and Thursday evenings of each week from 7:30 to 9:30. There also is an employment bureau with headquarters at 818 South King's highway, and an industrial department which is working to provide funds for a clubhouse.

The League is a volunteer organization, established a year ago for the purpose of encouraging the study and use of lip-reading, obtaining employment for the deaf, preventing deafness through educational and preventive means, conserving the hearing of those partially deaf and in danger of losing their hearing, and for social service and welfare work amongf the deaf of the city and state.

Baby Specialists.

THAT there are Physicians who specialize on Infant ailments you know. All Physicians understand Infant troubles: all Physicians treat them. It is his profession, his duty, to know human ills from the Stork to the Great Beyond.

But in serious cases he calls in the Specialist. Why? He knows as every Mother knows, or ought to know, that Baby is just a baby, needing special treatment, special remedies.

Can a Mother be less thoughtful? Can a Mother try to relieve Baby with a remedy that she would use for herself? Ask yourself; and answer honestly!

Always remember that Baby is just a baby. And remembering this you will remember that Fletcher's Castoria is made especially for Infants and Children.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

The False and the True.

Advertising by the use of large space, the expenditure of huge sums of money have placed on the market, have put in your home, perhaps, many articles that today have been discarded, as you will readily admit.

Do you recall anything that has more modestly appealed to the public than has Fletcher's Castoria: modest in all its claims, pleading at all times—and truthfully—for our babies?

The big splurg, the misleading claims may win for a time, but the honest truth-telling advertiser is like the old story of the tortoise that beat the hare.

Mothers everywhere, and their daughters, now mothers, speak frankly, glowingly, enthusiastically in praise of Fletcher's Castoria. Speak of it lovingly as a friend that has brought comfort, cheer and smiles to their little-one.

To them: to these true mothers no argument can induce them to set aside their bottle of Castoria, their old friend, that they might try even another and unknown remedy for babies. Then, would YOU think of going to YOUR OWN medicine chest to find relief for Baby's troubles? Can you not separate the false from the true?

ORO FIELD TON

Why Castoria?

YEARS ago Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups were the remedies in common use for Infants and Children; Castor Oil so nauseating as to be almost impossible and the others all containing Opium in one form or another, but so disguised as to make them pleasant to the taste, yet really to stupify the child and give the appearance of relief from pain.

It required years of research to find a purely vegetable combination that would take the place of these disagreeable, unpleasant and vicious remedies that from habit had become almost universal. This was the inception of, and the reason for, the introduction of Fletcher's Castoria, and for over 30 years it has proven its worth, received the praise of Physicians everywhere and become a household word among mothers.

A remedy ESPECIALLY prepared for Infants and Children and no mother would think of giving to her baby a remedy that she would use for herself, without consulting a physician.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Have You Tried It?

Everybody has read the above headline; how many believe it? Have you a little-one in the home, and has that dear little mite when its stomach was not just right felt the comforts that come with the use of Fletcher's Castoria? You have heard the cry of pain. Have you heard them cry for Fletcher's Castoria? Try it.

Just help baby out of its trouble tomorrow with a taste of Castoria. Watch the difference in the tone of the cry, the look in the eye, the wiggle in the tiny fingers. The transformation is complete—from pain to pleasure. Try it.

You'll find a wonderful lot of information about Baby in the booklet that is wrapped around every bottle of Fletcher's Castoria.

ANNUAL HEALTH WEEK WILL OPEN TOMORROW

Program Arranged Under Auspices of Tuberculosis Society for Each Day.

St. Louis will observe the annual National Health week, beginning tomorrow, with a series of special health events under the auspices of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis.

In the program will be a dental day, tomorrow, when everyone is urged to visit a dentist for a thorough examination of the teeth; babies' day, Tuesday, in the interest of birth registration and baby welfare; "keep well" day, Wednesday, when all citizens are requested to visit their family physician and have a thorough physical examination, with the idea of keeping well through the coming year; recreation day, Thursday, to emphasize the importance of physical and mental relaxation from work; club day, Friday, when all civic, fraternal and literary organizations will emphasize the subject of community health; Christmas Seal day, Saturday, when the movie theaters throughout the city will show health slides and sell Christmas seals in their lobby; and Health Sunday, when pastors will speak of the subject of community health from their pulpits and distribute health literature to their congregations.

As an initial ceremony of Health week, the Tuberculosis Society and the city will open jointly a new clinic at 218 South Twelfth street. Miss Grace L. Anderson, superintendent of municipal nurses, will be in charge and the city and the Tuberculosis Society will be represented by Dr. Joseph Bredeck, city tuberculosis controller, and Dr. L. P. H. Bahrenburg, medical director of the Tuberculosis Society, respectively. The formal opening will take place at 9 a. m. tomorrow and will be attended by members of the hospital department and the health department of the city and officers and members of the Tuberculosis Society.

Proclamation by Mayor.

Mayor Kiel has issued a proclamation, urging the public to assist in the promotion of community health by co-operating with the Tuberculosis Society and other health agencies in the Health week program.

In discussing the value of health week, Rev. John W. Day, president of the Tuberculosis Society said:

"Five years ago there were 150,000 active cases of tuberculosis in the United States. This number has been reduced to 135,000 through an unremitting, organized fight against that disease. In the United States every year, nearly 200,000 infants die before reaching one year of age. A large percentage of these deaths are from preventable causes. Fully one-third of our school children all over the nation are undernourished, physically defective, or diseased. Bad teeth, infected tonsils, spinal curvature, weak heart, and other ailments are in this category.

"Thousands of these children are infected with tuberculosis and will develop that disease if their physical defects and malnutrition are not corrected. Through thorough medical examinations of both adults and children, many ills that are minor in importance can be prevented from becoming serious. Malnutrition can be discovered and corrected. Tuberculosis can be discovered and arrested, and the general health of the individual under examination and, therefore, of the entire community can be improved.

Organizations Support Move.

"In St. Louis, the Chamber of Commerce, the Electrical Board of Trade, the Advertising Club and other business organizations are behind the Tuberculosis Society in putting over Health week. Organizations like the Optimists' Club, the City Club, the M. A. A., the University Club and the St. Louis Club also are helping us to promote Health week and through it the efforts to prevent a more united front in the fight against disease in this community.

"The Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis is fostering Health week because tuberculosis is a direct result of many other ills commonly believed to be unimportant, and because if one's health is good, one is not susceptible to tuberculosis.

"This organization earnestly hopes that the entire city will follow the lead of its chief executive, Mayor Kiel, in carrying out the Health week program."

NEW YORK-TO-CHICAGO AIR PASSENGER SERVICE PLANNED

Trip to Be Made in 18 Hours With Fare at $51.80, Promoters Announce.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Daily passenger and freight airplane service between New York and Chicago in competition with railroads will be inaugurated as soon as planes can be completed, according to an announcement made by the Seaboard Consolidated Airlines Inc., of which Stanley E. Hubbard is president. One of the eight-passenger planes to be used has been completed, while the construction of others will be started immediately, it was said.

Details of the service have been worked out by aeronautical engineers who have studied the airlines of Germany and France. Airways to Pittsburg, Cleveland, Albany and Montreal will also be developed. The time table calls for three trips daily each way to Chicago on an eight-hour schedule, with a rebate of $1 for every minute of delay.

The fare to Chicago will be $51.80, to Pittsburg $20.80, and to Montreal $20; baggage limit, 10 pounds. The planes will also carry 1000 pounds of freight each at $1 a pound, according to Hubbard.

The Iron Food for Vitality

You need it— "The Iron Food for Vitality"

Real Raisin Bread

Add raisins to the "staff of life" and you have a perfect food

Stewed Raisins

Serve for breakfast every morning and get your daily iron this way

Cover Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins with cold water and add a slice of lemon or orange. Place on fire; bring to a boil and allow to simmer for one hour. Sugar may be added but is not necessary, as Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins contain 75% natural fruit sugar.

Raisin Pie

Also very quickly refreshed at night by a dessert like this

2 cups Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins
2 cups water
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon corn starch
1 teaspoon sugar

Wash the raisins, put in saucepan with 1 cup cold water and bring slowly to a boil. Add sugar, salt and corn starch, which has been mixed with 1 cup cold water. Boil 5 minutes; add lemon juice. Pour in pie tin which has been lined with crust, while hot cover; brush top with cold milk and bake in moderate oven until brown.

All measurements for these recipes are level.

17 LARGE CITIES HAVE LESS ILLITERACY THAN ST. LOUIS

Census Bureau Gives Figures for 68 Centers With 100,000 Population or Over.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Out of 68 cities having populations of 100,000 or more, only 17 have a smaller percentage of illiteracy than St. Louis as shown by Census Bureau figures just issued. As was published in yesterday's Post-Dispatch, the number of persons in St. Louis unable to read and write is 17,364, or 2.7 per cent of the total population, and five-tenths of one per cent of the native white population are illiterate.

To cities with lower illiteracy percentages than St. Louis are Cincinnati with 2 per cent, Dayton, O., 1.9 per cent; Denver, 1.9; Des Moines, 1.3; Indianapolis, 2.1; Kansas City, 2; Los Angeles, 2; Minneapolis, 1.2; Oakland, Cal., 2.5; Omaha, 2.5; Portland, Ore.; 1.7; St. Paul, 1.6; Salt Lake City, 1; San Francisco, 1.9; Seattle, 1.5; Spokane, eight tenths of 1 per cent; Toledo, 2.5. Forty-three cities have better percentage showings for native white illiterates, although the figure of five-tenths of 1 per cent for St. Louis is not high.

The others range from one-tenth to four-tenths of one per cent. St. Louis has a total of 4,996 illiterate negroes or 8.2 per cent of a total of 61,235 negroes. The percentage is greater in 22 other cities, the highest being 28.2 in New Bedford, Mass. Kansas City, Mo. has 1696 illiterate negroes or 6.1 per cent.

St. Louis has 10,327 illiterate foreign born or 10.1 per cent of a total of 103,490. The percentage is high for most of the cities. In Kansas City, Mo. the total is 3077 or 11.5 per cent and in Kansas City, Kan., 13.9.

Auction of Industrial Property

Wednesday, Dec. 14, at 10:30 A. M., at 510 N. Commercial St.

The buildings fronting 324 feet on both North Commercial Street and the Levee (Wharf St.) and 89 feet on Washington Avenue, formerly occupied by William R. Warner & Co., Inc., manufacturing pharmaceutists, will be sold at auction on the premises, Wednesday, December 14, at 10:30 a. m., by Ben J. Selkirk & Sons, auctioneers. The company was compelled to obtain larger quarters. The buildings will be open for inspection Monday and Tuesday, December 12th and 13th. Entrance at 510 N. Commercial Street. The buildings are numbered 504-524 North Commercial Street.

The property overlooks the Mississippi River and boat landing docks, has two loading levels, and is in the heart of the light manufacturing district of St. Louis. It is within 100 feet of the Eads Bridge, is within 3 blocks of the downtown street car loops, and is within 7 blocks of the freight depots of all railroads entering St. Louis.

The group of six connected buildings have a total of 85,722 square feet of floor space. The buildings are of brick and stone construction, are separated by fire walls, and the openings are protected by standard sliding fire doors. The property is protected throughout by two Class A sprinkler systems. Fire hazards are reduced to a minimum, with a very low insurance rate.

The buildings have excellent light, air and ventilation, and have sanitary plumbing throughout. They are equipped with a complete heat and power plant, two electric freight elevators and one electric paved elevator. This property is right in the shipping center of St. Louis, is within easy reach of both river and rail transportation, and it will undoubtedly increase in value with river development.

The property will be first sold at auction as a whole, then in separate units. Terms of sale: Twenty-five per cent cash, balance in three equal payments—the first payment due in one year, the second in two years, and final payment in three years, with 6 per cent interest.

ETCHING EXHIBIT AT CITY ART MUSEUM

Twenty-Nine Works in Color by George Senseney Show Unusual Methods of Execution.

The City Art Museum in Forest Park today is showing a collection of 29 eachings in color by George Senseney, which presents unusual methods of execution in combination with fine feeling for color and composition.

Senseney's color etchings, in which he combines the resources of both the painter and the etcher, are not to be confused with "colored etchings" made by tinting ordinary line etchings with water colors. The colors he uses are painted directly upon a specially etched copper plate from which the complete impression is printed at a single operation. This method results in a remarkable richness of color and delicacy of tone, combining the gamut of values peculiar to the painter's art with certain print processes which augment the painter's expression.

The prints on exhibition at the museum are divided into three groups, an early "Connecticut Series," a "European Series" and a recent "American Series." The Connecticut Series, many of the subjects of which are now quite rare, presents charmingly poetic studies of characteristic bits of New England scenery, streams in moonlight, snow-clad hills and idyllic lakes. Among these the print, "Moonlit Oaks," with its tapestry colors and tangle of dark foliage patterned against the sky, possesses a rare decorative quality. "On the Housatonic," though more somber in tone, evinces the same lyric spirit. "Bend in the River" shows fine handling of moonlight reflections and silhouetted tree forms.

Delicate Nuances of Color.

A small oblong print called "Dogwood," though only a modest decorative arrangement of white blossoms on a lavender ground, is remarkable for its delicate nuances of color and for the richly piled up appearance of the pigments, an effect accomplished by etching the plate quite deeply.

Aside from their esthetic qualities these prints are interesting for the peculiar technical method employed in their production. The majority have the details of the composition etched in the plate by the soft ground or aquatint method. The etching needle is employed only occasionally where the sharper emphasis of line is needed. Sometimes the skies are covered with a delicate tone in aquatint and sometimes this part of the plate is left quite smooth and the cloud effect produced by applying the pigments to the smooth copper surface, much as a monotype is prepared. The necessity for entirely repainting the entire plate for each impression results in an individuality of tone and color not possible with other forms of etching, and also serves to reduce the output of the color etcher to five or six prints daily.

Born in West Virginia.

Senseney, who is one of the best known masters of the intricate processes of etching in color, was born in Fairmount, W. Va., and studied art at the Corcoran Art School, Washington, the Art Students' League, New York, and at the Julian Academy in Paris. In 1908 he went to Europe, where he remained until the outbreak of the war, producing, during a residence at Paris, Moret and Etaples, the plates known as the European series, 11 of which are shown in the present exhibition at the museum.

Among the old world subjects of this series are "Moret," "Snow," "Porte de Bourgogne," "The Mill, Orvanne," "Court of the Greyhounds," and "The Bridge of Sighs."

Most of these prints are in a higher key than the earlier examples, but otherwise they show the same technical methods and the same feeling for poetic color and romantic composition. Two plates, "Old Chapel" and "Devout Woman," show the appropriateness of the soft tones of the color etching for rendering dimly lit interiors.

Since his return to America, Senseney has produced a number of new American subjects, notable among which are "The Mill River in Winter," with its fine play of reflections and swirling water; a paletoned "Nocturne," with delicate feathery foliage and liquid sky; and the "Big Cloud," an excellent study of dramatic cloud forms. These prints will remain at the Museum until about the end of December.

Other exhibitions which may be seen today at the Museum are a selection of 23 paintings from the collection of William K. Bixby, a group of early American portraits and a decorative pentaptych of the life of Jeanne d'Arc, by J. William Fosdick.

PIANO RECITAL TO BE GIVEN BY 12-YEAR-OLD GIRL

Miss Ruth Napier's Teacher and String Quintet Will Assist in Program Saturday.

Miss Ruth Napier, 12 years old, will give a piano recital next Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Vandervoort Music Hall. She will be assisted by her teacher, Mrs. Mary Blackwell Stevenson, and by the Anton string quintet.

The chief numbers will be Mozart's C Minor Fantasie and Mendelssohn's Pianoforte Concerto in G Minor, for both of which the orchestral part will be replaced with accompaniments by Mrs. Stevenson at a second piano, and the quintet.

Miss Napier's solo offerings will be Schumann's F Sharp Major Romanze, Chopin's First, Twentieth and Eleventh Preludes; Mendelssohn's "Rondo Capriccioso," Scott's "Lento," Rachmaninoff's "Humoresque," Debussy's "Clair de Lune" and Grieg's "Carnival."

CONSERVATISM TO BE WATCHWORD IN 1922

What is the paramount lesson learned by the automotive industry in 1921? This question was put to its 400 affiliated manufacturing concerns by the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers' Association. A Summary of the replies has just been made public by M. L. Heminway, general manager of the Association.

The overwhelming majority of the responses indicate that the chief fundamental lesson learned by the automotive companies during 1921 was the necessity of maintaining conservative, balanced inventories.

Corollaries of this mentioned by most of the companies are the danger of over-expansion and over-optimism; the menace of "over" overhead; the necessity for rigid, but sound economies; and the elimination of "rainbow-chasing."

General conservatism in buying, greater prudence in making commitments, and closer period buying are mentioned by virtually all the executives who contributed to the symposium as last year's principal contribution to business wisdom.

Another significant recurrent note in most of the statements is the lesson learned by manufacturers that the viewpoint of the ultimate consumer must to a greater extent guide production and distribution policies. The replies are replete with phrases such as these: "Order more conservatively — respect contracts." "Quality workmanship at fair prices." "Keep your house in order." "Greater efficiency — lower price." "Study costs."

GILLETTE PROMOTED BY ASSOCIATED AUTO

Automobile Salesmen or Dealers:

There is an opportunity to secure a franchise to sell a well-known popular-priced four-cylinder automobile for certain St. Louis City and County districts, East St. Louis and the Tri-Cities.

This car is distributed by one of the largest and oldest companies here, and the car has never been marketed by associated city dealers.

On account of the excellent reputation of this car, the profit possibilities to an associated city dealer are unlimited.

Only a limited number of city franchises will be let. We can assist you financially. If interested, write D-348, Post-D.

Oakland Builds a Guarantee Into Every Oakland Engine

A number of very noteworthy features have been incorporated in the Oakland Six Motor—features new, original and marking a definite advance in the science of engine building.

Cylinder walls are "honed" to a glass-like smoothness by a process perfected in the Oakland factory—special alloy pistons carry oil-sealing piston rings of exclusive design.

Long and vigorous driving tests by Oakland have thoroughly established that these improvements effectively eliminate what is commonly called "oil-pumping"—a source of annoyance to drivers of motor cars.

So certain is Oakland of this special construction that it absolutely guarantees every new Oakland 34 D Model against "oil-pumping" with a 15,000 MILE or not over TWO YEARS WRITTEN GUARANTEE and will remedy the cause of the trouble should there be any WITHOUT COST FOR EITHER LABOR OR MATERIAL.

Come in and inspect the engine that carries this sweeping guarantee.

NEW EARL CAR MAKES ITS APPEARANCE HERE

Clarence A. Earl, president of Earl Motors, Inc., Jackson, Mich., who for many months has been designing a car to bear his name, is now introducing the Earl motor car.

The Earl will be produced in five different body types, touring, roadster, touring-sedan, brougham and sedan. All types are mounted on a standard chassis. A touring and sedan models of the new car are now on exhibition at the Briscoe-Liberty Motors Co., local distributors.

Some of the features of the touring model are a one-piece ventilating windshield, a bevel plate glass window in the rear curtain, cord tires, front bumper, windshield wiper—all standard equipment, and is finished in a deep lake green with black chassis and top.

The sedan seats five. It is finished in all-wool blue broadcloth and carries the same special equipment as the brougham except for the trunk. The brougham and sedan bodies are finished in ultramarine blue with black chassis and top.

The new models are equipped with a 40-horsepower motor, a three-bearing crank shaft which is balanced statically and dynamically with direct oil feed to bearings. Ignition is by battery and Connecticut distributor starter and generator are Auto-Lite. A Borg & Beck disc clutch, heat-treated transmission gears of chronium alloy steel and Hotchkiss drive with a special centering device to secure perfect alignment of the propeller shaft, deliver the power to the semifloating axle of particularly rugged design.

VESPER TO BE GIVEN DINNER BY AUTO TRADE

Arrangements have been made for the entire automobile trade in St. Louis to honor Fred W. A. Vesper, newly-elected president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, at a testimonial dinner Wednesday evening at 6:30 p. m. at the Jefferson Hotel.

Governor Arthur B. Hyde has been invited to attend, as have several other prominent city and state officials.

The dinner will be given under the auspices of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, of which Vesper was a former president.

G. W. D. Donnelly, of the Supreme Motor Co.; H. Claude Merry, of the Wilson Motor Car Co., and Joseph A. Schlecht, of the Mound City Auto Co., are in charge of the entertainment.

GENERAL MOTORS TO CONTINUE OAKLAND CAR

The recent statement of P. S. du Pont, president of the General Motors Corporation, regarding the Oakland division of the General Motors will probably settle rumors concerning the attitude of General Motors toward this devision.

According to Du Pont, the Oakland Motor Car Co. will be developed and expanded to its full possibilities, along with the other units of General Motors.

Mr. du Pont's statement, in full, is as follows: "It is but natural that there should have been constant gossip during the past few months while automobile price revisions were under way. The policies of General Motors Corporation with respect to certain of its manufacturing divisions were not immune, the future of Oakland being the subject of persistent rumors. This division is in a healthy condition, with its business stabilized and sales increasing. The present line of passenger cars, with gradual improvements, will be continued for the 1922 selling seasons. Thereafter, new models as may be required by the trade may be introduced."

THATCHER & KERWIN MAKING AUTO LENS

The T. K. Bull'seye auto lens, which is a new product of the Thatcher-Kerwin Glass Co., is one of several lenses recently approved by the State as complying with the new State law in effect since Nov. 2.

According to W. G. Schneider of the Thatcher-Kerwin company, the new lens throws a strong beam of light straight ahead, clearly bringing into view the entire road, while specially treated outer circles cut off the dangerous side glare.

Freezing Weather Cannot Stop Buick Oil Circulation

Oil pumps in automobiles sometimes freeze up in very cold weather.

The Buick oil pump is so designed that, should the pump gears be held immovable through freezing, the shaft revolves within the gear. The heat thus generated thaws out the frozen parts, restoring gear action and oil flow to normal.

Only on a Buick will you find this feature.

CAROL SINGERS TO APPEAR DOWNTOWN

Costumed Musicians Will Visit Hotels Dec. 23 in Behalf of Aid Society.

A thorough organization of costumed groups to sing carols in many of the hotels and restaurants on Friday, Dec. 23, as part of the Christmas carol festival of the Children's Aid Society, has been effected, with Mrs. Guido Pantaleoni as chairman of the noonday singing. Collections will be made for the Children's Aid. The singers will include popular musicians, and members of college quartets, school glee clubs, church choirs and civic organizations.

Many of the same groups also will sing on Christmas Eve in many parts of the city. Each group will have a route assigned in order that there will be no duplication. Singers will stop before every house where a candle is shining in the window, and after singing the quaintly costumed bearer of the subscription will go to the door for contributions.

Many parts of the city are still unassigned, and an earnest plea is made by Mrs. George C. Hitchcock, president of the Children's Aid, for volunteer leaders and organizers of groups.

"If there were no carol singers in your block last year, won't you organize a group for this Christmas Eve?" is the appeal, and the assurance is given that the carol singers always are welcomed. Many persons are glad to begin their Christmas celebration by listening to the singers and contributing to the fund for the care of hundreds of poor, deserted and unfortunate children of the city, who are in the charge of the Children's Aid Society. Volunteers are urged to notify the Aid Society at once, at the headquarters, Vanol Building, Olive and Vandeventer avenue.

The actual existence of the Children's Aid Society depends on the success of the Christmas Carol Festival this year, and unless contributions are generous it is said the work cannot go on. There is no fear of lack of contributions if there are enough singers, so it is merely a case, Mrs. Hitchcock says, of obtaining the carol groups in all parts of the city.

The first carols of the season were sung Wednesday at the luncheon of the Woman's Chamber of Commerce, Planters Hotel, by girls of the Epworth School, directed by Mrs. W. A. McCandless, and $43 was collected. Carols will be sung Tuesday at the annual election of officers and luncheon of the Children's Aid Society at the Hotel Statler, when the Yale Quartet will give a program. Announcement has been made that the candle light service of the school children of Christ Church Cathedral at 5:30 o'clock, Dec. 24, will turn its collection over to the Children's Aid for the fund.

Correspondence Course for Blind.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—Free correspondences courses for the blind which will give them the equivalent of a college education will be offered through a philanthropic move among residents of suburbs along the lake north of Chicago. The idea of the school is credited to William A. Hadley, who became blind six years ago following an attack of influenza, while he was a Chicago high school teacher. He has been carrying on the school alone for six months and now has 60 pupils, two in China.

A THREE T

BLOCK ON LEVEE TO BE AUCTIONED NEXT WEDNESDAY

Holdings, Which Extend From Vine Street to Commercial, Are Equipped for Handling of Freight.

DOWNTOWN BUSINESS SITES IN DEMAND

Million-Dollar Transaction Reported and Offer for Southern Hotel Block Has Been Made.

By Berry Moore.

The auction sale of the extensive holdings of William Warner & Co. on North Commercial and Wharf streets, scheduled for next Wednesday, is challenging attention from interests in quest of quarters with modern facilities and from professional real estate operators and investors. The sale is to be held without limit or reserve and is not subject to court approval.

Inquiries have been received from all over the United States relative to this offering, supplementing a local interest which has been exceptional, according to real estate agents. This is ascribed to the high availability of the buildings, which are of a superior order and which are equipped on an extraordinary scale for the expeditious handling of freight.

Since the sale was announced, it is understood that Warner & Co. have had many opportunities to dispose of the property by private sale, but have declined to consider any of them.

Property Includes Block.

The property comprises a block bounded by Vine street on the south, North Commercial street on the west and the Levee or Wharf street on the east, with the exception of the south lot occupied by the building at 500 and 502 North Commercial street. The two lots at the north end of the block, a part of Warner & Co.'s holdings, are vacant.

The buildings to be disposed of consist of five two-story buildings, two five-story buildings and one four-story building, occupying the frontage on North Commercial street of 324 feet 5⅝ inches and on Wharf street or the Levee of 327 feet 4 inches, embracing a total of 87,7 square feet.

There are two loading levels, one on Wharf street and the other on North Commercial street. The Wharf street loading platform is one story lower than the Commercial street level. The Commercial street frontage is on a level with the second floor, this being occasioned by a gradual slope from east to the river.

The building group is equipped with two freight elevators from basement to top story and one electric parcel service elevator. The premises include a well equipped heat and power plant. Steam heat is supplied to all the buildings by two 60-horse power Rohan downdraft boilers. Light and power current is supplied by two generators, one being 100 k. w. and the other 37½ k. w., directly connected with steam engines, the exhaust from which contributes materially toward heating the premises at a minimum cost.

Tanks in Sub-Basement.

A sub-basement under the building at 514-16 Commercial street contains a group of four iron tanks with a capacity of 6500 gallons, which can be filled from the street level. The buildings are equipped with conveying equipment and spiral chutes.

The feature of the real estate situation is a well defined demand for high grade and old line investments in the business centers of the city. A single purchase in downtown St. Louis during the week ran more than a million dollars, and was made primarily as an investment. The identity of the purchaser and location of the holdings is withheld pending execution of the deed.

Another notable purchase was by Henri Chouteau of a seven-story building at 1918-24 Chestnut street from George T. Burdeau, who only recently acquired it. The consideration reported was $100,000. The building, having a lot 107 feet is occupied as a warehouse by Butler Bros. There have been many

A sub-basement under the building at 514-16 Commercial street contains a group of four iron tanks with a capacity of 6500 gallons, which can be filled from the street level. The buildings are equipped with conveying equipment and spiral chutes.

The feature of the real estate situation is a well defined demand for high grade and old line investments in the business centers of the city. A single purchase in downtown St. Louis during the week ran more than a million dollars, and was made primarily as an investment. The identity of the purchaser and location of the holding is withheld pending execution of the deed. He recently made a purchase in this part of the city on a smaller scale, the larger purchase exemplifying renewed interest on his part in this area.

The Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. closed a transaction involving the southeast corner of Sixth and St. Charles streets, owned by the Henry Shaw estate, controlled by the Missouri Botanical Garden Association. Details of the operation are given elsewhere on this page.

Another notable purchase was that by Henri Chouteau of a seven-story building at 1918-24 Chestnut street from George T. Burdeau, who had only recently acquired it. The consideration reported was $100,000, the building, having a lot 107x72 feet, is occupied as a warehouse by Koetter Bros. There have been many offers for sites on Chestnut street between Jefferson avenue and Twelfth street, several of which have resulted in sales.

Offer for Southern Block.

The demand for holdings in the business district for speculation, investment and occupancy is broad. An attractive offer has been made for the Southern Hotel block, while many offers have been forthcoming for property on Market street, between Broadway and Eighth street, including two corners at Broadway and Market street, which would indicate that something of more than ordinary importance is afoot for this district.

According to stories along commission row on North Third and Fourth streets, a plan is afoot to reestablish a district for commission men in the vicinity of Second and Chouteau avenue, which is served by the Manufacturers' Railway, and which is understood to be sponsoring the idea. Nothing more is available in this connection.

New Lindell Boulevard Home of T. L. Mauldin

THE new home of Thomas L. Mauldin, secretary and treasurer of the Lund-Mauldin Shoe Co. at 5763 Lindell drive, is one of the handsomest in the Catlin tract. It was erected for him by the George F. Bergfeld Investment and Construction Co. from plans by Nolte & Nauman, architects.

The house faces Forest Park and occupies a lot 100x550 feet. It contains 12 rooms, three baths, a large sun parlor and sleeping porch. A large garage with chauffeur's quarters and bath is attached to the house.

This house is equipped with electric range, electric refrigerator and vacuum cleaner. It is canvased and painted throughout.

Mauldin has just taken possession of his new home.

QUEEN'S DAUGHTERS BUY LINDELL BOULEVARD BUILDING

Owing to the constantly increasing and expanding work of the Queen's Daughters, they have purchased the "Annex," located at 3704 Lindell boulevard. The lot fronts 170 feet on Lindell by a depth along the west side of Spring avenue of 212 feet. The building has been under lease to this organization for three years, and terminated with the purchase by them of the location.

The Queen's Daughters' with their new holding have acquired sufficient ground to later build an ideal building, suitable for their growing needs.

This organization of Catholic women owns and operates the residence at 3730 Lindell and both buildings are used for boarding homes for self-supporting girls and women. The Boarding Home, the first one managed by Catholic lay women in St. Louis, was established in 1897 at 1519 Chestnut street with accommodation for 16 girls. In 1912 the building at 3730 Lindell boulevard was acquired by them, with accommodations for 39 girls. The building just purchased at 3704 Lindell has accommodations for 31. The sale was made through the Hildenbrandt & Noble Realty Co.

HOOVER COMMENDS ST. LOUIS FOR ITS BUILDING CAMPAIGN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10. — "St. Louis is leading the way for the whole country," said Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce and chairman of the President's unemployment conference, when informed today of the latest developments in the Post-Dispatch's campaign to stimulate building activity in St. Louis.

Hoover commended the holding of a referendum by the building trades unions on the 20 per cent wage reduction proposed by the Master Builders' Association, saying that this problem was in line with the intelligent manner in which the city was dealing with the whole unemployment situation.

Hoover repeated that the St. Louis experiment was being closely watched by his department and that the idea, if successful, would be passed along to other cities.

"One of the chief functions of the Federal Government," he said, "is to act as a clearing house for the transmission of initiative from one locality to another."

Reports Sale and Lease.

The Hewson Realty Co. reports the sale of a 60-foot lot at Wellesley and Waterman avenues, in University City, to Lewis Schotten, who will erect a residence on the site in the spring. The same company has leased for a term of years the business property at 1522 Chestnut street to the Haines Auto Radiator Co.

TWO LINDELL DRIVE LOTS SOLD BY WEISELS-GERHART

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. report the sale of lots 11 and 12 on the north line of Lindell drive, immediately west of the residence of Walker Hill at 5505 Lindell boulevard, to F. A. Stiers. The lot has a frontage of 100 feet by a depth of 530 feet and will be improved with two attractive residences.

The company also reports the sale of the residence of the late Mrs. Katie Wainwright Baker at 4915 West Pine boulevard, for Elmer G. Brahm, to the Hasgall Realty & Investment Co., of which Sigmund Hasgall is president. The residence is a three-story, double colonial cut stone, with tile roof, containing eighteen rooms and four baths. The lot has a frontage of 104 feet by a depth of 215 feet. Hasgall owns a three-family, nine-room apartment building at 4925 West Pine, immediately west of this residence, and purchased to increase his holdings and for investment.

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. recently sold the residence and lot 115 feet by 215 feet on the east, being the northwest corner of Euclid and West Pine.

SEVEN MODERN FLATS WILL BE BUILT IN SUNSET WAY

Plans have been started for seven four-family modern flats to be erected by A. J. Tuchschmidt on Gresham street, west of Korn avenue, in Sunset way, in the King's highway-Gravois district. Ground will be broken this week. Each flat will be the nearest thing to a separate residence that can be devised, having its own heating plant, laundry, rear and front entrances, etc., with all possible conveniences built in as part of the structures.

Possession has also just been acquired of 94 feet of ground on Meramec street, just west of Grand avenue, on which ground will be broken at once for two other four-family flats equipped each with sun parlor and sleeping porch. This latter property is in Meramec Park Subdivision.

Farm on Hall's Ferry Road Sold.

The John C. Greulich Realty Co. reports the sale of a 55-acre farm on the Hall's Ferry road, near Black Jack, Mo., for the account of Anton Stueber to Claus Schulte, the consideration being $10,000.

FIVE SALES REPORTED BY DOUGHERTY-SHEEHAN COMPANY

The Dougherty-Sheehan R. E. Co. reports the following sales: A three-story apartment building containing six efficiency apartments at 6128 Waterman avenue, for account of Lila Drumm to a client of Walter Jones R. E. Co.; 1624-26 Carroll street, double brick building, containing store and three flats, to E. Russell for a client of Joseph D. Dickman R. E. Co.; 4004 North Market street, five-room brick cottage, for account of A. C. Tucker to J. Nicozesen and J. Margaritis; 135-foot lot on the south side of Waterman avenue, east of Skinker road, for account of Presbyterian Church Board, who were represented by Albert Wenzlick, to Mardyke Investment Co.; 50-foot lot on north side of Castleman avenue, in the 4000 block, for account of City Trust Co. This company also reports having made loans to the extent of $35,000.

MANUFACTURING COMPANY LEASES FLOOR OF BUILDING

C. M. Turley of Isaac T. Cook's office reports having leased the third floor of the Francis Building, northeast corner of Sixteenth street and Washington avenue, to the Eiseman Bros. Manufacturing Co., now on the eighth floor of the Leather Trades Building, Sixteenth and Locust streets. The new quarters in the Francis Building will comprise approximately 15,000 square feet. The move was made to obtain more space. Isaac T. Cook promoted the erection of the Francis Building and leased it to the James Clark Leather Co. and the Ziegler-Frankel Manufacturing Co.

The Tobin-Hamilton Leather Co. will take over the space on the eighth floor of the Leather Trades Building, now occupied by the Eiseman Bros. Manufacturing Co.

Several South St. Louis Sales.

Tony Hurleman, 3118 South Grand avenue, reports closing sales for $21,000. These sales consisted of a double flat at 3537-39 Arsenal street for Mrs. W. Gottschalk; a cottage at 1532 McCausland avenue, to William Scherr; a cottage on Lansdowne avenue, Southampton; a frame cottage at 3219 Regal place, and 50 feet of vacant ground on Leola avenue. Several loans were placed.

PLANS FOR NEW BUILDING AT SIXTH AND ST. CHARLES

Three-Story Structure at Southwest Corner to Be of Daylight Type, Promoters Announce.

LEASES TAKEN FOR MOST OF SPACE

Chicago Shoe Firm to Control Whole Premises and Occupy the Store Room at the Corner.

Negotiations have been concluded through the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. by which a modern three-story and basement building will be constructed at the southeast corner of Sixth and St. Charles streets. This building will have a frontage of 66 feet on Sixth street and 99 feet on St. Charles street. The exterior will be finished in terra cotta and as a special feature of the construction each floor will have very large plate-glass windows, making it almost a daylight building.

James P. Jameison and George Spearl are the architects. The property is owned by the Missouri Botanical Gardens.

The Martin-Breitt company has leased the building to the Feltman & Curme Shoe Stores Co., which will occupy the corner store. This company, whose headquarters are in Chicago, is now operating a chain of 35 stores distributed throughout the United States. This will bring another large shoe company into the St. Louis retail field.

The store at 424 North Sixth street, together with the entire second and third floors, has been leased by the Martin-Breitt company to a large men's clothing concern of New York, which will handle men's clothing ranging in price from $20 to $40 a suit. The name of this tenant is withheld for special reasons.

The south store, 422 North Sixth street, has been leased by the Martin-Breitt company to the Aronberg Jewelry Co., now occupying the store at 426 North Sixth street.

SAYS ARCHITECTS AND BUILDERS COULD CUT FIRE LOSS IN HALF

Architects and builders have it in their power to decrease by one-half the $500,000,000 annual loss from fire in the United States, said George B. Muldaur of New York, general agent of the Underwriters' Laboratories, in an address Friday night before the St. Louis Institute of Architects at the St. Louis Architectural Club, 514 Culver way.

He said the fire loss in Missouri had increased from $7,000,000 in 1919 to $11,000,00 in 1920, and, in St. Louis, from $2,000,000 in 1919 to $4,000,000 in 1920.

Muldaur said the greater part of these losses were due to carelessness and to ignorance of the proper fire-resisting materials used for building purposes.

He advised the architects to instruct their clients regarding non-inflammable building materials, to study approved materials and details of construction and to adhere strictly to fire-prevention ordinances.

Moving pictures were shown of exhaustive tests of fire-proofed building materials made at the Underwriters' Laboratories in Chicago.

PINE AND BEAUMONT CORNER SOLD TO YAWITZ BROTHERS

Albert T. Terry & Co. reports having closed the deal for the northeast corner of Pine and Beaumont streets, improved with nine dwellings, renting for $3500 per annum, 150x120 feet, from the Drury College of Springfield, Mo., to Frank and Harry L. Yawitz, who purchased the same to use in connection with other property in the same block.

The firm also reports the sale of 5650 Bartmer avenue, nine rooms, hardwood floors, bath, garage for two cars, 50 feet, for A. P. Brigham to E. O. Rowse, who was represented by Kent Jarvis.

The company sold 480 Oakwood avenue, in Webster Park, a handsome 12-room residence, with three baths, on about an acre of ground, for E. C. Rowse, represented by Kent Jarvis, to A. P. Brigham of the American Car and Foundry Co.

Lots in Northwest St. Louis Sold.

The Franciscus & Kunz Realty Co. reports having sold a vacant lot having a frontage of 45 feet on the south side of Northland avenue, just east of King's highway, for the Lindell Fair Ground Co., to Edward F. Wackman, who will build a bungalow. Also sold the northwest corner of Spalding and Euclid avenues, having a frontage of 40 feet on Spalding avenue, for the Lindell Fair Grounds Co., to Mrs. J. McCarthy, who will build a four and five room single flat. The firm also reports the making of many loans for new buildings.

Drawing of Seven-Story Structure to Be Erected on Twelfth Street

THE first building to be erected for years on Twelfth street, between Olive and Market streets, where there are a number of old structures, will be started soon at 109 North Twelfth street, for Joseph Forshaw, stove repairer. Only the southern half of the proposed building will be erected at this time, and it is planned to erect the other half, on the lot at 111 North Twelfth street, in 1923.

The accompanying copy of the architect's sketch shows the proposed building as it will look when both halves are erected. It will be seven stories high, with a 50-foot frontage, and running back 100 feet, with 50,000 square feet of floor space. The front wall is to be of white enamel brick, with white enamel terra cotta trimming, and a considerable lighting area of plate-glass windows. There will be a specially reinforced concrete frame to carry the unusually heavy weights incidental to the business.

The present labor costs of building were a consideration in the decision to build only half of the building at first. It is possible that the whole structure will be put up at once should labor agree to the proposed 20 per cent reduction of its wages. The use of the present old building at No. 111 in continuing the business until the new section is built was another consideration.

Forshaw owns the lots at 109 and 111, and is using the building at No. 113 on a lease, while the building at No. 109 is already being wrecked. It is expected the first section of the new building will be ready by next April. Albert B. Groves is the architect. The investment in the complete new building will be about $150,000, while the lot is valued at $100,000.

Forshaw has been in the business of repairing all sorts of stoves, ranges and furnaces at this location for 40 years, and has a card index system comprising more than 100,000 cards, recording information as to the work. Repair parts are to be carried in stock for more than 100,000 distinct patterns. The business of repairing steam boilers and gas ranges will be developed in the new building.

BRINKOP CO. MAKES SEVEN SALES AND LOANS OF $53,000

The Christian Brinkop Real Estate Co. reports the following sales:

4977 Odell avenue, a brick dwelling of seven rooms, sold for Sarah Hollerbach to John B. Lueken.

The Brinkop company reports having negotiated loans aggregating $53,000 during the past week.

RESIDENCE IN WEBSTER GROVES SOLD BY A. T. TERRY & CO.

Kent Jarvis reports having sold for the account of E. C. Rowse, his residence at 480 Oakland avenue, Webster Groves, to Arthur P. Brigham of the American Car and Foundry Co. This is a beautiful home containing 11 rooms, three baths, etc. The grounds consist of over an acre and being the highest point in Webster Park.

Brigham, who was represented by Albert T. Terry & Co., will take possession at once.

REMMERT COMPANY LEASES STORE ON SEVENTH STREET

The Remmert Co., Seventh and St. Charles streets, has closed a lease through the Mercantile Trust Co. for the store room at 108 North Seventh street.

The company will occupy this store with a complete line of electrical household appliances, as soon as extensive alterations are completed.

Lewis Place Bungalow Sold.

The Jost-Miller Real Estae Co. reports the sale of a lot, 50x122 feet, on the south line of Shenandoah avenue, between Klemm and Thurman avenues, for Emile Cougot to Charles D. Raithel, who will improve the lot with an apartment building. Also the sale of 4753 Lewis place, a two-story brick bungalow, lot 53x200 feet, for Dr. William E. Jost to Richard Spamer, J. H. Farish Co. representing the purchaser.

1922
Will soon come with the same shortage of homes and the same demand as a year ago. Right now Mr. Buyer is the psychological time to buy. Certain prices and terms are being accepted now that will not be the question last spring and will be withdrawn as soon as the "rush" opens. It's your opportunity now—next spring, as heretofore, there will be three buyers for every house offered for sale.
GET OUR LIST.
See our pictures of each home offered for sale. We make it a point to find the home you want to buy.

WEBSTER GROVES
CHRISTMAS
Mystery, excitement, locked doors and drawers, whispered confidences, things quickly covered upon the noisy approach of little feet, Christmas morning, culmination—fulfillment. The joy of seeing the pleasure and happiness your self-sacrifice and tireless work have earned.
This brings up other thoughts. Am I doing all I can for my children? What about their everyday life? Their opportunity for development?
A home in Webster Groves, fresh air, excellent schools, churches and environment. Effort? Yes. Sacrifice? Not at first, but isn't it worth while, isn't it due the children? They should have this and more. Drive out and look it over for yourself. And, Man! You won't know yourself when you settle in Webster Groves and find yourself quickly absorbed into our busy community life.
IF YOU WANT TO LIVE LIVE IN WEBSTER
Write or phone our Real Estate Department for information about Webster Groves. An effective organization, ready and anxious to assist you in finding just the right home in which to celebrate Christmas, 1922.

Your Attention, Please

Are you looking for something good? Listen. I have a 320-acre estate, 100 miles west of St. Louis, on the State highway, which would suit for lease for clubhouse, sanitorium, or individual farm. This is a part of the original Nathan Boone grant, and is full of places of historic interest and rustic beauty.

The house at present is used as a hotel, and being the halfway point between St. Louis and Kansas City overflows with city visitors every pleasant month, and is a favorite resort with tourists. 27 acres adjoining the house is most suitable for golf links, with hunting, boating and fishing in immediate vicinity. As a health resort it would be unsurpassed, having a spring of wonderful medicinal values.

You could in no way invest the money you have to better advantage, whether you control it or share it with me. Miss Scanland, 420 Commercial Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

NEW AND FRESH STOCKS TO CHOOSE FROM

It does not matter whether you owe anyone or not. We can arrange to pay up your debts and give you plenty money for your Christmas needs to make the loved ones happy.

DO NOT OWE SEVERAL PEOPLE.

It is easier to owe one and pay back in small payments after the first of the year.

To get what you want it is necessary for your employer to know about it, because your friends have to sign your note. No one but you and I need know the deal you make here.

Come in today and let us explain our up-to-date plan. Open evenings and Sundays.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank my many relatives and friends for their kindness, sympathy and beautiful floral offerings shown me in the loss of my wife, Elzina Tracy. Especially Rev. J. H. Smith for his consoling words.
WILLIAM A. TRACY.

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our friends and relatives for the kindness and sympathy extended during our sad bereavement, in the loss of our dear father, Peter Aulbach; especially to the Rev. Father Smith, Dr. Col. Meumann Post, G. A. R., and Dr. Keim.
SONS AND DAUGHTERS.

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our friends and relatives for the kindness extended us during our sad bereavement in the loss of our dear mother, Katherine Hoffmann; especially to want to thank Dr. Vennigs, Rev. Dress, the pallbearers and Ziegenhein Undertaking Co., and also for the many beautiful floral offerings.
HUSBAND AND DAUGHTERS.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to our friends and relatives for the kindness, sympathy and beautiful floral offerings tendered us in our recent sad bereavement in the loss of our dear son and brother, Virgil Charles Kraliman. We wish to especially thank the Rev. W. E. Darrow for his comforting words of condolence, the beautiful song service rendered by Mr. Chas. Dreyman, also the officers and members of Mt. Moriah Lodge, No. 40, and to Provost-Dressler funeral parlors for their prompt attention and efficient service, the pallbearers for their kind service and the many remembrances and tributes through the beautiful floral offerings.
MR. AND MRS. F. J. KRALLMAN AND FAMILY.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to our friends and neighbors and friends, to express our appreciation of the kindness and sympathy shown during our sad bereavement in the loss of my dear husband and our dear father, father-in-law, grandfather, John H. Norris. We especially thank the Rev. F. Schroeder, Mrs. D. Scott Spradling, soloist; Ziegenhein Bros. for their kind service rendered; also the Church of Divine Science, Dr. Chas. Mueller, Dr. Will; Stix, Baer & Fuller, Mutual Aid Association, students of Missouri Chiropractic College, Prudential Insurance Co., District No. 3, International Shoe Co., Glasgow plant finishing and packing department, laundries, Ladies' Auxiliary, Mount Pleasant Patrons' Association and for all the beautiful floral offerings.
MRS. J. H. NORRIS,

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

R. C.—Watch the advertisements describing land for sale.

E. S. O.—Inquire of any druggist for information concerning the salary paid for that work.

J. B.—Consult the directories of the different cities at the Public Library for the address, or some furniture house might be able to help you.

SUNDAY READER.—The kind of paper used for writing manuscripts is a personal matter, although it should be of good quality and unruled. The manuscript should be typewritten and on one side only.

R. E. R.—To silver plate metals use nitrate of silver 30 parts by weight; caustic potash 30 parts; distilled water 100 parts. Put the nitrate of silver into the water; one-quarter hour later add the potash, and when the solution is done, filter. It is sufficient to dip the objects to be silvered into this bath, moving them about in it for 1 or 2 minutes at most; then rinsing and drying in sawdust. It is necessary to pickle the pieces before using the bath. To make the nitrate of silver at home, take 20 parts of pure silver and 60 parts of nitrate acid and when the metal is dissolved add the caustic potash and the water.

IT.—Detailed analysis of the population statistics of the 1920 census have not yet been published. The estimated Moslem population of China is between 5 and 16 millions. There are 511,142 Jews in the world. 511,142 Protestants in China. The population of France is 41,475,323 and there are 212,659 square miles in France. The population of Italy is 36,120,118 and the area is 119,632 square miles. There are 32,983,664 Catholics and 123,220 Jews in Italy. The 123 Jews and 1,530,136 others in Italy. The population of Spain is 20,719,578 and the area 194,783 square miles. The Central and South American republics are subject to Spanish influence by reason of race and religion.

ZABILEO.—Rev. M. S. Brennan says the Pleiades will be halfway up the heavens about 8 o'clock these December evenings. The constellations Andromeda, Perseus and the Great Square of Pegasus are in a line running along the meridian (just over head) a short distance due west of the Pleiades. Pegasus, Perseus and Andromeda form a figure resembling the Dipper (Great Bear). One of the stars in the Great Square and one in the handle form Perseus. The other two stars in the handle form Andromeda. Algol, in the Southern heavens, and invisible from this latitude. Corona is but a short distance from and almost due east of the great Arcturus. Cancer (the Crab) lies due west but a short distance from Sickle (Leo), and is distinguished by a bright patch situated between two small stars. This patch is known as the Praesepe, or Manger. Leo is one of the conspicuous figures of the heavens, and is easily distinguished by six stars, that mark out the form of a sickle standing upright on its handle. Capricornus (the goat) lies between Pegasus and the great white star, Formalhaut. Every standard work on astronomy has a part devoted to Uranography, among the best works are Prof. Ball's "Story of the Heavens" and Newcomb and Holden's Astronomy.

E. K. Z.—The following is a recipe for cooked laundry soap: A lye of average strength is made by dissolving caustic soda in water in the proportion of about 2 pounds to the gallon. For a beginner's trial, take a given quantity of the grease is melted at a low heat and ¼ its weight of lye is then added in small portions with constant stirring; when incorporation has been thoroughly effected, another portion of lye equal to the first is added as before and the mixture kept at a gentle heat until saponification appears to be complete. When separation has occurred, pour off the liquid and stir in the mass, heat until dissolved and again separate by the use of more strong lye or a strong solution of common salt. The soap is finally remelted on a water bath, kept at a gentle heat until as much water as possible has driven them and poured into frames or molds to set. To make a toilet so

SOME OF OUR BEST SATISFIED OWNERS BOUGHT

REBUILT DODGE BROTHERS CARS
From Us

Their goodness was proven by these results. Goodness was REBUILT into them with these results in mind, not simply made to run, but made to run so good, and so lasting, that our three months' guarantee is necessary only to assure those who are not familiar with our honorable methods of conducting our used car business.

We have a few Coupes and Sedans, 1920 and 1921 models, which have been REBUILT in such a thorough manner that you would hardly know they were not new. Your friends need never know. A new car could drive no better.

We also have Roadsters and Touring cars in various models, from which the element of uncertainty has been entirely removed.

We want to show you our cars and tell you more about them. A card or phone call will bring us and a car to your door.

TATE MOTOR CO., INC.

Bomont 1241 ST. LOUIS Central 7615

Now Is the Time to Buy a Used Car

Don't be misled thinking automobiles will be cheaper in the Spring. It is the opinion of most manufacturers that they absolutely will not. There are many reasons for this belief.

In our nine years of automobile selling we have never before been able to offer the public such values. We have the largest stock of used cars in the history of our business. Most any make or model you desire, consisting of sedans, coupes, touring cars and roadsters. Every car overhauled and refinished if necessary.

We are willing to sacrifice our stock of used cars, as we need the room to warehouse new automobiles for our Spring trade. If you are contemplating buying a used car in the near future, you will be well repaid for your valuable time in looking over the used cars we are offering. A small deposit will hold any car until you are ready to accept delivery.

NOTE THE CARS WE ARE OFFERING:

Auburn Briscoe Buick Chalmers Chevrolet Cole Davis Elgin Essex Fords Haynes Hudson Kissell Maxwell Mitchell Nash Oakland Oldsmobile Overland

During this sale we will be open every evening and Sunday morning.

PACKARD
OUR USED CAR CREED

In our used car department, as in our new car department, we seek more than mere sales. Rather, it is our aim to make friends, to create lasting good will, to establish a firm foundation for future business. Consequently, the used car we may sell you must be right, the price fair and the entire transaction honestly conducted, or our purpose is defeated. There is some car among our used Packards or miscellaneous cars that will meet with your requirements.

No Cash Down Necessary to Purchase a New Oakland Touring or Roadster

Never again will you have the opportunity to purchase a new Oakland without being out one penny cash. We take your old car, any make or model, as the first payment of $402.00—balance twelve monthly payments.

This is a bona-fide offer, there is no secret about it. We have too many Touring cars and Roadsters and we are taking our loss.

There is no cut in price nor do we contemplate one. Investigate our responsibility—don't take the other fellow's word.

NEW CHARGES MADE AGAINST CLARKE AND MRS. TYLER

Former Grand Goblin Says Woman Abused Him When He Demanded Klan Reforms.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 10.—An affidavit by Charles W. Love, former grand goblin of the Great Lakes Domain, containing additional sensational charges against Edward Young Clarke and Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler, has been made public here by Harry D. Terrell, a former grand goblin, in the struggle now on within the Ku Klux Klan.

Love was in charge of the Great Lakes territory when the revolt against the rule of Clarke and Mrs. Tyler started. He resigned Oct. 22, because of dissatisfaction in Chicago and other parts of his territory with the condition of affairs in the imperial family and because he failed in several efforts to get a promise from William Joseph Simmons, imperial wizard, that reforms would be made.

Love's affidavit declared the work in his domain proceeded satisfactorily until the New York World began its expose Sept. 1. He said when charges of immorality were published against Clarke and Tyler, backed by proof, only to be met by a feeble disclaimer from them, unsupported, interest in klan affairs waned and members began to withdraw in alarming numbers.

Then a committee was formed to go to Atlanta to demand reforms. Love persuaded the committee to let him go alone. He wired making an appointment with Clarke, but Clarke evaded him. He finally saw Mrs. Tyler and he swears she abused him scandalously.

Then, he says, he saw Simmons and was assured an investigation would be made. The Chicago klansmen, he says, were dissatisfied with his report and two weeks later, he says, he returned to Atlanta to ask how Simmons' investigation was progressing. This time Simmons had got his courage back and told Love he intended to stay on the job and keep Mrs. Tyler on the job and any members who objected were not real klansmen. Whereupon, Love says, he resigned.

CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING FOR LIVESTOCK PRODUCERS

Commission Association on East Side Will Be Blow at Old Commission Firms.

The first co-operative live stock marketing association organized under the National Live Stock Producers' Association, the recently formed farmers' and stockmen's organization, will begin to function at National Stock Yards, East St. Louis, Jan. 1. It will be known as the Producers' Live Stock Commission Association of Illinois.

The membership comprises largely county shipping associations which are affiliated with farm bureaus, but individual shippers may join as well.

The new marketing system is a blow direct at the old established commission firms and may be far-reaching in its effect on men who have made their living in the stock marketing business. The producers intend to eliminate what they term middlemen's profits. Originally, they state, the commission on a car of live stock was $10, but this has been increased to $18 per car, or in the case of cars of mixed ownership, to $24. The increase in the number of commission firms has resulted, the farmers say, in the increase of commissions for stock handling. Further, they state that commission firms do not sell feeders direct to farmers, but that the farmers must purchase feeders from "scalpers." The new commission association expects to sell direct to packers, farmers and Eastern order buyers. It will operate on the established commission rates, and the money over and above expenses will be rebated to the shippers at the end of the year.

- - Should a Doctor Tell - - "Philanthropic Lies" to His Patients?

"The Doctor," from the painting, by Fildes.

No, declares Dr. Richard C. Cabot of the Harvard Medical School, who says such deceptions are harmful and cites cases to prove it—He points out the difference between truthfulness and accuracy, and holds that the physician ought to speak the truth as fully as he is acquainted with it, including "I don't know"—Story of the woman, distressed by the changed attitude of her friends, whom doctor told that she was insane and who said in relieved tone, "Oh, is that all?" :-:

DOCTORS should not lie, even to save their patients from anxiety or cruel mental suffering, according to this physician, who "swore off" from such deception years ago and says he never has regretted it.

Deliberate misstatements to or about patients may be called "white lies" or "philanthropic lies," but they are not defensible morally nor in the long run beneficial medically, declares Dr. Richard C. Cabot of the Harvard Medical School. An eminent figure in the profession, Dr. Cabot gives some interesting reasons for his stand in a much-debated matter.

Both the patients and their families should be told the truth, as far as the doctor himself knows it, declares Dr. Cabot. He related instances where the other policy had wrought positive harm, although the deception had sprung from good intentions.

Dr. Cabot begins his discussion of this old, old problem by saying that it is necessary to distinguish between veracity and correctness, or accuracy. It is possible for anybody to be 100 per cent truthful, but not 100 per cent accurate.

"Of course," remarks Dr. Cabot, "in many cases to say 'I do not know' is the truth, and the only truth which you can maintain."

An incident in Dr. Cabot's own practice illustrates this distinction between being truthful and being correct. He was called to diagnose the illness of another physician, and told the patient that to the best of his knowledge the ailment was tuberculosis.

However, the patient afterwards recovered normal health, permanently, and it was evident that the diagnosis had been incorrect. Then the man was indignant with Dr. Cabot because the latter, in spite of his principle of always speaking the truth, had told what the patient called a lie. Other people, treated by other doctors, have suffered the same confusion of thought.

"Aside from the necessary limitation of accuracy there are perhaps more defenses for lying in medicine than I know of elsewhere," says Dr. Cabot. "To save pain, to save people's feelings, to save life, perhaps, shall not one lie occasionally?

"This is what might be called a typical philanthropic lie, as distinguished from the selfish lie, which we all condemn.

"About doctors who use cancer 'cures' which cost money and leave the patient worse off than before, or who perform unnecessary operations, no discussion is necessary. Nobody defends them.

"But there is another type of deception, defended by high-minded men and women, and that type I wish to discuss. It is the medical lie, not based on selfishness or hostility, but on the feeling that you are talking to a weakling. Is it defensible?"

Dr. Cabot terms the doctor a being with the habits of a benevolent despot. The doctor's position of authority; his genuine advantage and superior knowledge in a difficult field; his trusteeship in many matters which he is bound to keep secret—all these circumstances make it hard for him to be truthful, admits Dr. Cabot.

The family physician, in a great many cases, is accustomed to keeping truth safe, and doling out a little of it as he thinks best, to a docile clientele. He is used to phrasing his facts in one way when talking to doctors, and in another way when talking to patients or their family and friends. Medical students receive no teaching in ethics: it is assumed that they are honorable men.

What Dr. Cabot remembers as "the worst 10 minutes in his life," occurred when he was called in consultation upon the case of a dentist, whom the narrator says was the most uncontrollable individual, physically and otherwise, that he had ever met.

Following the examination of the patient and a conference between the doctors in another room, Dr. Cabot was going back to talk with the dentist's wife when the family physician tapped him on the shoulder and told him that the woman was a neurasthenic, unable to stand a shock; that if she knew the truth about her husband she would be miserable, and make him more miserable.

"You must be very guarded in what you say," the family physician cautioned, and Dr. Cabot promised that he would.

The patient's wife was waiting for him. She had a straight-back kitchen chair ready for the doctor, and another for herself, the two chairs facing each other and very close together. When they were seated she looked at the doctor searchingly and exclaimed:

"There is one question that I want to ask you at the beginning: will you give me a full and true answer to every question I ask you about my husband?".

In relating this experience to fellow members of the medical profession, Dr. Cabot continued as follows:

"What was the best thing to do in such a difficult situation? Suppose I had answered the woman 'Yes'—there was the doctor at my elbow whom I had promised to do nothing of the sort. Suppose I said 'No.' I was blocked there.

"I hesitated for a moment, trying to collect my scattered senses. She suddenly exclaimed, 'That is all I want of you!' and the conversation was at an end. I think you will admit that for a person trying to tell a philanthropic lie it was a difficult situation."

Dr. Cabot remarked that if he were working in a clinic for out-patients and discovered the beginning of tuberculosis in the tip of a lung and the patient inquired, as the doctor passed hurriedly to another patient, "Have I consumption?" and he answered, "Yes," that would not be the truth, for by the word consumption the patient would understand he had a hopeless disease, whereas in such a case the physician understood it to be a trouble that might be cured.

In other words, it is impossible to tell the truth sometimes unless one takes time.

A man who was a trustee in one of the hospitals and whom Dr. Cabot knew well was taken, three years before his death, with a painful affection of the heart. He consulted a leading Boston physician and the latter decided his patient could not stand the truth, because the latter, in his work in the hospital, probably had picked up enough knowledge so that he was liable to misuse it.

Accordingly, the physician told the patient that his trouble was neuralgia of the stomach, but, of course, treated him for the disease he really had. It seemed to be a successful medical lie, of the philanthropic variety.

Later, this same patient went to New York and while playing a round of golf with another doctor, a personal friend, asked him what he thought of his

"Candor and Complete Explanation of Facts," Advises Dean Allison

DR. NATHANIEL ALLISON, Dean of the Washington University Medical School, said that whether a doctor should ever deceive a patient is a very old question, and not likely to be settled unanimously.

"Certainly my own rule is for candor and a complete explanation of the facts," he said. "They are just as important in medicine as in any other part of life. The patient should completely understand his condition. The basis of modern medicine is truth, not deception.

"It is well for doctors to realize, however, that they are not infallible."

While Dr. Allison stands firmly for a consistent and thorough frankness with patients, he admitted that, like other rules, there might be some exceptions to it—"but very few of them," he added emphatically.

English Artist's Choice of Typical American Beauty

WHEN Mr. E. O. Hoppe, the noted London artist-photographer, came over to the United States some time ago, much attention was attracted by the large collection of photos of British beauties that he brought with him. During his stay over here Mr. Hoppe photographed many American celebrities. Later he was asked to name the most beautiful woman who had posed for him in the United States. After long consideration he chose Miss Lucy Cotton, giving as his reasons: "She has the most exquisite line of profile I have ever seen. She combines the sparkle and vivacity of the Gallic type with the dreaminess of eye and the peach-like bloom of the Anglo-Saxon."

Lucy Cotton was born in Houston, Texas, some twenty-five years ago, and has a distinctive Southern personality and dialect that so often appeals to Englishmen. Recently she has been in the films, playing the leading feminine role with George Arliss in "The Devil."

GREATEST SOCIAL FAKER OF ALL DIES A PAUPER—IN PRISON

"Count Gregory," the romantic swindler who gulled the society matrons of Paris, London, New York and Newport, comes to miserable end in Berlin jail—Once had the finest stable in New York, and was an intimate of Alfred Vanderbilt—In reality he was the son of a Vienna banker who had disowned him

When a friend, reluctant to extend him a loan, told the "Count" that he had no money, the latter suggested that the friend pawn diamond cuff buttons.

"COUNT GREGORY," who, with Mrs. John Jacob Astor, led the cotillion at the first Patriarchs' ball—"Count Gregory," whose horses were once the envy of New York exhibitors, and whose coaching parties were the sensation of Newport—this "Count Gregory" died a few days ago in the Mosbit prison, in Berlin, where he had been incarcerated on a charge of having swindled his landlady. He left an estate consisting of 8 marks, two shirts, a pair of socks and one suit of underwear.

Such was the sordid and miserable end of the greatest bogus nobleman who ever bamboozled the social leaders of two continents. The "Count" never lost his poise nor his nerve. Whether playing host to millionaires or giving a bad check to his tailor, he was always the "gentleman." His last request was for a cigarette.

In reviewing his extraordinary career, it seems almost a pity that the man was not born to a title. His tastes were essentially aristocratic. Contrasted with the genuine Counts whose natural inclinations obviously fit them for day labor or business, he was far more convincing. He missed nobility only by the accident of birth.

This accident occured in Vienna, in 1858, when Bernard Gruenebaum was born the eldest son of Michael Gruenebaum, a banker. The young man gave evidence, early in life, of the fastidious cravings to whose satisfaction he was to devote his amazing personality and his life. His father soon grew tired of his extravagances and refused to advance any more money.

Cut off from this source, and congenitally averse to any sort of productive labor, Bernard borrowed to his limit. When his credit was exhausted, he committed the crowning offense of obtaining a pair of fine horses and a phaeton from a prosperous land owner in Aachen, selling the outfit for 1000 florins and absconding with the money.

He went to Paris. His persuasive approach and convincing manner got him into good society, but he was soon convicted of swindling, and was sentenced to 13 months' imprisonment. The expiation of this offense closed the doors of respectable families to him, and he went to London. There, again, he succeeded in insinuating himself into the graces of influential persons, and recuperated his finances.

Photographed at the height of his career as "Count Gregory" in New York and Newport.
—International.

As England had its own nobility, the adventurer decided to come to the United States, where titles were more at a premium. Accordingly, he landed at New York, introducing himself as "Baron Gruenebaum." His reception was gratifying. He gained entree into some of the best homes, and it was not long afterward that his unquestioning acceptance by New York society was evidenced by his appearance at the Patriachs' ball, in New York, as the partner of Mrs. Astor. None, it may be added, was better fitted to lead a cotillion.

He failed for some reason to take full advantage of his social conquests in recouping his exchequer, and it was not long afterward that he was convicted of paying his tailor with a bad check, for which he was given a year on Blackwell's Island. Released at the expiration of his sentence, he obtained work as an interpreter in the immigration office.

He attempted to maintain his identity as a "Baron," but a skeptical German named Kunz, employed as a clerk, became so incensed by Gruenebaum's airs that he punched him in the nose. This so injured the delicate sensibilities of the "Baron" that he went elsewhere.

Seeking his fortunes further south, he became acquainted with Mrs. Elizabeth Franklin, widow of a noted breeder of race horses, near Nashville, Tenn., and they were married. His bride soon found that her husband's manners were for company only, and she sent him packing. When next heard of, he was getting a divorce. Among the complaints which he lodged against his wife was that of snoring. He said, also, that the frugal woman allowed him only 2 bottles of beer a day, and no money whatever. He admitted, however, that one of his chief reasons for wishing to leave Tennessee was the fact that his 17-year-old stepson was looking for him with a gun.

He paid St. Louis a visit, incidentally, and was fined $100 and given 24 hours to leave town. Convicted of fraud in Toronto, Canada, he was sentenced to 12 days in jail and ordered deported. The Western Hemisphere was proving a thorny proposition for the bogus "Baron."

There is a mystery about where he was for several years after 1900. He turned up in New York about 1912, splendidly attired, and posing as "Count Gregory." Society either had forgotten or didn't care. His Bertillon record impeded his social rennaisance no more than if it had been a certificate of good character. He became an intimate of Alfred Vanderbilt, and later declared that it was the millionaire's indorsement which enabled him to obtain a $20,000-a-year house. In this mansion the "Count" installed a beautiful woman named Alma Hayne, and insidiously whispered the report that she was the daughter of the deceased Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria and a Baroness.

Her beauty and fictitious origin attracted many men to her, and she wheedled them out of large sums of money and jewelry, which she divided with her sponsor and confederate.

It was during his imposture as "Count Gregory" that the charlatan enjoyed his golden years. He was a familiar figure at the horse shows, both as exhibitor and judge, for he was a good horseman.

He drove a coaching team at the Empire City track in 3:15½, which was a record. One of his distinguishing sartorial marks was a red vest, but it was noted that he changed clothes for each appearance in the ring. It was even said that he took into account the color harmonies of his raiment in connection with the color of horses with which he appeared. His stock and equipment during this period were among the finest ever assembled in one stable. In 1914 he bought the famous team, Lady Friar and Moonshine, to win the hackney championship at the New York horse show. After his subsequent debacle this team was purchased by August Busch of St. Louis.

There was considerable speculation as to where the "Count" derived the revenue for financing his pretentious establishment, for many who knew and liked him were not in the least deceived by his "title," and knew him for what he was. It was disclosed, at length, that his principal source of money was a wealthy old lady with very conspicuous family connections. In less than two years he got $200,000 from her, and much of it was spent on lavish entertainment in New York and Newport. Finally her relatives got wind of the situation. They promptly took charge of her, and "Count Gregory's" most lucrative avenue of income was blocked.

The result was immediate and disastrous. With characteristic improvidence, he had squandered his money as fast as he got it, and now found himself burdened with the expenses of an extravagant establishment, and nothing with which to meet them. In consequence, he was forced to sell his stable at auction, the proceeds being about enough to settle with his creditors.

He managed to keep up some sort of show for a year, and then we find him being arrested for keeping a diamond stickpin which he had taken on approval from a Newport jeweler. He received the police urbanely, asking permission to change his clothing to a suit of more somber hue, possibly in deference to the nature of the occasion. It was granted. When he was returned to Newport from New York he was unable to obtain bond for $300.

The decline of his fortunes reached its lowest ebb in June of this year, when he was arrested in New York for his old offense of paying his tailor with a worthless check. After that he disappeared. The circumstances of his return to Europe are not known. He died friendless and alone, with only the memories of his former glories to sustain him.

But the indomitable nerve, which had once caused him to suggest to a friend that the latter pawn his diamond cuff buttons in order to extend him a loan, never deserted him. His family had long ago severed all connection with him. He was penniless, save for 8 marks.

Just before he died, the ruin of that once gay philanderer summoned a turnkey. Coughing and weak, he said:

"If you ple —a cigarette," and so died.

Thrilling Tale of Man Wh

Charles Mayer, who left circus business to trap wild animals for them, tells of fearful battle with great orang-outangs that almost cost his life—describes "drive" in which a whole herd of 60 elephants was captured, after it had once stampeded, killing three men—humorous references to Malays who would not work if they had enough food to last through the day. :-: :-: :-: :-:

TALES of adventure become increasingly rare as the automobile, the telephone and the electric light carry their more or less civilizing influence into the wilderness of the world. Therefore, Charles Mayer's book, "Trapping Wild Animals in Malay Jungles" (Duffield & Co.), is singularly fascinating.

Here is a story for the person who likes action—a narrative of fights with elephants, leopards, pythons and, most dangerous of all, the giant orang-outang that grasps a man with one paw and dashes out his life against the ground. It is a narrative of thunderous stampedes, hot and desperate conflict, of escapes by the narrowest of margins.

Two chapters—those that deal with the capture of two great orangs and with the trapping of an entire herd of elephants—are worth retelling in more than the ordinary manner of the reviewer.

But first, as to the author: Mayer started his association with wild animals by running away from home with a circus while a small boy. Unusual for such cases, he remained with the circus, ultimately reached an important official position, and so gravitated into a career as a procurer of wild animals for menageries and zoological gardens. He was an associate of Barnum, Bailey and other famous circus men, and has captured some of the rarest animals in captivity.

A more thrilling encounter than that with the gigantic anthropoid apes could hardly be imagined. They had been terrorizing the neighboring village. A young girl had been carried off; a native had been killed. The brutes were morose and crafty. The natives besought Mayer, whom they knew as a great hunter, to kill the apes. He knew, however, that such specimens as these would bring $10,000 each in Europe, or $25,000 in America, for orangs in captivity are exceedingly rare. They brood and die when confined.

The two orangs were easily located on the platform which they had built for themselves in a tree. Preparations for their capture were elaborate, for, says the author: "Capturing leopards is about on a par with setting mousetraps, compared with getting full-grown orang-outangs into cages. * * *

"Their strength is enormous. I have seen one bend a one-inch steel bar as if it were made of rubber. The strength of the orang-outang, which, in Malay, means simply 'wild man,' is largely in its arms. The mias type, which we were after, is next in size to the gorilla, and from finger tips to finger tips of the outstretched arms, often measures more than 10 feet. In battle they are ferocious.

"If one is treed and afraid to come down, it goes into a paroxysm of fury. It will bite its arms, tearing away the flesh and inflicting frightful wounds. If there are two, they will hug and bite each other. After being wounded with a poisoned dart, one will follow the natives, either in the trees or on the ground, until it dies. The best chance lies in keeping it harried so that it will not know who to attack, for once it decides on a particular native, the latter is as good as dead."

In this case the preparations consisted of selecting a day when the orangs were absent from the tree, and cutting all the trees within a radius of 60 feet, so that a slight push would topple them over. A large net was woven of strong rattan. As an orang will never enter smoke, bundles of grass were placed nearby with which to start a smudge at the foot of the orangs' tree in case they should decide to come down.

The plan was, at a signal, to topple the partly cut trees, causing them to fall away from the orangs' tree, thus leaving it standing in the center of a cleared space. The reason for that was that an orang can swing itself 20 or 30 feet through the air to another tree, and thus escape. The other trees down, it was then proposed to fell the orangs' tree and, as it fell, bearing them in the branches, to throw the net over them.

So delicate was this operation, and so dangerous, that Mayer had his natives rehearse it at their village several times before staging the real show. Finally the night came. The orangs could be seen above, sleeping on their platform. Every man took his place. The bundles of grass were brought up; the net was held in readiness. Says the author:

"I gave a quick glance around, and fired my pistol. Instantly the tumult started; the men yelled and beat upon tom-toms and trees. The orang-outangs leaped up bewildered and scrambled around their platform. Through the noise I could hear the men at work with their parangs; then came the crashing of trees. The jungle seemed to fold up and the big tree stood alone.

"The orangs screamed and hugged each other. Men rushed forward with the bundles of dry grass and started a fire; others came with wet leaves to make a smudge. One of the orangs started, as if to come down, and I reached for my rifle; but when the smoke struck him he went back to the platform, screaming and tearing the tree. Then, the smoke becoming more dense, the two animals climbed higher and sat on the topmost limb, arms and legs wrapped around each other, completely terrified.

"The natives yelled and danced. Through the clouds of smoke that drifted over us I could see their black bodies flashing, arms waving, and lips, stained crimson with betel nut, wide open. The din was terrific. The orangs, high up in the tree, were huddled together, swaying back and forth. Omar came with the word that the space was cleared, all ready for the tree to fall; I ordered the net carried to position.

"The men were in position, ready to cast it, when the tree came down. Other men, armed with sharp-pointed poles, stood behind ready to pin the beasts to the ground in case the net did not fall into the proper position. They were so excited that I spent several minutes in casually walking about, talking with them and calming them.

"We cleared away the litter of tree trunks and creepers from the spot where the big tree was to fall, so that there might be nothing underfoot to interfere with rapid work. A messenger came with word that the tree was ready to drop. I gave a hasty glance around, told the men to be on the alert, and sent back instructions to let the tree fall.

"Once again through the din of tom-toms and shouting I could hear chopping; the tree swayed for a moment, the orang-outangs screamed with terror, and the men with the nets crouched, ready to spring. Slowly the tree toppled and came down, gathering speed where it fell, exactly in the spot we had marked. When it struck the entire jungle seemed to be in upheaval.

"The orang-outangs abrutly stopped their outcries. As they hit the ground they were paralyzed with fright. A net went sailing over them. In an instant they came back to their senses and began fighting. With long, black, powerful arms they lashed at the rattan; they leaped and struggled, tearing great gashes in their bodies. They screamed and chattered furiously. One of them reached out and grabbed a native by the throat, whipping him through the air and breaking his neck. The native struck the ground several yards away, blood pouring from his nose and mouth.

"I yelled to the men to cast the second net and secure it to the trees. The orangs kept up a constant battle, lashing and heaving under the ropes. Their arms and legs became entangled in the meshes of the nets, and they wasted their strength in wrenching and squirming. The natives, crazy with excitement, pressed in, tumbling over one another. * * *

"Just then, as I was standing near the nets, superintending the work of making them fast, a huge paw shot out and grabbed my ankle. I was jerked off the ground and, as I fell, my hands caught the limb of a tree. I clung to it with all my strength, feeling my fingers weaken and slip as the brute pulled. The joints at my hip and knee pained me for an instant; then my leg became numb.

"The men stood terrified, and I could not yell at them. I felt myself growing dizzy and I simply wondered why someone did not do something. Then Omar grabbed a club and pounded the orang's arm; the pulling stopped, and I realized that I was being dragged away from the nets. For several minutes I was too groggy to know what was happening, but the idea that the natives might kill the orang-outangs while I was disabled made me sit up. I told them that I was all right. My leg was not broken, but it was so badly wrenched that I could not stand on it."

Litters were constructed, a large one for the two animals, which, together, weighed more than 500 pounds, and one each for Mayer and the dead man, and so the procession proceeded back to the village.

The hunter was delirious for two days as the result of his injury. After he recovered the animals were shipped to Singapore, where Mayer received a cable offer of $10,000 each for them, delivered to the zoo at Antwerp, Belgium. He knew he could get $25,000 for them in America, but was certain they could not stand the voyage.

After a few days at sea the orangs began to fail. They refused food, the smallest bits failing to tempt them. One morning the female curled up on the floor, buried her face in her arms, and died. The male, when

ON ONE occasion Mayer was very anxious to get across a river. He sought a Malay boatman to take him across, and finally offered the boatman a comparatively large sum of money to undertake the job, which would have required only a few minutes.

"Tuan" (sir), the Malay responded, "I have eaten today and I have had plenty. You may take my boat and row yourself across the river. Tomorrow, if Allah spares my life and I have need of the boat, I will swim over and get it."

"One of them reached out and grabbed a native by the throat, whipping him through the air and breaking his neck."

had been improving, now became morose, but lived on.

"When we put foot on the wharf at Antwerp, with him still alive," wrote Mayer, "I felt like whooping. My job was finished. The orang came out of his cage slowly, like a tired old man. He was not interested in his surroundings at the garden, and failed to eat. Veterinarians could do nothing for him. Ten days later he died."

While the trapper had no illusions about the narrowness of his own escape from the hands of the big anthropoid, he admits that he was moved to pity by the suffering of the pair and by the extraordinary humanness of their actions and attitude.

The elephant drive was an incident of a much different character, and entailed a vastly larger amount of work. Word had been brought that the largest herd of elephants ever seen in Trengganu was in the jungle about four miles from the village where the collector was staying. The first labor necessary was that of constructing a trap, which was done with the trunks of trees, each 18 inches thick, set five feet in the ground as a stockade. A gate was left, with a door set to fall like a portcullis.

Wings to the trap, consisting of rows of poles, were constructed for a considerable distance into the jungle, but concealed by trees and underbrush. Once within the wings, the only forward course for the elephants would bring them into the trap.

The business of driving them consisted of getting in their rear with a small army of natives, arranged in the shape of a great U, and beating on tom-toms to frighten the great beasts. At the same time, it was necessary that the drivers or beaters remain unseen, as the sight of a man would cause the herd to stampede.

The formation of the natives completed, Mayer gave a signal by firing his pistol. Instantly pandemonium reigned in the jungle, as the natives beat upon their tom-toms and shouted in a babel of voices. A crashing in the darkness showed that the herd had begun to move forward to avoid the noise.

Dawn came, and revealed that the herd had been driven a mile and a half; it was slow work. The beaters remained concealed during the day, and when night came, the drive was resumed.

"Early next day," says the author, "the stampede hit us without warning. A small elephant, straying from the herd, saw some of the men on the right; he ran back, trumpeting the danger. Then the bellowing herd came down upon us.

"Ali shoved the rifle into my hands and I jumped behind a tree. The Siamese priest stumbled and fell. Before I could shoot a big bull stepped on him and tore him in two, tossing the upper half of the body over my head. Elephants, bellowing furiously, rushed past us; men screamed and scrambled for places of safety. The immense animals loomed up in the darkness, and then disappeared. In their excitement some collided with trees."

When the cyclone had passed a muster showed that three men had been killed and 12 hurt. Search the next morning showed the herd five miles away, and the whole laborious process began over again. The elephants did not connect the renewal of the noise with the men they had seen, and this time the drive was successful.

When the big gate had finally fallen a count showed 66 elephants in the stockade. They milled and bellowed, lunged against the stockade and tore up the trees inside it, but the trap was secure.

Commenting elsewhere on the traditional sagacity of elephants, Mayer writes: "The opinion of those who have had the best opportunities for observing him is that the popular estimate of his intelligence is a greatly exaggerated one; that instead of being an exceptionally wise animal, his sagacity is of a very mediocre character.

"One of his strongest characteristics is his obedience. He is readily taught, but his reasoning faculties are far below those of a dog; while quick at comprehending anything taught him, he is decidedly wanting in originality. * * * The facts are certainly against the conclusion that the elephant is extraordinarily shrewd, or, much less, possesses the faculty of reasoning in the abstract, with which he is commonly credited. I do not think I traduce the elephant when I say that in many things it is a stupid animal, and I can assert with confidence that all the stories I have heard of it, except those relating to strength or docility, are beyond its intellectual power, and are but pleasant fiction."

No less interesting is the author's account of how little monkeys are caught by placing a sweetened rag into a bottle, and tying the bottle to a tree. The monkey puts his hand in to get the rag, but with his fist doubled up, can't get it out. It never occurs to him to let go of the rag, and there he remains, tugging and chattering indignantly, until the trapper comes along and gets him.

One of the chief obstacles overcome by the seeker of wild animals was the natural indolence of the Malays. Only by emphasizing the sporting aspect of the expeditions and playing up his own powers of "magic" could Mayer enlist their aid. The customary reply of the Malay when an effort was made to interest him in work was: "Tuan, I have enough fish and rice for today, and I may not live through the night."

Should Doctor Tell "Philanthropic Lies" to Patients?

ralgia of the stomach. The doctor replied: "There is no such thing." Much surprised, the patient said: "What would you think of a physician who told me I had neuralgia of the stomach?" The reply was: "I should think he was either a knave or a fool."

In telling the story, Dr. Cabot commented: "This was not a very satisfactory conclusion for an attempt to be calm."

Many times, according to Dr. Cabot, physicians tell the full account of a patient's disease to the family, and something else to the patient. What happens then? The people to whom the facts are told also know what is being told the patient. These individuals have friends, and as illness is always a favorite topic of conversation, the chances are that the whole of such a transaction is passed about and the deception becomes a matter of common knowledge.

Dr. Cabot mentioned a girl, 20 years old, who revealed extraordinary cynicism of the medical profession by remarking: "I do not believe anything the doctors say; I have helped them lie too many times."

To illustrate the astounding harmlessness of what appears to be a very painful truth, Dr. Cabot told about a woman he once knew whose habit it was to make a round of visits in Boston every year. She went from one friend's home to another and in her quiet, subdued way was very agreeable, and always welcome. But when she began her series of visits one year, the friends noticed a difference. Compared with the past, she was acting strangely enough to cause comment. Ordinarily very thrifty, she bought expensive presents; ordinarily very sedate and dignified, she was chattering continually; ordinarily no more active than was natural for her age, she was now running about from place to place.

In short, the friends became convinced that she was not in her right mind, but they could not bear to tell her so. Try as hard as they might to conceal their distress over her condition, she realized that their attitude toward her had changed. She asked questions, they answered evasively and the poor woman saw that the friends whom she trusted most were lying to her. She could not understand it.

Finally, Dr. Cabot, as an old friend, was asked to call upon her. Going to the house where she was then a guest, he talked to the woman alone and she told her troubles. When Dr. Cabot explained to her that she was insane, she exclaimed:

"Oh, is that all?"

Such a reply might be called amusing, the doctor commented afterwards, but it was more than that—it was pathetic and instructive. Compared with being badly treated by her friends, the announcement seemed as nothing to her. Dr. Cabot told her that by going away and keeping quiet she would come out all right. And she did.

Dr. Cabot once talked with the head of an insane asylum who said that the difficulty of dealing effectively with patients was much increased by reason of the lies told them by relatives and friends in getting the patients to the asylum.

"Can you blame them for not believing a doctor they never saw before, when they were deceived by their own family and best friends?" asked the asylum superintendent. "I have deceived the insane in my time, and bitterly regret it. There is no necessity for it, and the most capable men who deal with the insane do not deceive them."

Dr. Cabot alluded to the case of the woman who acted strangely while visiting her friends as a striking example of the harmlessness of telling the truth.

"I must say," he added, "that after a few experiences like that I began to wonder whether it was not possible to swear off all sorts of lies, medical and otherwise, and just tell the truth as best I could, with such art as I could to convey my meaning and still deceive no one.

"I have no reason to regret the change. It is a good many years since I changed in this respect. I believe I have had a thorough knowledge and experience in both ways. I have never seen any harm come from telling the truth.

"I believe this principle holds good in the treatment of disease as well as in the diagnosis."

Where Hunting on a 65,000-Acre Game Preserve Costs Only One Dollar a Year

One of the lakes and its cypress trees in new public game preserve, Louisiana. Ducks and geese bagged in an hour's shooting.

The State of Louisiana sets aside, perpetually, more than 100 square miles of land so that its citizens of modest means will always have an ideal place for shooting ducks, geese and other wild fowl—The spot lies near mouth of Mississippi river, with private preserves and expensive clubs near by—State will issue all permits, and non-residents will pay $15 for a license :: ::

MR. JOHN SMITH, who toils his six days a week, year in and year out; who reads the sport pages of his evening paper and the sporting and outing magazines now and then; who, deep down in his inner self, nurses that primitive but excusable desire to "go huntin'"—who secretly envies his neighbor of wealth with hunting resorts and clubs at his disposal; who would take a day or two, perhaps a week, from his work to get out into the woods if he had some place to go and the cost was not prohibitive—John Smith, real, red-blooded American with his soul craving for a good day's shooting, is going to have his day—if he lives in Louisiana.

The State of Louisiana has just opened a great public shooting resort, a princely preserve, for its John Smiths. Sixty-five thousand acres of land—more than 100 square miles—have been set aside for all time, dedicated in perpetuity as a shooting ground, so that the citizens of small means in Louisiana will always have an ideal place to hunt and an abundance of game.

Proper legislation has been enacted, the preserve has been given in care of the State's Department of Conservation, a clubhouse and pleasant dormitories constructed for comfort and convenience of Louisianans, rich and poor, and in November, the month when hunting opens in the South, the great resort of the common people was in readiness.

Smacking of the days 200 years ago when a French engineer laid out the city of New Orleans, when French settlers were pioneers in developing the lower Mississippi Valley country and when the foundation was laid for the quaint French customs that live to this day, the preserve has been given the French name, "Pass a L'Outre Public Hunting Grounds."

Pass a L'Outre is one of the numerous passes through which the Mississippi River is discharged into the Gulf of Mexico. The Father of Waters does not empty as a single stream but divides into many branches or "passes," some large, some small. For instance, there is Main Pass, South Pass, Southeast Pass, Octave Pass, Raphael Pass, and so on.

Between these main passes are lakes, lagoons, bayous and small rivulets that teem with wild fowl of every sort and description. It is the winter home for millions of duck, geese, snipe and other such water fowl.

It is the choicest of this sort of country, 75 miles downstream from New Orleans, that has been picked out as a resort for Louisiana citizens of today and tomorrow. Probably no place in the world is better adapted for ducks and duck hunting. The land is level and thickly grown up in luxuriant grasses. It is a feeding place par excellence. It is suited to the use of boats, if the hunter prefers to enjoy his sport that way; it is suited to tramping, it is suited to "still" shooting from the thick grasses where one need scarcely stir from his hiding place to bag the limit of wild fowl which the law prescribes.

For many years the region has been a Mecca for sportsmen, not only of Louisiana but of the entire United States. Many fine preserves have been established, some elaborately developed, by wealthy sportsmen of the country. One of the largest of these, perhaps, is the Delta Duck Club, a private club of sportsmen numbering some of the best-known men in public, private and business life, with 40,000 acres of shooting grounds, fine clubhouse fully equipped and with launches and boats in abundance and guides to man them and direct members to those portions where the best shooting is to be found.

Besides the clubs there are numerous privately owned resorts, upon some of which thousands of dollars in improvements have been expended. One, a resort owned by a Chicago multi-millionaire, is very near the new State preserve and upon it the owner has spent more than $100,000 to enjoy just those privileges that the State of Louisiana is giving without charge to its citizens.

Some of the ground in the region can be bought for $5 an acre, where development by cultivation has not reached, and this figure is a conservative one for the value of each of the 65,000 acres that Louisiana is setting aside merely for the use of its citizens of modest means—its John Smiths.

It had been suggested from time to time that Louisiana should reserve for future public use some of her finest hunting, but nothing ever came of the suggestions until M. L. Alexander, commissioner in charge of the Department of Conservation, brought the question before Gov. John H. Parker. It had an appeal for the Governor and he finally decided to make a personal trip and investigation. When he returned he was an enthusiastic supporter of the project.

"I have been interested in this project of the Pass a L'Outre Public Shooting Grounds, and, in fact, the whole situation of duck hunting at the mouth of the river, ever since Commissioner Alexander brought it up before me," said Gov. Parker when he returned. "I am going to ask the Legislature to pass a special act forever dedicating this territory as a public shooting ground so the citizens of modest means in Louisiana will always have an ideal place to hunt and an abundance of game.

"The spot is literally dotted with duck ponds and is the finest hunting preserve I have ever seen. I'm glad I can help put this project through."

Gov. Parker was as good as his word; the legislation was enacted and immediate steps taken to throw the huge area open to the public with State help and assistance in making it one for "the common folks." It is not in any sense in opposition to the existing private preserves of clubs and individuals, but rather a guarantee that the best shooting in the State shall remain open to the public.

Much already has been done by the State to provide for the comfort and convenience of its citizens who go to the preserve for a hunt, and still more will be done in the future. The present clubhouse and dormitories will accommodate about 100 persons daily. Plans are to gradually make improvements not only to care for more than 100, but to give them better service—service which, by the way, is at a very nominal charge, sufficient only to pay actual cost.

But it is not required of every visitor that he stay at the central camp. With his own boat or his own tent and outfitted with food, he may establish himself to suit his fancy. The improvements are being made for comfort and convenience. There are and

Take Your Choice—Latest Thing in Airplanes

Exhibition of newest models in Paris draws crowds that were wont to attend horse and automobile shows —Some striking designs shown ::

FIRST it was the horse show, and how learnedly we conversed of withers, fetlocks and the Bruce-Lowe system! Then came the automobile show, and, with a proper sophistication, we discussed ignition, cooling, carburetion and body design. Now comes the airplane show, and who can doubt that before long we shall be sagely telling each other about supporting surface, dead weight, fuselages and lifting capacity? "The world do move," said the Rev. 'Rastus.

At the recent Aeronautic Salon, held at the Grand Palais, Paris, as many shapes, sizes and designs of aircraft were shown as there are of automobiles at the largest shows. Indeed, the variation in detail was probably greater. For example, most automobiles that we have seen agree on four as the proper number of wheels. But airplanes by no means agree on the number of wings. They have one, two or even three.

Also, save for the occasional exception that results from too much "home brew," automobilists make it a rule to stay on the ground. Yet here are airplanes which travel with equal facility on land, air and water. One, especially, folds its wings like a bird, and so becomes an automobile, at the driver's option. The bi-elemental accomplishments of the hydroplane are, of course, not new.

The automobile has come as near to rivaling the beauty of the thoroughbred as any mechanical device can approach the living flesh—some of us will never be able to see anything prettier than a blooded horse, unless it is a beautiful wo— but this is beside the point. At any rate, the airplane gives promise of a mechanical symmetry and grace that may outdo its terrestrial brother of the gasoline strain.

Certainly the long, delicately curved wings, the exquisite molding of the bodies, form a combination of distinct esthetic value, and the airplane is still in its gawky adolescence. We have but to recall the motor car of a few years ago, with its button-up-the-back effect, its quaint contours, to forecast what the evolution of the aircraft may be in a short time. At present, by far the greater part of the inventors' efforts have been directed toward eliminating mechanical defects.

The craft with the folding wings—some called it a "flying automobile," is a new invention by M. Campier. For land travel, it uses a motor of 10 horsepower. When it takes to the air its giant 300-horsepower engine goes into action.

One of the most striking exhibits at the Paris show was the model of monoplane with which Sadi Lecointe hung up the world's speed record of 330 kilometers (205 miles) an hour, during the Gordon Bennett cup races. It is comparatively small, and, at the show, was supported in the air in the position of making a "bank."

Some of the craft were veritable monsters, their proportions suggesting ships rather than motor vehicles. Conspicuous among these was the Bleriot biplane, with its beautiful white cabin, designed to carry 20 passengers, and capable of developing a speed of 200 kilometers an hour. It has not one, or two, motors, but four! Another field of variation exceeding that of the automobile.

Among the larger craft should be noted the giant Farman biplane, engined with four 375-horsepower Lorraine-Dietrich motors. Another interesting exhibit at the Farman stall was the torpedo avion, which has been adopted by the French for coast defense. Its torpedo, weighing 1540 pounds, is completely hidden in the fuselage. The wing spread is 59 feet.

The Bristol company, which manufactured the famous British fighting scouts used in the war, sent to the show a 400-horsepower motor, which, complete with carburetors, magnetos and propeller hub, weighed only 698 pounds. Less than two pounds per horsepower!

Other motors attracted much attention from persons especially interested in this phase. The largest was the Farman monster, which develops 600 horsepower, but, like the Bristol exhibit, is comparatively light. The famous engine-building firm of Renault was represented by a 550-horsepower engine with 12 cylinders. One plane had two motors, so arranged that should one stall it would immediately become disengaged from the other.

Scores of other designs were shown, some curious, some beautiful, some formidable and others grotesque. These will have to wait for description until the first St. Louis airplane show, which, judging from the present rate of progress, is not many years away.

Triplane flying boat, small but powerful.
—Underwood & Underwood.

A curious exhibit, and one that attracted much attention, was a triplane flying boat. It was a small affair, being almost as high as it was wide, but capable of tremendous lifting capacity. It is said to be something of a bucking bronco—powerful and hard to manage.

The Louis Breguet stand was one of the centers of attention. All the Breguet machines are metallic, including the wings. On one of these a portion of the wing was left uncovered, to show a cross-section of the strong steel network over which the sheeting is laid. On this plane the propeller shaft does not project through the nose; the four blades of the propeller are set in a conical hub, the tip of which forms the nose.

STRANGE STORY OF TERR O' WHO BECAME STEWART, HE

Quit job and started on his way to $7,000,000 when the foreman wouldn't let him whistle at work—Made romantic compact with two other boys to share their fortunes alike, and kept it—Invention which made him rich was originally devised to ease his work of clipping horses—Changed his name and didn't communicate with his family for 20 years :: :: ::

A BOY'S boss wouldn't let him whistle at work, so the boy quit his job cold, went out into the world and made $7,000,000 for himself.

Thus it was that the amazing business romance of John K. Stewart, late head of the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation, began. In this respect, it is a good story of itself; but recent revelations make the history of the "Speedometer King's" life far more absorbing than had even been supposed.

For one thing his name, it now appears, was not John K. Stewart at all, but Terence O'Brien. So successfully did he conceal his origin that his father, brothers and sister, living in a New Hampshire village and knowing, of course, of the millionaire speedometer manufacturer, never dreamed that it was their long-lost brother "Terry," from whom they had not heard for 20 years. Nor did they ever learn the fact until after his death.

More romantic still, it develops that he set out to make his fortune in company with two other youths, and that the three of them, like Dumas' "Three Musketeers," entered a compact that whatever good fortune each might have, he would share with the others. The compact was kept, the record shows. Not only did Terence O'Brien share his prosperity with his boyhood chums, but after his death one of them and the son of the other received a substantial settlement from the estate.

Eccentric millionaires are far from rare in this country, but the subject of this story hardly belongs in that category. He indulged in no spectacular extravagances; silver bathtubs were not in his line. Rather, as one of the country's richest men, he retained the picturesque qualities that had marked him when he was a fearless, roving, inquisitive, loyal, implacable adventurer. He did not forget his friends; neither did he forget those who had incurred his animosity.

His fidelity to the compact which he made with his chums was no less constant than his aversion to the father who had estranged his affection. He loved and hated with equal sustainedness. Men who steer a forthright course like this usually leave a lot of complications in their wake. It was so in his case. Some of these matters are now before the courts for settlement.

The revelations touching the manufacturer's boyhood resulted from a recent motion filed by his surviving child, Mrs. Robert B. Honeyman Jr. of New York, in which she accuses the administrators of her father's estate of gross mismanagement, and makes charges bordering on the sensational.

In the course of this procedure, the fact, hitherto unknown save to a small number of persons, that settlements of $250,000 and $75,000 were made shortly after Stewart's death, five years ago, with Thomas Clark and Arthur Conlon, became public. The settlements were made by Chicago and New York courts. Arthur Conlon was one of the "Three Musketeers;" Thomas Clark was the son of the other, who was dead.

A special correspondent of the Post-Dispatch visited Nashua, N. H., to make inquiries suggested by these developments. He learned these facts:

Terence O'Brien, the son of Terrence O'Brien, a day laborer, was born there about 55 years ago, and grew up as one of the boys of the town. He played on the baseball nine of the high school, got into the usual scrapes, and got out of them in the usual manner. His father was a stern man, a martinet for family discipline. Two sons, John and David, were obedient, but Terence was a trifle unruly. He had a bump of curiosity and independence, and this caused frequent clashes with his father. After leaving school he got a job in the factory of the American Shearer Co., where his father was also employed. One day John K. Priest, the foreman, reprimanded Terence for whistling. In his heavy New England manner, he told the young man that work was a serious matter, and should be seriously taken. The time to make noise—if there was such a time—was outside work hours, he said.

Crayon portrait of Terence O'Brien, which hangs in the old New Hampshire homestead.

That was enough for Terence. He quit. When his father came home harsh words passed between them. The elder O'Brien's viewpoint was that of the foreman. John and David gave silent approval to their father's reproof.

Without much delay, Terence O'Brien Jr. shook the dust of Nashua from his feet. Before departing he communicated his intention to his bosom pals, Arthur and Thomas Conlon, brothers. They decided also to forsake the New Hampshire town, and then and there they made the compact to share and share alike whatever fortune might have in store for them. Thomas Conlon accompanied Terence; Arthur arranged to join them later, which he did.

Tom and Terry made their way to Boston, where the latter's familiarity with shearing instruments caused them to get a job clipping horses. It was humdrum work for the young adventurers, and Terence varied it by inventing a flexible shaft for his clipper, which was so successful that he obtained a patent on it. A few royalties came in, but not in a degree to justify sanguine expectations. The chums set out for the gold fields.

No bonanza rewarded their efforts, but gratifying returns from the flexible clipper shaft began to come in. The pair returned to Chicago, where they were joined by Arthur Conlon. The original pledge of comradeship was now supplemented by a business agreement. A stock company was formed to manufacture the shaft. More important still, the automobile had made its appearance, and Stewart, [illegible] plying the principle of his flexible shaft, invented speedometer. Probably he builded better than he knew. Few men at that time grasped the stupendous [illegible] of the motor car. This was the beginning of Terence O'Brien's vast fortune. Wealth poured in upon him. He indulged himself in certain luxuries, including a race horse. Probably in a spirit of ironic malice, he named the horse "John K." after the Nashua plant foreman. In the conduct of his affairs he also had occasion to retain a lawyer named Stewart. It was about this time that he met a school teacher, Miss Butler, and the acquaintance developed into an engagement. For some reason, whether his own choice or deference to the wishes of his fiancée, he decided to change his name.

There is an intimation that [illegible] action was a result of his aversion to Nashua and all its associations, but when he communicated his intention to Thomas Conlon, the latter decided to do likewise. So, combining the name of his horse and his benefactor, Terence O'Brien became for all time John K. Stewart, and Thomas Conlon became Thomas Clark. This was the step in which the third party of the tripartite combination did not join. He remained Arthur Conlon.

Since his departure from Nashua Terence had returned there but once. That was about a year after he left. Gossip is that his meeting with his father served only to emphasize the differences; there was no welcome for the prodigal, no unbending of pa[illegible] correspondent sought them out there. They of their brother Terry without resentment. "He away with the Conlon boy," said John. "He wrote to us from Boston a few times, and came home once. Then we heard no more of him until he wrote to us from London. He said he was on his way to Cairo, Egypt, and that he was married and had prospered. He said nothing about having changed his name, so naturally, when I replied, I addressed my letter to 'Terence O'Brien.' It came back unclaimed. That was the last we ever heard of him until we saw in the papers a few days ago that he was dead and had left a fortune over which there was a lawsuit."

Naturally, the news that the long-lost Terry was Stewart, the famous speedometer magnate, was a shock to the O'Briens, as it was to most everybody in Nashua. The crayon enlargement of an old tintype of Terry O'Brien, which hangs in the little home, became a center of interest in the town. Neighbors came in to discuss the amazing disclosures, and, upon their advice, the O'Briens have retained counsel to determine whether they have any claim upon the estate.

One fellow townsman has come forward with partial corroboration of the disclosures. He is James Hallisey, a merchant. "I saw Terence O'Brien and Tom Conlon at a ball game in Boston 22 years ago," he said. "They said they were making horse clippers, but asked me to say nothing about having seen them, as they did not want anyone in Nashua to know where they were or what they were doing."

As a millionaire manufacturer, Stewart purchased expensive homes in Chicago and on Long Island. Two daughters were born, the elder of whom, Marian, is Mrs. Honeyman. The younger, Jean, a cripple from birth, became a celebrity in the newspaper supplements as "the poor little rich girl," who could enjoy so few of the advantages which her father's wealth could have provided.

Upon Stewart's death Leander H. Lachance of Chicago and Martin Taylor of New York were appointed guardians of the girls and administrators of the estate. Their mother was dead. Jean Stewart died last October, and the guardians applied for papers as administrators of her share.

The application was greeted with a legal broadside from Mrs. Honeyman, who not only contested it, but filed papers asking that Lachance and Taylor be deprived of any control over the property.

Through her attorney, Robert Honeyman Sr., who is her father-in-law, she declared that, being of age, she was entitled to ful control of all the estate, as the sole surviving heir. She charged, furthermore, that Lachance, with Taylor's acquiescence, had bought from the Stewart estate, 11,000 shares of stock of the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation, at a price far below its real value. Only by using his position as administrator could he have acquired it at such a price, she stated.

Her allegations contained the additional charge that preposterously large sums had been expended by the administrators in settling the estate, and, finally, she charged that court records had been falsified.

She did not assent to the declaration that her father was Terence O'Brien, and said that the court settlements made with Arthur Conlon and his nephew, Thomas Clark, were unjustifiable. Her attorney professed never to have heard of the Terence O'Brien history.

This statement immediately drew from former Justice Selah B. Strong of the Surrogate Court of Suf-

To Explore, for First Time, Uncle Sam's Unkno

Four white men and an Eskimo woman have landed on the bleak shore of Wrangel Island, and will attempt to spend winter there—Forty years ago, the U. S. S. bark Rodgers visited the place, and survivor of expedition describes what he saw—Free gold was found in crevices of rocks, and blue foxes and vast flocks of birds abounded—Revolting customs of the Siberian natives with whom crew lived when vessel burned -o- -o- -o- -o- -o-

FOR the first time on record, white men will attempt to spend a winter on the northernmost island which belongs to the United States. It is Wrangel Island (sometimes spelled Wrangell), not a portion of Alaska, either, but some 400 miles northwest of Bering Strait, and due north of Siberia's inhospitable coast.

Upon this bleak, ice-strewn and frozen spot, four men and an Eskimo woman of the Vilhjaimur Stefanson expedition landed a few weeks ago, to pit their endurance and their courage against Nature in her unkindest mood.

Should this daring group be able to carry out their project of thoroughly exploring the island, and survive the winter there, they may well have some startling things to tell the world. For one thing, free gold was found near the coast of the island, by previous explorers, and the prediction is being made that Wrangel Island (or Wrangel Land) may turn out to be another Klondike.

Tusks of the ancient mastodon are plentiful on the island, and even complete mastodon bodies, preserved by the ice and cold through thousands of years, were found there, too, during a short tour of the place. So that very interesting remains of forms of animal life which long since vanished from the known world may be found, too.

But will the four white men and the one Eskimo woman be able to live through the terrible cold, the furious tempests, the always-impending mischances to food or shelter of a whole winter on Wrangel Island?

This is what experienced Arctic travelers are asking. With proper care beforehand, in providing the right equipment, enough food and well-constructed shelter, they believe it can be done. But at best the five new residents of Wrangel Island are taking such a chance with death that the setting of their adventure is well worth describing.

Standard books of reference contain only brief accounts of Wrangel Island, stating that it is about 25 miles wide and about 70 miles long, and consists chiefly of naked granite rocks, many of them more than 2000 feet high. Its existence was first reported by natives of the Siberian coast early in the nineteenth century.

Baron Ferdinand Wrangel (or Wrangell), a Russian explorer, and Governor of Alaska from 1829 to 1834, searched for the island, but unsuccessfully. It was first sighted by the American explorer Long, in 1867, and was named by him in honor of Wrangel. Then, in 1881, Capt. C. L. Cooper of the United States Navy landed on the island from the U. S. S. Corwin and formally took possession of the island in the name of the United States. He called it "New Columbia."

But here is an interesting account of a curious region of the world, by an elderly man out in Oakland, Cal., who visited Wrangel Island more than 40 years ago, hunted, prospected and explored there and shared the subsequent dangers of an expedition which ended in disaster while preparing, on the adjacent Siberian coast, a base of supplies for exploring Wrangel Island.

In June, 1881, Patrick Cahill was one of the 36 persons who sailed out of San Francisco Bay on the U. S. S. bark Rodgers, to search for the U. S. S. Jeanette and for two American whaling vessels which had been caught in the ice and had drifted into the unknown.

It was Aug. 24 when the expedition sent a landing party ashore at Herald Island, a small strip of land near Wrangel Island, to search for traces of the missing vessels, and the next day a landing was made on Wrangel Island. The Rodgers had to force her way through a tremendous ice pack, in each case, staggering drunkenly as one great mass of ice after another thundered against her hull.

By nightfall the shore was only half a mile away, and a party was sent ashore in the whaleboat, not including Cahill, to his deep disappointment. Amid cheers from the land and from the deck of the Rodgers, the American flag was raised and two rockets were shot into the air. On the following day a sheltered bay was found, the Rodgers slowly made her way there amid the ice cakes, dropped anchor and remained for more than a month.

Two search parties scoured the coast line in opposite directions, for a clue to the fate of the navy vessel and the whalers, while other men explored part of the interior.

When Cahill first stepped ashore, he was almost overcome by the feeling of his own insignificance, he says. The vast fields of ice, the stretches of empty water between, the desolate appearance of Wrangel Island and the sense that, save for his own companions, there was no human life within a great distance, affected the sturdy young adventurer.

Cahill started out alone over the rocky, barren ground. There was little or no vegetation, except moss. Geese flew up here and there and his gun brought down three of them. He had the strange sensation of setting foot where no white man had ever trod.

Suddenly, Cahill noticed something which glittered brightly in a rocky crevice, and he stopped to see what the substance might be. It was very heavy, pure yellow in color and occurred in good-sized flakes. Cahill gathered several pieces, examined them carefully and then yelled with excitement.

He had discovered gold!

The crevices were strewn with gold which evidently had been washed down by the melting snow. Members of the crew gathered it in empty provision cans. All of them resolved that one day they would return to the island and gather up a fortune. But in the end they were glad to escape from that region with their lives.

The next day Cahill shot several golden plover, and others killed walruses. One of the finds was a mammoth tusk five feet long and six inches in diameter. Later white bears were killed, also ducks, snipe and seal, while numerous skeletons of whale and walrus were found.

"Scientists have had to reconstruct mastodons from their bones only," remarked Cahill, in a recent interview. "On Wrangel Island they can find the entire carcass intact, just as when the animal was alive in prehistoric times. We found four of them. So hard were the huge mastodon tusks that projected from the ice that a rifle bullet would glance off without marking the ivory."

And he declares the blue foxes alone on Wrangel Island are worth a fortune. Apparently these animals had never seen a human being, when the party from the Rodgers landed, and they stood watching the visitors cautiously. Men could approach them within a distance of about 200 yards before the foxes started running. Against the glittering, white background of the ice the foxes were difficult targets.

Cahill lost no opportunity to go ashore. The next few days he spent in searching for minerals and relics near the shore. Wild fowl were plentiful, but he deserted this sport for the fascinating pastime of retrieving relics. Among the trophies thus secured were bows and arrows, clubs, fine stone specimens and many rich samples of quartz. Meanwhile, gold-hunting became a craze with such other members of the crew as could secure the time for it.

One day Cahill ascended a hill, and from the top looked down into a barren valley, the floor of which was completely covered with an army of geese, so many that they looked like snow, and their cries filled the air. He fired two shots into the enormous flock, killing many and causing the others to rise like a white cloud.

"They seemed to take the air away from me," says Cahill, describing the rising geese. "As thousands and thousands of them whirred into the air, wings flapping and crying in alarm, it seemed to me as if they were sucking the air up after them."

On the morning of Sept. 20 Cahill was standing on deck when he heard the sound of men's voices, apparently coming from off the ice near Herald Island. Other members of the crew gathered near, much mystified. It was spooky to hear those voices coming out of nowhere. Perhaps the ghosts of dead explorers were talking from the ice floes!

"Ship ahoy!" shouted the lookout, just then. Binoculars were put into service and, sure enough, about 20 miles away, near Herald Island, lay a whaler, named the Coral.

According to Cahill, the Arctic atmosphere is so rarified that human voices carry for 20 miles, and even farther. The vessels approached each other, and soon their officers and crews were exchanging news and gossip. The same day a whale was killed with bomb gun and harpoon.

As the Rodgers now steamed around Wrangel and Herald islands, to correct errors in the old charts, it was a continuous battle with ice floes, and Cahill declares that "field ice the size of a city block gamboled dangerously about."

One unusual incident occurred Sept. 20, when a big polar bear swam toward the ship in a menacing manner. The animal was killed with rifle fire, and when hauled on board was found to weigh half a ton, which Cahill estimated to be two-thirds bullets and one-third bear.

To form a land base for exploring and observation parties from the Rodgers, the ship was now turned southward toward Siberia, and on Oct. 4 the Rodgers was anchored off Eeteetlan. The men were permitted to go ashore and mingle with the natives, whom they found to be much like Eskimos. They were the Tchuktchis. The crew usually called them the "Chook Chees."

The Tchuktchis lived in domed huts made of walrus hide and subsisted on whale, seal and walrus meat, and on fish. Their clothing was of skins and furs. The huts were divided into an inner and an outer room. The outer compartment was used as a storeroom and for the dogs. In the inner room an open lamp (moss burning in seal oil) heated the small inclosure to such a temperature that it was impossible to wear clothing there. The foul-smelling natives explained that they removed all their garments, not only on account of the heat in the hut, but also because by so doing they would get all the better effect from the clothing when they went outside. Vermin abounded in the huts.

On Oct. 11 a gale struck the ship. Franz Bruch, a sailor on deck, was washed overboard. Before the cry of "Man overboard!" could be raised, another big wave washed him back on deck and set him down with a thump astraddle of the capstan.

The work of preparing a land base for the exploration of Wrangel Island and for further search in that region after traces of the missing ships, was brought to a terrifying close on Nov. 30, when fire broke out in the forehold of the Rodgers. The officers and crew worked desperately, first to save the ship and, when that was found impossible, to carry a supply of food and clothing ashore. Finally, it was a question of whether they could get away from the burning vessel. The broken ice was too thick to permit the passage of a small boat, and was too badly cut up for the men to walk ashore.

After many efforts, with the assistance of two natives, a line was finally gotten ashore, then a heavy cable, which was made fast. Over a bridge of boats, boards and rolling ice all the men escaped from the Rodgers, steadying themselves by the cable. But they were practically without food or shelter, or any clothing but that which they wore.

The Tchuktchis of the vicinity showed themselves hospitable, or the whole party must soon have perished miserably. Food was scarce with the natives themselves, as it usually was, but they shared it so generously that the white men cheerfully overlooked many idiosyncrasies of their hosts.

Cahill saw what happened after the birth of a girl baby. The father, gritting his teeth with rage, tore the infant from the mother's arms, placed it naked on a sled and drove his dog team to the top of a high hill nearby. There the Tchuktchi laid his offspring in the snow and returned home. It was freezing weather, and within a very few minutes the child was dead.

—American Museum of Natural History, New York.

Ordinarily, the childless women of the village would have followed the sled to the hilltop and one of them would have claimed the babe. But this was a bad winter, food was scarce and nobody went up to rescue the child.

One day some of the white men found the body of a native lying on the hillside, and brought it down to the village for burial. They thought it was the corpse of somebody who had gotten lost. But trouble started as soon as they reached the village.

Brandishing spears and knives (of bone) and yelling "Mukee! Mukee!" the Tchuktchis gathered menacingly around the igloos where white men were quartered. It was a shout which sent chills down the back of every member of the shipwrecked crew. They had been in the Arctic long enough to know that "mukee" means to kill.

Mystified by the wrath of the natives, but determined to sell their lives as dearly as possible, the survivors of the Rodgers gathered in a group with the few revolvers, rifles and spears they had and the small supply of ammunition, prepared for a battle to the death.

In the confusion Cahill succeeded in having a few words with Chief Ranaow, who had shown more friendliness to the white men than any of the other natives. After many gesticulations and dire threats, the fury of the "Chook Chees" seemed to cool somewhat, due largely to the intercession of Ranaow. After bloodshed had been averted, the Chief explained to Cahill that the natives did not believe in burying their dead.

With a combination of sign language and such pidgin English as had descended among the Tchuktchis from their rare contacts with whalers and other white men, Ranaow said it was the custom of the locality to take their dead to the top of a hill and leave the bodies there to be consumed by birds and beasts.

"Why plantum?" Ranaow asked, pointing at the corpse which had been the occasion of the riot. "Why you plantum? No grow. Me take top hill. Bye'n bye wolf come. Eatum. Then Ranaow catchum nice fat wolf."

Such was the fearful philosophy of the Tchuktchis: that it profited not to bury the dead when those same bodies might be used to feed the wolves, which, in turn, would provide food and clothing for the living. It was indeed a land of blood and brutality, where only the fittest and the strongest had a chance to survive.

Cahill found that the predominant thought of the natives in that bleak and desolate part of the world was about food. Eat, eat, eat—that was their lives. Getting just enough for

Peter Ruff and the Double Four

Episode Number Two

A NEW CAREER

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

AT PRECISELY the same moment when the wedding guests were seated around the hospitable board of Daisy Villa, a celebration of a somewhat different nature was taking place in the more aristocratic neighborhood of Curzon street. Here, however, the little party was a much smaller one, and the innocent gayety of the gathering at Daisy Villa was entirely lacking. The luncheon table around which the four men were seated presented all the unlovely signs of a meal where self-restraint has been abandoned—where conviviality has passed the bounds of license. Edibles were represented only by a single dish of fruit; the tablecloth, stained with wine and cigar ash, seemed crowded with every sort of bottle and every sort of glass. A magnum of champagne, empty, another half full, stood in the middle of the table; whisky, brandy, liqueurs of various sorts were all represented; glasses—some full, some empty, some filled with cigar ash and cigarette stumps—an ugly sight!

The guest in chief arose. Short, thickset, red-faced, with bulbous eyes, and veins about his temples which just now were unpleasantly prominent, he seemed, indeed, a very fitting person to have been the recipient of such hospitality. He stood clutching a little at the tablecloth and swaying upon his feet. He spoke as a drunken man, but such words as he pronounced clearly showed him to be possessed of a voice naturally thick and raspy. It was obvious that he was a person of entirely different class from his three companions.

"G—gentlemen," he said, "I must be off. I thank you very much for this—hospitality. Honored, I'm sure, to have sat down in such—such company. Good afternoon, all!"

He lurched a little toward the door, but his neighbor at the table—who was also his host—caught hold of his coat-tail and pulled him back into his chair.

"No hurry, Masters," he said. "One more liqueur, eh? It's a raw afternoon."

"N—not another drop, Sir Richard!" the man declared. "Not another drop to drink. I am very much obliged to you all, but I must be off. Must be off," he repeated, making another effort to rise.

His host held him by the arm. The man resented it—he showed signs of anger.

"D—n it all! I—I'm not a prisoner, am I?" he exclaimed, angrily. "Tell you I've got—appointment—club. Can't you see it's past 5 o'clock?"

"That's all right, Masters," the man whom he had addressed as Sir Richard declared, soothingly. "We want just a word with you on business first, before you go—Col. Dickinson, Lord Merries and myself."

Masters shook his head.

"See you tomorrow," he declared. "No time to talk business now. Let me go!"

He made another attempt to rise, which his host also prevented.

"Masters, don't be a fool!" the latter said, firmly. "You've got to hear what we want to say to you. Sit down and listen."

Masters relapsed sullenly into his chair. His little eyes seemed to creep closer to one another. So they wanted to talk business! Perhaps it was for that reason that they had bidden him sit at their table—had entertained him so well! The very thought cleared his brain.

"Go on," he said, shortly.

Sir Richard lit a cigarette and leaned further back in his chair. He was a man apparently about 50 years of age—tall, well dressed, with good features, save for his mouth, which resembled more than anything a rat-trap. He was perfectly bald, and he had the air of a man who was a careful liver. His eyes were bright, almost beadlike; his fingers long and a trifle over-manicured. One would have judged him to be what he was—a man of fashion and a patron of the turf.

"Masters," he said, "we are all old friends here. We want to speak to you plainly. We three have had a try, as you know—Merries, Dickinson and myself—to make the coup of our lives. We failed, and we're up against it hard."

"Very hard, indeed," Lord Merries murmured, softly.

"Deuced hard!" Col. Dickinson echoed.

Masters was sitting tight, breathing a little hard, looking fixedly at his host.

"Take my own case first," the latter continued. "I am Sir Richard Dyson, ninth Baronet, with estates in Wiltshire and Scotland, and a town house in Cleveland place. I belong to the proper clubs for a man in my position, and, somehow or other—we won't say how—I have managed to pay my way. There isn't an acre of my property that isn't mortgaged for more than its value. My town house—well, it doesn't belong to me at all! I have 26,000 pounds to pay you on Monday. To save my life, I could not raise 26,000 farthings! So much for me."

The man Masters ground his teeth.

"So much for you!" he muttered.

"Take the next case," Sir Richard continued, "of my friend Merries here. Merries is an Earl, it is true, but he never had a penny to bless himself with. He's tried acting, reporting, marrying—anything to make an honest living. So far, I am afraid, we must consider Lord Merries as something of a failure, eh?"

"A rotten failure, I should say," that young nobleman declared, gloomily.

"Lord Merries is, to put it briefly, financially unsound," Sir Richard declared.

"What is the amount of your debt to Mr. Masters, Jim?"

"Eleven thousand two hundred pounds," Lord Merries answered.

"And we may take it, I presume, for granted that you have not that sum, nor anything like it, at your disposal?" Sir Richard asked.

"Not a fiver!" Lord Merries declared with emphasis.

"We come now, Mr. Masters, to our friend Col. Dickinson," Sir Richard continued. "Col. Dickinson is, perhaps, in a more favorable situation than any of us. He has a small but regular income, and he has expectations which it is not possible to mortgage fully. At the same time, it may be many years before they can—er—fructify. He is, therefore, with us in this somewhat unpleasant predicament in which we find ourselves."

"Cut it short," Masters growled. "I'm sick of so much talk. What's it all mean?"

"It means simply this, Mr. Masters," Sir Richard said, "we want you to take six months' bills for our indebtedness to you."

Masters rose to his feet. His thick lips were drawn a little apart. He had the appearance of a savage and discontented animal.

"So that's why I've been asked here and fed up with wine and stuff, eh?" he exclaimed thickly. "Well, my answer to you is soon given. NO! I'll take bills from no man! My terms are cash on settling day—cash to pay or cash to receive. I'll have no other!"

Sir Richard rose also to his feet.

"Mr. Masters, I beg of you to be reasonable," he said. "You'll do yourself no good by adopting this attitude. Facts are facts. We haven't got a thousand pounds between us."

"I've heard that sort of a tale before," Masters answered, with a sneer. "Job Masters is too old a bird to be caught by such chaff. I'll take my risks, gentlemen. I'll take my risks."

He moved toward the door. No one spoke a word. The silence as he crossed the room seemed a little ominous. He looked over his shoulder. They were all three standing in their places, looking at him. A vague sense of uneasiness disturbed his equanimity.

"No offense, gents," he said, "and good afternoon!"

Still no reply. He reached the door and turned the handle. The door was fast. He shook it—gently at first, and then violently. Suddenly he realized that it was locked. He turned sharply around.

"What game's this?" he exclaimed, fiercely. "Let me out!"

They stood in their places without movement. There was something a little ominous in their silence. Masters was fast becoming a sober man.

"Let me out of here," he exclaimed, "or I'll break the door down!"

Sir Richard Dyson came slowly towards him. There was something in his appearance which terrified Masters. He raised his fist to strike the door. He was a fighting man, but he felt a sudden sense of impotence.

"Mr. Masters," Sir Richard said, suavely, "the truth is that we cannot afford to let you go—unless you agree to do what we have asked. You see, we really have not the money or any way of raising it—and the inconvenience of being posted you have yourself pointed out. Change your mind, Mr. Masters. Take those bills. We'll do our best to meet them."

"I'll do nothing of that sort," Masters answered, striking the door fiercely with his clenched fist. "I'll have cash—nothing but the cash!"

There was a dull, sickening thud, and the bookmaker went over like a shot rabbit. His legs twitched for a moment—a little moan that was scarcely audible broke from his lips. Then he lay quite still. Sir Richard bent over him with the life preserver still in his hand.

"I've done it!" he muttered, hoarsely. "One blow! Thank heaven, he didn't want another. His skull was as soft as a pudding! Ugh!"

He turned away. The man who lay stretched upon the floor was an ugly sight. His two companions, cowering over the table, were not much better. Dyson's trembling fingers went out for the brandy decanter. Half of what he poured out was spilled upon the tablecloth. The rest he drank from a tumbler, neat.

"It's nervous work, this, you fellows," he said, hoarsely.

"It's hellish!" Dickinson answered. "Let's have some air in the room. My God, it's close!"

He sank back in his chair, white to the lips. Dyson looked at him sharply.

"Look here," he exclaimed, "I hold you both to our bargain! I was to be the one he attacked and who struck the blow—in self-defense! Remember that—it was in self-defense! I've done it! I've done my share! I hope to God I'll forget it some day. Andrew, you know your task. Be a man, and get to work!"

Dickinson rose to his feet unsteadily.

"Yes!" he said. "What was it? I have forgotten, for the moment, but I am ready."

"You must get his betting book from his pocket," Sir Richard directed. "Then you must help Merries downstairs with him, and into the car. Merries is—to get rid of him."

Merries shivered. His hand, too, went out for the brandy.

"To get rid of him!" he muttered. "It sounds easy!"

"It is easy," Sir Richard declared. "You have only

Between him and the girl, stretched upon the floor, was the body of a man in a huge motor coat to keep your nerve, and the thing is done. No one will see him inside the car, in that motoring coat and glasses. You can drive somewhere out into the country and leave him."

"Leave him!" Merries repeated, trembling. "Leave him—yes!"

Neither of the two men moved.

"I must do more than my share, I suppose," Sir Richard said, contemptuously. "Come!"

They dragged the man's body onto a chair, wrapped a huge coat around him, tied a motoring cap under his chin, fixed goggles over his eyes. Sir Richard strolled into the hall and opened the front door. He stood there for a moment, looking up and down the street. When he gave the signal they dragged him out, supported between them, across the pavement, into the car. Ugh! His attitude was so natural as to be absolutely ghastly. Merries started the car and sprang into the driver's seat. There were people in the square now, but the figure reclining in the dark, cushioned interior looked perfectly natural.

"So long, Jimmy," Sir Richard called out. "See you this evening."

Peter Ruff, summoned by telephone from his sitting room, slipped down the stairs like a cat—noiseless, swift. The voice which had summoned him had been the voice of his secretary—a voice almost unrecognizable—a voice shaken with fear. Fear? No, it had been terror!

On the landing below, exactly underneath the room from which he had descended, there was a door upon which his name was written upon a small brass plate—MR. PETER RUFF. He opened and closed it behind him with a swift movement which he had practiced in his idle moments. He found himself looking in upon a curious scene.

Miss Brown, with the radiance of her hair effectually concealed, in plain black skirt and simple blouse—the ideal secretary—had risen from the seat in front of her typewriter, and was standing facing the door through which he had entered, with a small revolver—which he had given her for a birthday present only the day before—clasped in her outstretched hand. The object of her solicitude was, it seemed to Peter Ruff, the most pitiful-looking object upon which he had ever looked. The hours had dwelt with Merries as the years with some people, and worse. He had lost his cap; his hair hung over his forehead in wild confusion; his eyes were red, bloodshot, and absolutely aflame with the terrors through which he had lived—underneath them the black marks might have been traced with a charcoal pencil. His cheeks were livid save for one burning spot. His clothes, too, were in disorder—the starch had gone from his collar, his tie hung loosely outside his waistcoat. He was cowering back against the wall. And between him and the girl, stretched upon the floor, was the body of a man in a huge motor coat, a limp, inert mass which neither moved nor seemed to have any sign of life. No wonder that Peter Ruff looked around his office, whose serenity had been so tragically disturbed, with an air of mild surprise.

"Dear me," he exclaimed, "something seems to have happened! My dear Violet, you can put that revolver away. I have secured the door."

Her hand fell to her side. She gave a little shiver of relief. Peter Ruff nodded.

"That is more comfortable," he declared. "Now, perhaps, you will explain"——

"That young man," she interrupted, "or lunatic—whatever he calls himself—burst in here a few minutes ago, dragging—that!" She pointed to the motionless figure upon the floor. "If I had not stopped him, he woud have bolted off without a word of explanation."

Peter Ruff, with his back against the door, shook his head gravely.

"My dear Lord Merries," he said, "my office is not a mortuary."

Merries gasped.

"You know me, then?" he muttered, hoarsely.

"Of course," Ruff answered. "It is my profession to know everybody. Go and sit down upon that easy chair and drink the brandy and soda which Miss Brown is about to mix for you. That's right."

Merries staggered across the room and half fell into an easy chair. He leaned over the side with his face buried in his hands, unable still to face the horror which lay upon the floor. A few seconds later the tumbler of brandy and soda was in his hands. He drank it like a man who drains fresh life into his veins.

"Perhaps now," Peter Ruff suggested, pointing to the motionless figure, "you can give me some explanation as to this!"

Merries looked away from him all the time he was speaking. His voice was thick and nervous.

"There were three of us lunching together," he began. "Four in all. There was a dispute, and this man threatened us. Afterwards there was a fight. It fell to my lot to take him away, and I can't get rid of him! I can't get rid of him!" he repeated, with something that sounded like a sob.

"I still do not see," Peter Ruff argued, "why you should have brought him here and deposited him upon my perfectly new carpet."

"You are Peter Ruff," Merries declared. "'Crime investigator and private detective,' you call yourself. You are used to this sort of thing. You will know what to do with it. It is part of your business."

"I can assure you," Peter Ruff answered, "that you are under a delusion as to the details of my profession. I am Peter Ruff," he admitted, "and I call myself a crime investigator—in fact, I am the only one worth speaking of in the world. But I certainly deny that I am used to having dead bodies deposited upon my carpet, and that I make a habit of disposing of them—especially gratis."

Merries tore open his coat.

"Listen," he said, in a voice shaking hysterically, "I must get rid of it or go mad. For two hours I have driven about in a motor car with—it for a passenger. I drove to a quiet spot and I tried to lift it out—a policeman rode up! I tried again—a man rushed by on a motor cycle, and turned to look at me! I tried a few minutes later—the policeman came back! It was always the same. The night seemed to have eyes. I was watched everywhere. The—the face began to mock me. I'll swear that I heard it chuckle once!"

Peter Ruff moved a little further away.

"I don't think I'll have anything to do with it," he declared. "I don't like your description at all."

"It'll be all right with you," Merries declared eagerly. "It's my nerves, that's all. See here," he added, tearing a pocketbook from his coat. "I have 370 pounds saved up in case I had to bolt. I'll keep 70—300 for you—to dispose of it!"

Ruff leaned over the motionless body, looked into its face, and nodded.

"Masters, the bookmaker," he remarked. "H'm! I did hear that he had a lot of money coming to him over the Cambridgeshire."

Merries shuddered.

"May I go?" he pleaded. "There's the 300 on the table. For God's sake, let me go!"

Peter Ruff nodded.

"I wish you'd saved a little more," he said. "However"——

He turned the lock and Merries rushed out of the room. Ruff looked across the room towards his secretary.

"Ring up 1535 Central," he ordered, sharply.

* * * * * *

Peter Ruff had descended from his apartments on the top floor of the building, in a new brown suit with which he was violently displeased, to meet a caller.

"I am sorry to intrude—Mr. Ruff, I believe it is?" Sir Richard Dyson said, a little irritably—"but I have not a great deal of time to spare"——

"Most natural!" Peter Ruff declared. "Pray take a chair, Sir Richard. You want to know, of course, about Lord Merries and poor Masters."

Sir Richard stared at his questioner for a moment, without speech. Once more the fear which he had succeeded in banishing for a while, shone out of his eyes—revealed itself in the whiteness of his face.

"Try the easy chair, Sir Richard," Ruff continued, pleasantly. "Leave your hat and cane on the table there, and make yourself comfortable. I should like to understand exactly what you have come to me for."

Sir Richard moved his head toward Miss Brown.

"My business with you," he said, "is more than ordinarily private. I have the honor of knowing Miss"——

"Miss Brown," Peter interrupted, quickly. "In these offices, this young lady's name is Miss Violet Brown."

Sir Richard shrugged his shoulders.

"It is of no importance," he said, "only, as you may understand, my business with you scarcely requires the presence of a third party, even one with the discretion which I am sure Miss—Brown possesses."

"In these matters," Ruff answered, "my secretary does not exist apart from myself. Her presence is necessary. She takes down in shorthand notes of our conversation. I have a shocking memory, and there are always points which I forget. At the conclusion of our business, whatever it may be, these notes are destroyed. I could not work without them."

Sir Richard glanced a little doubtfully at the long, slim back of the girl who sat with her face turned away from him.

"Of course," he began, "if you make yourself personally responsible for her discretion"——

"I am willing to do so," Ruff interrupted, brusquely. "I guarantee it. Go on, please."

"I do not know, of course, where you got your information from," Sir Richard began, "but it is perfectly true that I have come here to consult you upon a matter in which the two people whose names you have mentioned are concerned. The disappearance of Job Masters is, of course, common talk; but I cannot tell what has led you to associate it with the temporary absence of Lord Merries from this country."

"Let me ask you this question," Ruff said. "How are you affected by the disappearance of Masters?"

"Indirectly, it has caused me a great deal of inconvenience," Sir Richard declared.

"Facts, please," murmured Peter.

"It has been rumored," Sir Richard admitted, "that I owed Masters a large sum of money which I could not pay."

"Anything else?"

"It has also been rumored," Sir Richard continued, "that he was seen to enter my house that day, that he remained there until late in the afternoon."

"Did he?" asked Ruff.

"Certainly not," Sir Richard answered.

Peter Ruff yawned for a moment, but covered the indiscretion with his hand.

"Respecting this inconvenience," he said, "which you admit that the disappearance of Job Masters has caused you, what is its tangible side?"

Sir Richard drew his chair a little nearer to the table where Ruff was sitting. His voice dropped almost to a whisper.

"It seems absurd," he said, "and yet, what I tell you is the truth. I have been followed about—shadowed, in fact—for several days. Men even in my own social circle, seem to hold aloof from me. It is as though," he continued slowly, "people were beginning to suspect me of being connected in some way with the man's disappearance."

Ruff, who had been making figures with a pencil on the edge of his blotting paper, suddenly turned round. His eyes flashed with a new light as they became fixed upon his companion's.

Hunting on a 65,000-Acre Game Preserve

will be none of the excesses so frequently found at public resorts.

The Department of Conservation has prescribed a simple procedure for sportsmen who wish to shoot on the State's preserve. First of all, a State license is required. This costs $1, if the applicant is a resident of Louisiana, $15 if a non-resident, for the privileges are not selfishly limited to Louisianans only. After the license, it is required that a permit be obtained. This is issued without added cost. Both license and permit are to be obtained in New Orleans at the offices of the department, but while the license can be secured elsewhere, the permit must come from the department.

The permit serves as a registration, and through it the department can regulate the number of hunters upon the preserve. Having obtained the license and permit, the route to the preserve is from New Orleans' wharfs by launch to just beyond Quarantine and Pilot Town, or else from Gretna, a suburb of New Orleans, by rail to Buras, thence by launch downstream to the resort. Upon arrival, the hunter is required to report to the department's agent, exhibiting his permit. After that he is required only to report his daily bag of game.

The law permits each hunter to shoot 25 ducks each day, shooting only in daylight hours. As a matter of fact, very few sportsmen take advantage of the privilege of late afternoon shooting. This is a period when the birds are feeding and it is more or less an unwritten law with the veteran sportsmen that they should not be molested. So far as the law is concerned, however, late-day shooting is possible, and John Smith, if he has failed to bag his 25 birds before noonday, can go merrily on his way, shooting to his heart's content until sunset.

The ducks to be found in the preserve include mallards, canvasbacks, pintails, teal, spoonbills, gray ducks, the dos gris or scaup, the red-head and many others. There are also myriads of geese, snipe, rails and other waterfowl.

If John Smith prefers a morning's shoot for mallards, he likely will find them more or less congregated in spots over the preserve. If he wants to try his skill at the smaller, faster-flying teal, these he will find at other places. A day after geese will mean a trip to still another section of the preserve, and so on. Veteran guides in the region know well the various places where the different kinds of fowl are to be found and usually their first inquiry, when hunter and guide meet in the early morning, is about what kind of shooting the hunter prefers.

In the interest of perpetuating the preserve for future generations, the Department of Conservation has seen fit to permit no hunting upon one of the largest lagoons in the preserve. It will be maintained always as a sanctuary for the birds.

Strange Story of Terry O'Brien - -

folk County the following remarks: "If the Honeymans are starting trouble, and are now sore because information which they do not like is becoming public, it is their own fault. The Conlon settlement is not news to them, and they should have expected the publicity they courted."

Further corroboration was forthcoming from a business associate, who said that several years ago, when Thomas Conlon, or "Thomas Clark," was fatally injured in the Glidden automobile tour, his old comrade, Stewart, arranged to have the Twentieth Century Limited train stop at Bryan, Ok., in order that he might reach Conlon's bedside before he died. The attempt was successful, and the "Musketeers" were together when one of them died. Stewart made a settlement of money on the widow.

In the face of these known facts, and many others beside, there would not seem to be much doubt about John K. Stewart's origin. But there is one man who should be able to settle it. He is Arthur Conlon, the surviving member of the trio.

Conlon owns a ranch near Yakima, Wash. There he was seen by a Post-Dispatch special correspondent. "Stewart was Terence O'Brien," he said. "There isn't any doubt about that. Our claim against the estate, however, was based on the business arrangement into which we entered."

It is possible that the entire history of Stewart's life may be aired in the courts. With the O'Briens preparing to claim part of the estate, and the Honeymans demanding an accounting from the administrators, it appears that a lot of litigation will be necessary to clear up the tangle which this most unusual man left behind.

"And are you not?" he asked, calmly.

Sir Richard bore himself well. For a moment he had shrunk back. Then he half rose to his feet.

"Mr. Ruff!" he said, "I must protest"——

"Stop!"

Peter Ruff used no violent gesture. Only his forefinger tapped the desk in front of him. His voice was as smooth as velvet.

"Tell me as much or as little as you please, Sir Richard," he said, "but let that little or that much be the truth! On those terms only I may be able to help you. You do not go to your physician and expect him to prescribe to you while you conceal your symptoms, or to your lawyer for advice and tell him half the truth. I am not asking for your confidence. I simply tell you that you are wasting your time and mine if you choose to withhold it."

Sir Richard was silent. He recognized a new quality in the man—but the truth was an awful thing to tell! He considered—then told.

Ruff briskly asked Sir Richard two questions. "In alluding to your heavy settlement with Masters, you said just now that you could have paid him—then."

"Quite so," Sir Richard admitted. "That is the rotten part of the whole affair. Four days later a wonderful double came off—one in which we were all interested, and one which not one of us expected. We've drawn a considerable amount already from one or two bookies, and I believe even Masters owes us a bit now."

"Thank you," Ruff said. "I think that I know everything now. My fee is 500 guineas."

Sir Richard looked at him.

"What?" he exclaimed.

"Five hundred guineas," Ruff repeated.

"For a consultation?" Sir Richard asked.

Peter Ruff shook his head.

"More than that," he said. "You are a brave man in your way, Sir Richard Dyson, but you are going about now shivering under a load of fear. It sits like a devil incarnate upon your shoulders. It poisons the air wherever you go. Write your check, Sir Richard, and you can leave that little black devil in my waste basket. You are under my protection. Nothing will happen to you."

Sir Richard sat like a man mesmerized. The little man with the amiable expression and the badly fitting suit was leaning back in his chair, his finger tips pressed together, waiting.

"Nothing will happen!" Sir Richard repeated, incredulously.

"Certainly not. I guarantee you against any inconvenience which might arise to you from this recent unfortunate affair. Isn't that all you want?"

"It's all I want, certainly," Sir Richard declared, "but I must understand a little how you propose to secure my immunity."

Ruff shook his head.

"I have my own methods," he said. "I can help only those who trust me."

Sir Richard drew a checkbook from his pocket. "I don't know why I should believe in you," he said, as he wrote the check.

"But you do," Peter Ruff said, smiling. "Fortunately for you, you do!"

* * * * * * * *

It was not so easy to impart a similar confidence into the breast of Col. Dickinson, with whom Sir Richard dined that night tete-a-tete. Dickinson was inclined to think that Sir Richard had been "had."

"You've paid a ridiculous fee," he argued, "and all that you have in return is the fellow's promise to see you through. It isn't like you to part with money so easily, Richard. Did he hypnotize you?"

"I don't think so," Sir Richard answered. "I wasn't conscious of it."

"What sort of a fellow is he?" Dickinson asked.

Sir Richard looked reflectively into his glass.

"He's a vulgar sort of little Johnny," he said. "Looks as though he were always dressed in new clothes and couldn't get used to them."

Three men entered the room. Two remained in the background. John Dory came forward towards the table.

"Sir Richard Dyson," he said, gravely, "I have come upon an unpleasant errand."

"Go on," Sir Richard said, fingering something hard in the inside pocket of his coat.

"I have a warrant for your arrest," Dory continued, "in connection with the disappearance of Job Masters on Saturday, the 10th of November last. I will read the terms of the warrant, if you choose. It is my duty to warn you that anything you may now say can be used in evidence against you. This gentleman, I believe, is Col. Dickinson?"

"That is my name, sir," Dickinson answered, with unexpected fortitude.

"I regret to say," the detective continued, "that I have also a warrant for your arrest in connection with the same matter."

Sir Richard had hold of the butt end of his revolver then. Like grisly phantoms, the thoughts chased one another through his brain. Should he shoot and end it—pass into black nothingness—escape disgrace, but die like a rat in a corner? His finger was upon the trigger. Then suddenly his heart gave a great leap. He raised his head as though listening. Something flashed in his eyes—something that was almost like hope. There was no mistaking that voice which he heard in the hall! He made a great rally.

"I can only conclude," he said, turning to the detective, "that you have made some absurd blunder. If you really possess the warrants you speak of, however, Col. Dickinson and I will accompany you wherever you choose."

Then the door opened and Peter Ruff walked in, followed by Job Masters, whose head was still bandaged, and who seemed to have lost a little flesh and a lot of color. Peter Ruff looked around apologetically. He seemed surprised not to find Sir Richard Dyson and Col. Dickinson alone. He seemed more than ever surprised to recognize Dory.

"I trust," he said, smoothly, "that our visit is not inopportune. Sir Richard Dyson, I believe?" he continued, bowing. "My friend, Mr. Masters here, has consulted me as to the loss of a betting book, and we ventured to call to ask you, sir, if by any chance on his recent visit to your house"——

"God in heaven, it's Masters!" Dyson exclaimed. "It's Job Masters!"

"That's me, sir," Masters admitted. "Mr. Ruff thought you might be able to help me find that book."

Sir Richard swayed upon his feet. Then the blood rushed once more through his veins.

"Your book's here in my cabinet, safe enough," he said. "You left it here after our luncheon that day. Where on earth have you been to, man?" he continued. "We want some money from you over Myopia."

"I'll pay all right, sir," Masters answered. "Fact is, after our luncheon party I'm afraid I got a bit fuddled. I don't seem to remember much."

He sat down a little heavily. Peter Ruff hastened to the table and took up a glass.

"You will excuse me if I give him a little brandy, won't you, sir?" he said. "He's really not quite fit for getting about yet, but he was worrying about his book."

"Give him all the brandy he can drink," Sir Richard answered.

The detective's face had been a study. He knew Masters well enough by sight—there was no doubt about his identity! His teeth came together with an angry little click. He had made a mistake! It was a thing which would be remembered against him forever! It was as bad as his failure to arrest that young man at Daisy Villa.

"Your visit, Masters," Sir Richard said, with a curious smile at the corners of his lips, "is, in some respects, a little opportune. About that little matter we were speaking of," he continued, turning towards the detective.

"We have only to offer you our apologies, Sir Richard," Dory answered.

"Do I understand, sir, that your name is Ruff—Peter Ruff?" he asked.

"That is my name, sir," Peter Ruff admitted, pleasantly. "Yours, I believe, is Dory. We are likely to come across one another now and then, I suppose. Glad to know you."

The detective stood quite still, and there was no geniality in his face.

"I wonder—have we ever met before?" he asked, without removing his eyes from the other's face. Peter Ruff smiled.

"Not professionally, at any rate," he answered. "I know that at Scotland Yard you don't think much of us small fry, but we find out things sometimes!"

"Why didn't you contradict all those rumors as to his disappearance?" the detective asked, pointing to where Job Masters was contentedly sipping his brandy and water.

"I was acting for my client, and in my own interests," replied Peter. "It was surely no part of my duty to save you gentlemen at Scotland Yard from hunting up mare's nests!"

John Dory went out, followed by his men. Sir Richard took Peter by the arm, and, leading him to the sideboard, mixed him a drink.

"Peter Ruff," he said, "you're a clever scoundrel but you've earned your 500 guineas. Hang it, you're welcome to them! Is there anything else I can do for you?"

Peter Ruff raised his glass and set it down again. Once more he eyed with admiration his client's well-turned-out figure.

"You might give me a letter to your tailors, Sir Richard," he begged.

Sir Richard laughed outright—it was some time since he had laughed!

"You shall have it, Peter Ruff," he declared, raising his glass—"and here's to you!"

To Explore Uncle Sam's Most Desolate Island

a bare subsistence entailed a constant struggle. Every thought was directed to that end.

In the disposal of the dead the natives were thinking about the effect upon their food supply. The same idea governed their attitude toward the girl babies, who consumed, but could never be expected to become hunters and providers of food. When some of the natives killed their aged fathers, it was that the rest of the family group might have more to eat.

Direct cannibalism occurs among both the whites and natives in the Arctic regions, according to Cahill, but apparently only in cases of extremity, as when ice-bound. A party of natives, faced by starvation, would kill the weakest member and devour the body. Then, if it were necessary, they would kill the next weakest, and so on. But they would not resort to cannibalism until all the supplies of walrus, seal and fish had been used up, and also the sledge dogs.

One of the Rodgers' crew named Loudon had a narrow escape from drifting away into the open sea on a big ice cake, in company with a native. The two men saved themselves, by maneuvering with an ice pole and seal line, but Loudon was severely lectured by a ship's officer for having taken such a risk.

"You have orders not to go on the ice," said the officer. "You would have starved to death in a few days."

"Oh, I don't know," replied the seaman, in a matter-of-fact tone. "That was a good fat Eskimo." And when the same ship's officer talked with the native, praising him for the cleverness shown and promising him an ax for saving the white man, the officer alluded to the danger of starvation and declared both men might have died. The native shook his head vigorously and showed his teeth.

"Me eatum Loudon," he growled.

After about a month of the starvation diet and vermin-infested quarters which constituted Chief Ranaow's hospitality, Cahill decided that he must have a change, and he accordingly moved to another village, which he calls South Head. It was just another Siberian village, its huts made of reindeer skin and with higher ceilings than those at Eeteetlan. Here he was fortunate in becoming the guest of Chief Kalkot.

In this village Cahill witnessed a strange and terrible sight, nothing less than a human sacrifice. Cries of terror issuing from one of the large huts caused Cahill to approach it, where he saw an old man being strangled to death to appease the devils and save the life of a boy.

Boys must not be allowed to die. Their lives are precious. But old men are about to die, anyway. They eat up food that should go to the strong, hence they must be sacrificed. That was the native belief.

Tuccare, brother of Chief Kalkot, was raising a boy who had sworn to slay him when he became a man. Tuccare had killed the boy's father, and by a law of the tribe he must raise the boy, although well knowing that some day the lad would stick a walrus bone between Tuccare's ribs.

While Cahill was living at the Chief's hut, Kalkot killed his own father because the old man could no longer digest the raw flesh which was their diet. Cahill was indignant that this man, the most intelligent of the tribe, should have committed such a foul murder. Kalkot explained that some day his son would "mukee" him, too, and that it was the custom for children to murder their parents when they became helpless.

Kalkot had already chosen the son who would eventually slay him. It was considered a great honor to be chosen for such a task. And the Chief explained that he was Chief only because he could whip any other man in the village. And he said further that some day, when a stronger man threw him, the victor would rule and Kalkot would soon be killed by his son.

Yet these people had some of the noblest traits known to the human race, including hospitality and personal courage.

Cahill says it is not true that the natives of Arctic Siberia enjoy cold weather. While they have become so acclimated to zero temperatures that they probably could not survive in a torrid zone, yet they long for warmth. The discovery of their feelings in this matter was made by an early missionary who went among them preaching the fear of the old Biblical hell.

In vivid terms he described the flaming furnaces of the lower region, where everything was at a white heat and wicked people were baked through all eternity. He expected to terrify the natives, but all were so charmed with the idea of being warm forever that all expressed a great desire to go to hell.

"Me go to hell," was on every lip.

The missionary was aghast that all his listeners should be so delighted with the chance of going to perdition, but he soon discovered the reason, and altered his description of the nether world. Later missionaries have profited by the experience of the first one, and are careful to omit the traditional fire in describing hell.

"Ship ahoy!"

It was this cry, from a dozen throats simultaneously, which aroused the camp at North Head (whither Cahill had gone several days before) on May 10, 1882. The vessel was the North Star, commanded by Capt. Owen, which had come with orders to place the ship at the disposal of the Rodgers' crew, and to land them at St. Michael, Alaska, or at San Francisco, as they preferred.

Some of the officers and men decided to go home through Russia, but the others embarked on the North Star, on May 14. Early the next morning these men were transferred to the U. S. S. Corwin, which then proceeded to San Francisco. The rescued men were still afflicted with vermin, and the other sailors kept away from them.

On June 23, 1882, almost a year after the departure of the Rodgers, the Corwin entered San Francisco Bay. The doctor at Mare Island sent 13 men to the hospital, including Cahill. Following his discharge from the navy, at Brooklyn Navy Yard, Cahill returned to San Francisco and built up a large business. He is now retired and lives at Oakland.

What's Wrong in This Picture?

It's so easy to make embarrassing mistakes in public—so easy to commit blunders that make people misjudge you. Can you find the mistake or mistakes that are being made in this picture? Can you point out what is wrong? If you are not sure, read the interesting article below, and perhaps you will be able to find out.

IT is a mark of extreme good breeding and culture to be able to do at all times exactly what is correct. This is especially true in public where strangers judge us by what we do and say. The existence of fixed rules of etiquette makes it easy for people to know whether we are making mistakes or whether we are doing the thing that is absolutely correct and cultured. They are quick to judge—and quick to condemn. It depends entirely upon our knowledge of the important little rules of etiquette whether they respect and admire us, or receive an entirely wrong and prejudiced impression.

In public, many little questions of good conduct arise. By public, we mean at the theater, in the street, on the train, in the restaurant and hotel—wherever men and women who are strangers mingle together and judge one another by action and speech. It is not enough to know that one is well-bred. One must see that the strangers one meets every day get no impression to the contrary.

Do you know the little rules of good conduct that divide the cultured from the uncultured, that serve as a barrier to keep the ill-bred out of the circles where they would be awkward and embarrassed? Do you know the important rules of etiquette that men of good society must observe, that women of good society are expected to follow rigidly? Perhaps the following questions will help you find out just how much you know about etiquette.

Do You Know—

How to introduce men and women correctly?

How to answer a dinner invitation?

How to greet a man or woman acquaintance in public?

How to plan church and house weddings?

How to use table silver properly?

How to word invitations and acknowledgments?

How to avoid blunders at the theater and opera?

How to do at all times the thing that is absolutely correct and cultured?

Etiquette at the Theater

When a man and woman walk down the theater aisle together, should the man precede the woman? May they walk arm-in-arm? When the usher indicates their places, should the woman enter first, or the man?

Many puzzling questions of conduct confront the members of a theater party who occupy a box. Which seats should the women take and which the men? Should the women remove their hats—or don't they wear any? What should women wear to the theater in the evening? What should men wear? Is it correct for a man to leave a woman alone during intermission?

At the theater, evidences of good conduct can be more strikingly portrayed than perhaps anywhere else. Here, with people surrounding us on all sides, we are admired as being cultured, well-poised and attractive, or we are looked upon as coarse and ill-bred. It depends entirely upon how well one knows and follows the rules of etiquette.

At the Dance

How should the man ask a woman to dance? What should he say to her when the music ceases and he must return to his original partner? Do you know the correct dancing positions?

How should a woman accept a dance and how should she refuse it? How can the embarrassment of being a wall-flower be avoided? How many times may a girl dance with the same partner without breaking the rules of etiquette? Is it considered correct, in social circles, for a young woman to wander away from the ballroom with her partner?

Very often introductions must be made in the ball-room. Should a man be introduced to a woman, or a woman to a man? Is it correct to say, Miss Brown meet Mr. Smith or Mr. Smith, meet Miss Brown? Which of these two forms is correct: Bobby, this is Mrs. Smith, or Mrs. Smith, this is Bobby? When introducing a married woman and a single woman should you say Mrs. Brown, allow me to present Miss Smith or Miss Smith, allow me to present Mrs. Brown?

When leaving the ball-room, is the guest expected to thank the hostess? What should the woman guest say when she leaves? What should the gentleman guest say? It is only by knowing exactly what is correct, that one can avoid the embarrassment and humiliation of social blunders, and win the respect and admiration of those with whom one comes into contact.

In the Street

There are countless tests of good manners that distinguish the well-bred in public. For instance, the man must know exactly what is correct when he is walking with a young woman. According to etiquette, is it ever permissible for a man to take a woman's arm? May a woman take a gentleman's arm? When walking with two women, should a man take his place between them or on the outside?

When is it permissible for a man to pay a woman's fare on the street car or railroad? Who enters the car first, the woman or the man? Who leaves the car first?

If a man and woman who have met only once before encounter each other in the street, who should make the first sign of recognition? Is the woman expected to smile and nod before the gentleman raises his hat? On what occasion should the hat be raised?

People of culture can be recognized at once. They know exactly what to do and say on every occasion, and because they know that they are doing absolutely what is correct, they are calm, well-poised, dignified. They are able to mingle with the most highly cultivated people, in the highest social circles, and yet be entirely at ease.

The Book of Etiquette

There have probably been times when you suffered embarrassment because you did not know exactly what to do or say. There have probably been times when you wished you had some definite information regarding certain problems of conduct when you wondered how you could have avoided a certain blunder.

The Book of Etiquette is recognized as one of the most dependable and reliable authorities on the conduct of good society. It has solved the problems of thousands of men and women. It has shown them how to be well-poised and at ease even among the most brilliant celebrities. It has shown them how to meet embarrassing moments with a calm dignity. It has made it possible for them to do and say and write and wear at all times only what is entirely correct.

In the Book of Etiquette, now published in two large volumes, you will find chapters on dinner etiquette and dance etiquette, chapters on the etiquette of engagements and weddings, chapters on teas and parties and entertainments of all kinds. You will find authoritative information regarding the wording of invitations, visiting cards and all social correspondence. The subject of introductions is covered exhaustively, and the etiquette of travel devolves into an interesting discussion of correct form in France, England and other foreign countries. From cover to cover, each book is filled with interesting and extremely valuable information.

GENERAL BAKING COMPANY

You are the Mother of our Bond—

YOU may not have been one of those thousands of women who brought us their freshly-baked home-made bread in order to show us how they wanted their bread to be made—

Perhaps you discovered only recently how pure and homelike Bond Bread is.

Perhaps you may be one of the few who haven't discovered it at all.

But, just the same, you are the mother of our Bond. It is you—the woman who knows good bread—the woman who knows what should go into the dough in order to make good bread—it is you who have inspired the goodness of Bond Bread.

And, above all, it is you—the head of the family—who inspired the Bond which gives Bond Bread its name.

When we say in our Bond, "To whom it may concern," we mean you. When we guarantee that Bond Bread contains only the very purest ingredients—finest flour—whole milk—real lard—granulated sugar—table salt—and fresh compressed yeast—we have your picture before us.

It is more than a cold legal Bond that we give you—it is a personal Bond—a personal pledge—a personal contract by which we obligate ourselves to you.

"They are really suffering from cumulative constipation"

COUNTLESS numbers of people have a daily elimination of waste matter from the system but this elimination is not thorough and sufficient. They depend on a regular weekly purge to rid their intestines of poisons and they never feel the full vigor and zest that come from perfect health.

This whole problem is so important that a well-known medical journal has published a collection of essays on constipation. All the doctors who wrote these essays emphasize the importance of diet. As one physician puts it, "The diet has the most marked influence upon the normal activity of the bowels."

Scientists have now discovered the simple food that helps restore normal conditions, and clears the body of accumulating waste matter—just the familiar little cake of Fleischmann's Yeast!

First came the startling discovery that Fleischmann's Yeast richly supplies the essential water-soluble vitamine. Then it was found that it builds up the body tissues and keeps the body more resistant to disease. In addition, because of its freshness (you get it fresh daily) it helps the intestines in their elimination of poisonous waste matter.

Eat 2 to 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast before or between meals every day. Have it on the table at home and on your desk at the office. Eat it plain, spread on bread or crackers, or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices. You will like its fresh, distinctive flavor and the clean, wholesome taste it leaves in your mouth.

Fleischmann's Yeast is assimilated just like any other familiar food. Only one precaution: if troubled with gas, dissolve the yeast first in half a cup of very hot water. This does not affect the efficacy of the yeast. Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast and get it fresh every day.

Send 4 cents in stamps for the booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." This nominal charge covers cost of handling and mailing. Address THE FLEISCHMANN COMPANY, 701 Washington Street, New York City.

FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST IS A FOOD NOT A MEDICINE

Avoid the use of so-called yeast preparations. Many of these contain only a small amount of yeast—as little as one-tenth of a yeast cake—mixed with drugs or medicines. The familiar tin-foil package with the yellow label is the only form in which you can get Fleischmann's Yeast for Health. Be sure it's Fleischmann's fresh Yeast. Do not be misled by yeast-substitutes.
